

My Villainous Wife

Chapter 146 - Hello, Dear Sister

Reluctantly, Alexander left the bathroom and went back to the bedroom after changing into a new shirt.

He walked to the child who was still crying as if she suffered a grievance for being left out by her new parents.

"Wah!" She continued to wail and tried to get down the bed. But because the bed was slightly erected higher than half of her height, it would be somewhat dangerous if she fell.

Hence, Alexander who had quick reflexes dove forward to catch her in time.

"Remind me to buy a crib to keep you from falling again," Alexander muttered as his heart beats faster after the child almost fell headfirst.

Feeling Little Koala struggling in his arms, he said again, "Maybe, I'll buy you a rope and pacifier to keep you from disturbing us again."

With this in mind, he became determined to do anything to keep the child from disturbing him and his wife again. However, he remembered that it would be considered child abuse if he continued with his plans and decided to forget it.

Alexander carried the child back to the bed and let her sleep in his arms.

Yan Xiaoran stepped out of her car. After changing into a new dress, she decided to leave their room to proceed with her plans for that day.

Delaying things would do her no good if she missed the chance to meet the people she wanted to see for that day.

"Miss, you can't enter this place without an ID and reason for your visit." A man in a gray uniform said. His black cap on top of his head tilted slightly on the side.

Yan Xiaoran smiled and pulled out her ID card, showing it to the guard and said, "I'm here to visit a family."

The man nodded his head and cocked his chin towards the logbook on the counter, "Write your contact information, time, and reason for the visit. As well as the name of the family who you wanted to visit."

Yan Xiaoran patiently and slowly did as she was told like a normal person who came to visit the prison to see their family who was sent there.

After she was done writing, the man who turned out to be the police on duty that night looked over what was written on the logbook and nodded his head. "Wait here for a minute. I'll tell my colleague to get your sister."

"Thank you, Officer!" Yan Xiaoran smiled again and waited for him to return.

She didn't feel anything when the officer mentioned what she had called Zhao Shuxin in the logbook. In the paper, she wrote that woman as her sister. But she wasn't the only reason why Yan Xiaoran bothered to take a trip to Chang Le prison. The other reason was to see her mother as well.

"Miss Yan, come with me!" The officer who left returned and opened the door towards the visitation room.

Yan Xiaoran followed the officer obediently and felt nostalgic about being dragged to the prison. But the only difference between then and now was that she was no longer cuffed to be locked inside and accused of a crime she never did. She was now a free and vengeful woman who wanted to see the people who made her life miserable before leaving her past behind.

"Officer! Who is this person who wanted to meet me?" Zhao Shuxin asked the officer who stood on the other side. A glass separated the room into two spaces thus, she was unable to break out of that place even she wanted to.

The officer looked at her boredly and said, "I don't know who she is. I didn't ask either."

The officer no longer cared who came to visit the prisoners. For as long as they came to only visit and nothing else, there shouldn't be any problem. Besides, the front desk was already doing their task of taking information out there so why would he even bother.

Zhao Shuxin glared at the officer who couldn't even spare her a glance. He was completely treating her like she wasn't even worth his time!

In her past life, Zhao Shuxin knew that look so familiarly that she gnawed her nails. Her perfectly manicured nails already broke from her struggles last night when the media came ambushing them from all sides.

After being escorted out from that police station, Zhao Shuxin and Yu Jin Yan were brought to Chang Le prison. Naturally, they fought and beat up the officers who escorted them, threatening them but the more they struggled, the more offenses they created in their names.

Besides, the evidence that was handed to the court as well as being implicated by the Zhao family's case and trying to escape from being convicted, they were far more eligible to be kept inside the prison.

Just spending one night inside the prison, Zhao Shuxin lost all her elegance and class. She looked like an ordinary person who had gone mad for days.

But how could she not go mad with what she had experienced so far? Her life turned for worst in just one day after her family's destruction. Her husband didn't even appear before her eyes.

Speaking of her husband, Luo Jin must have already heard of what happened to her family and her. So, why wasn't he here?

Could it be that he was silently and secretly thinking of a plan to get her out of here? With that thought, Zhao Shuxin smiled hopefully. She couldn't wait for her husband to appear and save her from this mess. They were still husband and wife despite everything that has happened these past few days. He will never give her up.

As Zhao Shuxin continued to smile, she suddenly couldn't do it anymore as the door on the other side of the room opened and a pair of white heeled shoes stepped in.

Following the expensive shoes, a knee-length black dress soon followed before an extremely familiar face that she had seen and met not too long ago appeared before her eyes.

Then, that black dressed lady said with a sweet smile on her face, "Hello, dear sister."
