'Could it be that she likes him?'

"N-No!"

Hannah shook her head fervently and explained in a hurry, "I... I have no feelings for him."

"That's better be the case! Don't you ever forget that you're supposed to help me, not to fall in love with him for real! Hannah Riggs, listen to me carefully. You'll be my shadow forever, and no one will know about your existence!"

Hannah had her head hung low, nodding, while the light in her gaze diminished gradually.

"Heather, I know that I'll be your shadow forever. I won't compete for anything with you."

"Compete with me?"

That phrase made Heather scoff.

"Do you think you're qualified to do that? You've never been better than me in anything you did ever since we were young! How could you compete with me? Also, the man bought this stupid thing for me! I only gave it to you because I pitied you. Plus, you need to deal with him in my place. Wear this, so he doesn't get suspicious."
