Hannah immediately turned around to disappear from her sight as if she was relieved.

Heather withdrew her gaze with impatience, but something seemed to shine through her eyes. She was stunned and looked over to see that Hannah had already trotted away and was about to disappear from her sight.

"Stop right there!"

Heather stood up abruptly as she snapped.

Hannah was rooted to the ground, startled, with her shoulder trembling.

Hannah subconsciously raised her hand and touched her ear as she felt guilty about being stared at... Her heart skipped a beat.
