My Vampire System Chapter 721: Solving the issue

“Hey who’s that?” A student asked.

“I’m not sure, but he just sliced off a vampire knight arm, he has to at least be another vampire knight, right?”

“That’s Leo, the new tenth vampire knight.” Another student said proudly. “Did you not here about his introduction event?”

Leo had briefly shown up at Fex’s execution, but he hadn’t made much of an impact or impression, and the people who watched what was happening that day, were far too focused on other things to even notice Leo.

However, what was memorable was when Leo had been announced as a vampire knight. That day, anyone who disagreed with him about becoming a vampire knight, he fought them head on in a duel and he would often slice off their arms in the process.

This news had spread to the other families. It was dubbed a crazy and exaggerated story, but they did not know what Leo looked like that well either. Those in the tenth of course remembered who Leo was, and that’s why they were proudly telling others that this was their vampire knight.

‘Why does it hurt so much, and how was he able to cut through my arm so easily?!’ Jax thought, as he gripped tightly applying pressure around the wound. Usually, something like this would have healed up by now, but it was still seeping out blood.

Looking up at Leo, filled him with rage, an unknown person from the tenth family, the lowest of the families had chopped off his arm. He needed to pay them back. With his other arm, he had surrounded it with his blood like a red wax, and then used the hardening skill. This time, he wouldn’t let a silly beast sword harm him.

Knowing the intent behind his attack, Leo could tell this strike was going in for the kill, so Leo was ready to retaliate.

“If you plan to take my life, then I am allowed to take yours.” Leo replied, slashing his sword vertically. It didn’t manage to reach Jax for it was stopped as sparks flew up in the air and the attack had hit another blade.

A two handed long blade but something was different about it. If it was an ordinary blade with as much power as Leo had put in, it would have sliced right through. Looking at the man holding the two handed sword he noticed that the hilt of the sword where his hands were wrapped around, was covered in blood.

From his new sensitive nose he could tell it wasn’t just any blood, but it was human blood.

Going upward from the hilt of the blade, the red energy could be seen down the centre line of the sword.

‘Is this one of those blood weapon’s the vampires have?’ Leo thought.

“Put down your sword, and stop attacking at once.” Tela said.

Tela was the vampire knight who was wielding the blood weapon. An older knight who worked for the Seventh family, the dawn family. He was even older than the current leader but that still didn’t stop him from doing his duties, and he was quite popular between the other knights as well.

Looking around, Leo could see that four other vampire knights including Tela had surrounded him, and one of them was Silver. She had wrapped her red string around Leo’s bicep before his strike had hit Tela’s sword, weakening the power.

“Leo, listen to him, we don’t want this to turn into a serious matter, not while everyone is still alive and well.” Silver explained.

Complying, Leo put his sword away. Even he wasn't sure if he could take on this many vampire knights. The blood weapons were a big variable and he was unsure how many vampires carried them.

Not even all vampire leaders had a blood weapon.

Tela, when putting down his sword could feel his hands were numb.

'How can a human turned vampire be so strong?'

"I'm sorry, maybe I was mistaken, but I have been told that my duty as a vampire knight is to protect those in my family." Leo explained. "I couldn't just stand idly by while he was hitting one of my own."

What Leo said made some sense, but that would only be true if Erin was somebody. They could understand his actions if he was trying to protect someone important, but not just a simple vampire who worked for the tenth.

"Leo, but you attacked another vampire knight." Silver said in a soft tone, trying to express what type of situation he was in.

"Even more reason why he shouldn't have acted so unreasonably. Tell me, should he not be punished for hitting an innocent person, someone who isn't even an adult yet. In my eyes, I can see the real person who should be punished."

"Innocent!" Jax shouted, while still holding his severed arm. The end of it was throbbing as it tried to regrow.

'That blade is not a normal blade, has it been made with fairy blood?' Jax thought.

"I am innocent, you didn't even listen to what I had to say!" Erin shouted back.

This was a troublesome matter, the situation had calmed down a bit, and while Leo had gone over to Erin to talk to her, the other vampire knights were talking trying to solve the situation.

Honestly, they didn't want a matter like this to go up to the council if there wasn't the need for it. The problem was the people involved. To use the influence skill on Nicu they would need the permission of the first leader Bryce, and it was unlikely they would get that. As for it to be used on Erin, they would need Quinn's permission, or at least the person acting as leader currently.

That person was Leo. Silver had brought up that this was just not possible as Leo didn't have a strong enough influence skill to make her submit, and she also mentioned if anyone else tried, it would be against the rules.

Finally, Jax's arm had healed to the point where the wound had at least healed up and he decided to speak his mind.

"There is no need for this to go to the castle, we just need to know who is lying."

"There is a simple way to find out that girl is lying." Jax replied. "She said she was the one who killed the bloodsucker, something even the teachers failed to beat as well as all the other decedents. Apart from Nicu. I say let the two of them fight. Let's catch her for her lies, and she should be punished for it."

Silver was wondering if this was really a good idea and if it would even solve anything, how was showing one strength proof if they were the killer or not, but there was a little idea to his madness. He felt if he could prove that Erin was a liar with this, then maybe the others would feel like she was lying about everything.

Still wondering what to do, Jax had already walked out to the others and made the suggestion.

"So you say that Nicu was quaking in his boots, that you were really the one who defeated the bloodsucker? Then prove it, prove your strength by defeating Nicu in front of everyone here."

Getting away from Leo, Erin pulled out her blade.

"Gladly."

My Vampire System Chapter 722: The smug tenth

It had finally come to this. When Nicu had come up with his lie, he never thought this would be the result. It looked like Erin was already gearing up, ready for a fight, and Jax was giving him some type of look. As if he wanted him to teach her a lesson.

'This isn't the same, this isn't the same as in the forest.' Nicu thought. He had to tell himself this, as he was still a little shaky from what had happened before. He clenched his fist and started to walk to the centre of the hall.

The students had already cleared an area giving the two of them a place to fight.

'I've fought sparring matches before, this isn't some beast that's trying to kill me like the Bloodsucker, and I'm a descendant, I should have more skills than her.'

While Nicu was in shock back at the forest, he did not see how Erin was able to kill the bloodsucker, nor how strong the bloodsucker actually was. In his mind, he too would have been able to kill the bloodsucker if he had a fair chance against one.

Judging by both of their upbringing and his blood being more pure coming directly from the first family. Nicu thought he would win this, the only worry he had was the beast weapon she used. He was sure that the weapon was the reason for her beating him on the practical test and probably why she had killed the bloodsucker.

Cheers coming from the descendants erupted when Nicu went to the centre ready for a duel, on Erin's side, surprisingly there were a few supporting her other than her friends, and they looked to be all from the tenth family.

No longer were they as shy as they once were or suppressed, they felt confident knowing Leo would be there to strike anyone who would try to harm them in front of him.

"If it gets too dangerous, I will be stopping this silly fight immediately." Silver said, and Tela agreed.

The two of them stood closest to the two and would be watching their every move ready to interfere at any time. While the other vampire knights stood off to the side to deflect any oncoming attacks.

Nicu was the first to charge in, throwing out blood swipes, two of them either side of Erin and then one straight down the middle so she had no chance to dodge.

“You don’t even care about hurting others, do you?” Erin said.

The two to her side were timed, so when the attack was blocked by the knights from hitting the crowd, the third strike would already be ready to hit her, but taking out her blade she simply slashed through the attack, not even using any of her own blood aura.

‘I have to remain calm, I can’t get too agitated otherwise it might happen again.’ Erin thought. ‘And I need to finish this quickly.’

A flurry of blood swipes continued, and Erin was avoiding them all, not even using her blade but just moving out of the way of the attack. Erin wasn’t moving very fast so the onlookers were confused, and that’s when they noticed she was moving just as Nicu was making his movements.

This was possible because of two things, first was Leo’s ability, however, just because someone had this ability didn’t mean everyone could avoid attacks like so.

She had the fighting experience and had trained constantly with Leo. Before becoming a vampire she was already a skilled warrior, but she had been in far too many dangerous situations later.. Compared to those at Pure, Arthur and Leo, these attacks were deadly slow.

“Blood rise!” Nicu shouted, cutting his own hand and controlling it before it dropped to the ground, forming it about in the air. This attack was similar to a blood swipe but was more flexible and it looked like Nicu could move it at will.

“I knew he was going easy on her, being able to use blood control at such a young age. He is talent we all need.” Jax said.

Although she wasn't able to avoid this attack, just like with the first blood swipe, using her sword she was able to cut through it. It was now clear to everyone that when comparing the two attacks, Erin's was stronger.

Blood attacks would not work on her, so Nicu went for a different strategy moving in at a great speed, he went to punch her in the stomach but with the guard of the sword, Erin had blocked the attack.

"That's not what I was going for." Using all his strength, he hit the but off the sword knocking it out of her hand falling to the floor.

"Without your sword, you're useless." Nicu said, now at close range he went to punch her again, but she punched his hand up with a greater force and then hit him back in the chest making him fall to the floor.

When Nicu went to get up, the blade from the floor was already pointing at his neck.

"You would be dead if it wasn't for me back at the forest, and this is how you repay me?" Erin asked.

At that moment, having realised he had lost the fight to a vampire, and through Erin's words it had all hit him. He started to break down in tears.

"I'm sorry," Nicu cried. "I lied, she wasn't the one who killed them, I did. But...but...it was an accident. The blood sucker pulled them in front of my attack."

Nicu continued to sob and all the students looking at him realised something seeing this scene, Nicu was still a child, younger than all of them, because of his skill they were treating him like an adult.

"I hope that has satisfied you," Leo said.

"Fine, she can leave, but I will need to interrogate further into this." Jax replied.

'That sword something has to be up with that sword.'

They probably could have pushed further, Leo could have asked for more, but he thought it was best to leave it as it was. As Silver had said before, no problems had been caused and everything was fixed, there was no need to make more problems and an enemy.

The others and the tenth family finally had something to be smug about, one of their own had defeated one of the strongest direct descendants. Soon they would no longer be called a weak family they felt.

Then, word back from the castle had been received and Silver as the current figure of the school had made an announcement.

“While we teachers can’t guarantee you protection in the school, a decision has been made to suspend school for the time being. All students should head back with their vampire knight and to their respective families. Once we believe it is safe for you all. Then school will reopen once again.”

At that moment, standing in front of the tenth gate, was a hooded man. It was the border between the pooling area and those that lived in the inner area of the tenth family.

My Vampire System Chapter 723: Living with a Queen

After the order was made, the students started to return back to the tenth castle. There weren’t many students in the tenth family attending the school. There were ten and then also Erin and the rest, making a total of fourteen students.

All of them followed Leo and couldn’t stop talking about not only Leo’s crazy actions but Eirn’s great and unexpected achievement as well.

“Looks like they have some new person to admire,” Amy said giggling to herself.

She could see that Erin was hearing all of it, and didn't know how to take it. The words were making her lose focus, and her usual closing eye routine she did for training, she was unable to do. Any second now it seemed like she would snap at the students who were gawking at her, in fact, one of the kids that tried to talk to her, she had already threatened to shove her blade right through his backside if he didn't get away.

Once in the pooling area, those students continued to follow Leo, this was because they would be staying at the main castle with him. The reason for the attack on the students was unclear, but they could only guess they were after something or someone, so they wanted to give them more protection by allowing them to stay in the castle.

The parents wouldn't have had this time with them anyway, as they would have been staying at the school apartments. The kids had just been made aware of this, as they thought they would be staying in the inner castle area.

"You mean we're going to be staying with the Queen, maybe I should try talking to her?" A student said.

"Are you crazy, didn't you hear what she said to Jake, the Queen's better off being one of those beauties you just stare at from afar," Another replied.

Once again hearing this, Erin's hand was shaking. On the journey here the students continued to talk amongst themselves and had come up with a nickname for her, Queen.

She did not like this one bit.

"Don't worry about them," Amy said, placing her hand gently on her shoulder. "Boy's will be boys, and some girls would love this type of attention."

"And you're one of them," Xander commented, receiving a kick to his leg right after.

"You are very pretty though." Timmy said in a gentle voice.

When Timmy said these words, Erin didn't feel any anger, and instead went to rub the top of his head. She saw him as a little cute brother.

"Queen we think you're pretty too!"

"Yeah, you're the best, rub my head please!"

"The Queen should treat all her followers equally, and rub all our heads." The boys nodded in agreement.

Passing the inner gates, there was nothing out of the ordinary. Leo was scanning with his ability and the guards were fine, and so were all the houses in the inner area, which was a relief for him.

When entering the castle, the twenty five castle vampires went and showed the students to their rooms. Usually the vampires that lived in the castle would be related to the vampire leader in some way, but the tenth family didn't have many descendants and according to the rest, Vincent had none. For the students, it was the first time they had ever stepped into the castle, and was staying here.

They thought they would never see such a thing, and it only confirmed that they wanted to work for the tenth family even more.

"It's good that you have done this," Edward said, looking at the smiles on the students' faces. "The other leaders have only let the students enter the inner castle area to protect them. Unless they're part of the family, they won't let them into the castle, you have given these guys hope."

Although Leo didn't care for any of the vampire politics and ways, he was just doing what he thought felt right. He had always felt that way, and it was the same with a certain kid he had chosen to follow.

"I heard you did a good job as well Timmy, you have become a brave vampire that will soon take my position," Edward complimented.

Timmy was all smiles, his grin was so wide it looked like it would fall off his face. He was scared as well when he saw the bloodsuckers, but he kept thinking back to last time at Fex's execution. He couldn't help due to how weak he was, and this time he could. This was what had given him courage.

Suddenly, there was a change in attitude from a certain someone, who had gone down to his knees, and placed his head on the floor.

"Master knight Edward, after what happened, I have seen the wrong in my ways, and I wish for you to teach me your ability. If you can take me on as your disciple, I will work harder than anyone you have ever seen before."

"Lift up your head boy." Edward said, "The only person you should bow down to like that, is either the king, or the family leader and I don't see any of them here. Of course I'll teach you. But it won't be easy. Timmy has natural talent in my ability so let's see how you do."

Things had calmed down for a couple of days, with no more incidents happening. Leo and Edward would remain in the castle, not going out like last time, afraid that there could be another attack behind their back.

The Council themselves had yet to make any moves as they had no clue where the Rowa and his people were located. They had decided on two things, either find out the reason for the attack, or find out who the leak was.

If they were watching carefully enough, then sooner or later the said person who was helping them would slip up, and they could get all the information they needed. But there were no leaks so far. They expected as much, since the attack was only a couple of days ago for not much to happen.

As for Nicu, there was no news of what his punishment was. Either Jax didn't really submit the report or Bryce was able to sweep the whole matter under the rug. Still, once they confirmed the truth of what Nicu had done, he wouldn't have gotten much of a punishment anyway.

If it was truly an accident it was understandable, the only thing he would have been punished for was lying to a vampire knight, and trying to pin the blame on somebody else, but the person getting pinned on wasn't exactly popular so the second part of his crimes always seemed to have no light shed on it.

While in the castle, Erin was worried about a major thing, and that was how she was different to the others and why Quinn had told her to keep it a secret, but it seemed like even he didn't know at the time.

This led her to speak out to the one and only other person she felt like she could trust a hundred percent, Leo.

She had explained to him what she felt, and how the colour of her aura was different.

"Well, of course I knew all along, we share the same ability, but when it came to these matters I trusted Quinn with his thinking." Leo said. "For all of us humans, it's difficult and we do not understand what is going on. However, I understand how you feel and you wish to know what you are. When I get time I will try my best to ask about what the dhampirs are and what is so worrying about them."

"Thank you master." Erin said.

Suddenly, Leo's face took a serious turn, he turned his head and was looking in the direction of the front of the castle.

"What's wrong?" Erin asked, concerned..

"That man from the forest, he's here."

Standing inside the inner castle area, was a regular sized man, the guards that were meant to be there, were no longer there. Slowly his body started to change, as he grew in size becoming a giant, ripping through the clothes he wore, his muscles bulging and his hair falling to the ground.

Finally his transformation had finished, and he was now the bloodsucker known as Rowa.

"If there is an important mission, it's always best to do it yourself."

My Vampire System Chapter 724: The tenth vampires fall

It was strange at first for Leo, as he could hardly sense anything. When people or things were further away, it was hard for him to feel the strength or see the certain creatures' aura. This was unless he was trying to look for it. This would also limit the range as he tried to look further. But even then, if the force was weak he was unlikely to be able to sense it.

Which was what had shocked him even more. His abilities should have allowed him to sense only those in the castle, yet though the castle walls, out far, he could sense a strong energy and it was the same as what was in the forest.

'He came straight to the tenth castle, so they really are after something from the tenth family? Or someone wants to get rid of us?' Leo thought while looking at Erin.

"Tell Edward to gather the vampires and inform the Council immediately, tell them that the bloodsucker that was in the forest has arrived, they will understand. Then we shall all meet up in the reception of the castle, hurry!"

Erin hadn't seen Leo so panicked before, so rather than asking questions about what was going on, she rushed off to gather the others and did as she was told.

Walking out, down to the bottom floor, Leo was trying his hardest to concentrate on the energy. There were only two times he had felt a power similar to this one that worried him.

Once, when he was underground to rescue the kids, later the energy was found to belong to Arthur, the other energy the vampire king himself and now this one.

'Is he as strong as Arthur?' Leo thought. 'No, he's weaker, but he's still strong.'

Erin had gone to Edward to inform him of what the whole commotion was about. He had a devastated look on his face, and looked like he nearly fell over.

“Now of all times,” Edward replied. “I will inform the rest of the inner castle vampires and the council, you, gather the rest of the students and head for the reception area as well.”

“Wait, you’re going to take them all outside?” Erin asked. “Isn’t that were the enemy is?”

“Last time, while you were at school, we too were attacked by the bloodsuckers and that was in this very castle. No one should be able to enter the castle so easily. At the front door there is a lock that only so few know the combination to.

“Sure these days, it is left unlocked more often due to the vampires coming in and out, but there were guards stationed that hadn’t seen a thing. I can only guess that there might be people working with these foul creatures, or there is also someone working against us in the castle.

“There’s a good chance that these guys are after the children for some reason based on their past attack. The safest place for everyone right now, is beside me and Leo where we can protect you. Now go!”

Erin didn’t ask a second time and she was off to gather everyone else, storming into their rooms one by one, but she couldn’t help but think, were the bloodsuckers after her? The bloodsuckers had seen her use her strange powers that day, and just maybe, she was the reason why they had returned.

‘It’s happening again, we’re getting attacked, everyone I care about.’ Erin thought, worried that history was just repeating itself with a new enemy, only this time it might be due to her.

Everyone was now in the reception area, their students looked worried while the adult vampires were doing their best to put on a brave face, some even excited that their skills would be put to the test.

Each of them was wearing the advanced tier beast gear which was handed to them for contributing to the tenth family. The students were also handed the intermediate beast armour, which usually would be given piece by piece as they completed more tasks for the family, but this was an emergency matter.

“I’m sure you are aware, but it looks like the Bloodsuckers who refer to themselves as the true vampires have attacked. I have tried to get through to the eighth leader Jill, but she is not receiving communication, which means I can not contact the council at this moment.” Edward explained.

“We don’t know what their aim is, but the most important thing is those beasts are out there in our inner castle area, we don’t know how many they are, how strong their forces are, but the people we wish to protect are out there. I don’t want any of the tenth members to die. Stay close to me and Leo at all times, and follow our orders.”

The kids were shaking, their teeth rattling. They had already seen the bloodsuckers once before, and how strong they were. They thought they were now safe out of the forest and in the castle walls, but now they found out they were about to go face them once again.

Seeing this, Leo stood out in front of all fourteen students.

“The enemy is strong, but so are you. If you are worried about getting hit, stay close to me and I will take the hit instead.”

What Leo was saying sounded ridiculous, how could he guarantee none of the students getting hurt, but for some reason, his words had given them confidence.

Wasting no more time. The small little army left the tenth castle and ventured into the inner castle living areas. The first thing that they noticed was it was quiet. They were meant to be under attack and they were sure they would hear screams.

“Can you sense anything Leo?” Erin asked.

“For now I can only sense their leader who is staying by the gates. Maybe he is staying there to stop any reinforcements from coming in.” Leo replied.

Soon a little while later, they noticed that it was far too quiet. Even if the place was being attacked, there would be some vampires out in the streets, talking and more, but there was none of that. That’s when one of the vampires spotted a dead body in the street.

Soon walking, they spotted more dead bodies. Leo could sense the aura left behind by the attacker but the tracks were going all over the place, trails could be seen left and right. It was clear there was more than one enemy, and that’s when he could see multiple Aura trails heading inside the buildings.

The soldiers got right to it. The group split off into two but still stayed close together. Leo led the students and Edward the castle vampires. When entering the house, Leo made the students stay outside, for he could guess what had happened.

After checking every household in the area and reporting back with the other team, Leo’s fears were confirmed. Somehow without causing an alarm, or any one of them noticing, every vampire in the tenth households was killed.

If this was the case for all the households, then that would be nearly half the vampires belonging to the tenth family. Many vampires had been invited to live in the inner castle area from the tenth family, out of kindness and support, rather than keeping them in the open pooling area. The conditions were better and so were the houses.

If they were empty anyway, then they saw no harm with them being used.

“How, my family, noo!” A student started to cry at the top of their lungs.

It set off a chain reaction, as the students realised there was a good possibility that their parents had been killed. The ones that lived in the castle, some of their families worked in the castle as servants and were safe, but there were a few that had extended family that lived in the inner area. They also had mixed emotions. Some showing anger, other sadness and regret.

Some of the students that were also greatly affected, were Erin’s group. All of their families had just moved into the inner circle area, and although they hadn’t checked their homes yet, they feared the worst.

“Mother, father!” Xander cried, along with Timmy and Amy.

“Why, why did this happen to us?” A vampire asked.

“We still don’t know what’s happening, this could be happening to the whole settlement.” Edward replied. “After all, I still can’t get through to Jill.”

Although Edward wasn’t so sure about that, Jill was one of the vampires that had a grudge against the tenth family due to what had happened at the execution, there was a good chance she was just ignoring Edward’s call.

“Everyone, pick up your weapons.” Leo said, drawing his blade. “Your friends and families might be dead but you still live, and the enemy still lives. You want revenge right? Well ,now is your chance.”

Coming right at them, was a small army of blood suckers, the battle had begun.

My Vampire System Chapter 725: Down to the last few

The vampires and students were a little struck at what they were seeing. They knew that there was a high chance that they would be facing bloodsuckers, however, they never knew how many. Coming towards them, it looked like an army of bloodsucking crazy beasts were on their way.

Some were running straight down the street, while others were using their hard claws to climb the side of buildings, and few were running on the top of rooftops.

“Stay close together!” Edward said. “Remember they can’t use blood attacks, our range is our advantage.”

“How many of them are there?” Amy asked, nervous herself wondering if they could even survive such an attack.

“I’m not sure, they’re moving fast, maybe thirty?” Erin replied.

“Fifty is closer.” Leo said.

There was no point hiding the enemy's true numbers; it would do nothing for them. On their side, twenty four vampires, two vampire knights and fourteen students. It wasn't a fair fight at all.

The vampires had gotten in a row standing in front of the students, they stayed strong in their beast armour.

"What are you doing, we can fight as well!" Erin complained.

"We never brought you students out to fight in the first place," said Edward. "We brought you out because we thought you would be safer with us."

Edward nodded towards the two boys and they started to move.

Xander and Timmy's bodies were changing slightly. Timmy was faster and had formed mist over more than half the students, while Xander finally had gotten a hang of what he was trying to do, and covered the remaining students in a mist.

As he promised, he worked harder than any student Edward had seen and, he could already use the mist ability, still there was a lot to learn.

"Erin, protect them," Leo said.

The vampires in a line were waiting for Edward's orders and then when the bloodsuckers were close enough, Edward shouted the signal. He released a blood swipe out from his hands. The rest followed and multiple lines of red aura could be seen ripping through the streets.

There were too many for all the bloodsuckers to avoid. The bloodsuckers responded wildly, as some pushed each other over. They tried jumping to the side, getting on the rooftops, but the attacks had hit their legs and arms causing some of them to fall onto the ground.

"Keep firing, don't let them get close!" Edward said.

While some bloodsuckers were getting injured. They saw someone break formation and start to run towards the street, that's when they recognised it was Leo.

"We might hit him?" One of the vampires said concerned.

"Don't worry about him and keep attacking!" Edward said.

Out on the field, Leo was able to avoid each of the strikes coming from behind as if he had eyes on the back of his head, and those bloodsuckers who were injured, he would slash down with his sword one by one. Getting rid of their numbers as they were now, would be a big blow to the enemy.

However, he knew that this was only to help them in the long battle, as soon, the bloodsuckers had reached the vampire's position. The ranged battle had become a physical one.

The bloodsuckers barged their way through crashing into the enemy and digging their strong claws into the armour. Some of the vampires screamed and if it wasn't for the beast gear they would be dead by now.

Still, it was strange as the target of the bloodsuckers never seemed to be the vampires themselves. Their eyes would wonder and they would constantly be looking ahead at the mist.

'They are after one of the students,' Leo thought.

Hurrying, he slashed the few bloodsuckers that were rolling about on the floor and went back to help.

"I can't really see through this fog, what's happening?" Someone asked.

"Just stay here and we'll be safe." Another replied.

"He's right, we have to trust them," Said Amy.

The group of students were a little further back from the fighting force, but still close enough to hear every detail of what was going on. They heard screams, snarls, shouts of pain and cursing. Some of the students were thankful they couldn't see what was going on outside.

"Everyone ready!" Erin suddenly said. Which came as shock to the others, did it mean they were about to be attacked?

She knew what was happening outside, and she didn't really want to tell the others either. The vampires had put up a great fight killing many bloodsuckers in the process, but in the end they were too many, and they were stronger and faster than the vampires.

The second it became a close ranged fight, they were at the disadvantage.

'I won't let them die?' Erin thought, gritting her teeth.

The only other two that were aware of what had happened outside, was Xander and Timmy. Seeing the scene had even caused them to shiver, and breaking their concentration the mist started to disappear, revealing the horrifying scene in the street.

That's when they saw it, the vampires, were only down two a couple along with Edward and Leo a little behind them. While the bloodsuckers still had half their size left. Nearly all the vampires were dead.

"No! We're going to die!" A student screamed.

With so little vampires holding the line, the bloodsuckers had started to charge forward at the students and leapt through the air, but before it could reach out, it's body was sliced in half.

Even though Leo was far away, he had performed a Qi mixed attack with blood aura to kill the beasts and as soon as it sliced through the body, the red aura disappeared in seconds not continued to move forward.

'Has he learnt blood control already?' Edward thought seeing this, still distracting a couple of the bloodsuckers.

Rushing to their side, Leo was ready to protect them all.

“Don’t move,” Leo said. “If you move it makes it harder for me to protect you.”

Things weren’t looking the best, but Erin was still confident. They had Leo and Edward, even herself, and she felt they should be enough to get rid of the remaining forces. Whether they could do so protecting all the other students was a different story.

However, the bloodsuckers didn’t move forward and instead were looking back down the street. As if their attention was on something else.

“He’s here, the big boss has finally arrived,” Leo said.

Bloodsuckers were generally already a little bigger than normal human beings, and now, one twice the size could be seen walking calmly down the street.

“I’m surprised you were able to kill this many,” Rowa said. “I was told that the tenth family was a weak family. Looks like their information was wrong and there isn’t only one special person among you all.”

Leo knew that they would run into this man eventually, but he didn’t predict how strong the bloodsuckers would be, or the size of their force. The bloodsuckers attacking them now were stronger and faster than those that had attacked them before.

So his predictions needed to change, just going up against Rowa alone. Leo felt that him and Edward needed to work together.

“Ahh!” A student screamed from behind. Leo quickly threw out another blood swipe, but this time the blood sucker jumped back avoiding the slash.

“Stay with them, protect the kids!” Edward shouted. “I will deal with him, don’t worry about me, I am a vampire knight for a reason. When you’ve finished dealing with them, we will get rid of this guy as well.”

Leo was wondering what to do, he sensed Erin's energy as well as the other students. Judging by their strength, it was impossible for them to come out alive without his help.

'He stood by the gate for so long. Perhaps he was worried about reinforcements from the other families. Did he come out because he could tell his people were dying. Then maybe there is still a chance.' Leo thought Readjusting his position on the sword, Leo was ready.

"I will be helping you soon, right after I kill all these bloodsuckers."

Closing his eyes he focused on his chest, and the strange warm energy was ready to be brought out. Leo was ready to use his soul weapon.

My Vampire System Chapter 726: A blind man's soul

While the students were stuck in the mist, all of the vampires were fighting for their lives against the bloodsuckers. They had tried their best, using everything they could, and they were thankful that they were even able to last this long.

Countless times they would have died, been too slow, or overpowered if it wasn't for the beast armour. They felt that the other vampires were fools for mocking things that could improve their ability like this, and in the future they may come to regret not using such tools.

However, despite everything, they were still no match and they could tell when they started fighting. Their legs were shaking, as they were coming to terms with accepting their death.

"We won't run," An older vampire said by the name of Naj. "We can't run, I know all of you must be scared like me. But there's a reason I haven't turned and ran yet. My family is already dead, but those kids are still young and alive. Our future, the tenths family future now lies in their hands. And I will continue to fight until my last breath!"

Those that had thought about running away, felt a little disgusted with themselves. If they ran then what life would they even be living? Could they even live with themselves if they were still alive.

Naj's words had given the vampires the will they needed to continue on. They did want to run away, but the kids behind them were pushing them on, so they continued to fight, fight and fight until eventually there was only one left. The bloodsucker had badly damaged and ruptured a lot of Naj's internal organs. It was beyond the point of healing as he laid there on the floor.

He could see the blood suckers he had tried to keep so far behind go ahead of him, and he regretted that he didn't train harder. Reaching out his hand he wished to fight even more.

"Don't worry, I will protect them." Said Leo, as he went off throwing out his sword infused blood swipe, killing the front runner of the bloodsuckers.

"Protect our future," Naj said with a smile. Being the last of the castle vampires to die. Now the only adult vampires still left alive were Leo and Edward, but Edward had his own mammoth of a task to deal with.

Right now he was standing in front of the giant bloodsucker, Rowa.

"Ah Edward, you have lived for so long waiting for Vincent to return, did he ever come back?" Rowa asked. "It was a shame, I liked that guy, he even had the guts to leave this place. I respect him more than any of the vampires at that council table. It would be a shame if I have to kill you."

"Then why are you killing and attacking us?" Edward asked.

Rowa started to laugh, and the power felt so great in his laugh alone, it seemed like it was causing Edward to step back a little.

"You might be right, how about this, you give me the girl and I will leave things as it is, after all, that's the only reason why I'm here," Rowa said.

Edward was a little confused. There were a few girl students, but why would he want a girl? However, his loud voice made it so both Erin and Leo had heard and they very well could guess who they meant.

'So it really is my fault, if I give myself up now, will everyone live?' Erin thought.

But before she could even say anything, Edward had started to turn and change the area around him into a mist.

"Whatever the reason, I can not comply, after all, I have to pay you back for killing all of our family members." Edward said as his whole body disappeared into the mist.

Hearing this, Erin regained her own composure, giving herself up wouldn't bring back those that were dead.

"You couldn't beat me when I was a leader, what makes you think you can beat me now?" Rowa asked, but Edward was never planning to beat Rowa, he was just buying time for someone else.

Knowing there was no more time to waste, Leo had no choice but to activate his soul weapon. Reaching within himself, he let the warm energy out. With his blade held in one hand, his other seemed to be covered in something.

To Erin, the only change she noticed with her ability was his aura seemed to be more concentrated in his left hand.

"What's that covering his hand?" Amy asked.

"You can see that?" That's when Erin realized that the aura was actually visible without using her ability, the whole of his left hand was covered in the red vampire aura, but in a layer underneath the normal yellow color humans had used.

One of the blood suckers went to grab one of the students and Leo at the same time struck his blade down, striking its arm off. However, two of the other bloodsuckers were soon on him, both going in for the attack, but only moving his left hand something strange seemed to happen.

The course of the attacks had changed and where they were originally aiming, their attack was hitting another place. They couldn't stop this momentum and the two bloodsuckers ended up impaling each other in the stomach. Turning around, Leo swung his blade, slicing both of their heads off.

"What was that?" Amy asked. "Was it telekinesis?"

It certainly looked that way, but Erin knew there was more to it. Two more bloodsuckers were going for the other students, showing his hand, soon one of their movements slowed down to almost a halt. Then jumping in, Leo struck the one in front, killing each of the bloodsuckers with one hit.

Still, this time he was hit by the bloodsucker on his side, but the claws just bounced off his beast armour. Currently, Leo wasn't wearing the best beast armour so something like that shouldn't have happened. Just like the other armours, it should have ripped through it.

The only person that had a clue what was going on was Erin, she could see it. The Aura's of the blood suckers were changing every single time Leo moved his other hand.

Leo's soul weapon was called aura manipulation. It was an enhancement type ability that allowed him to alter other people's aura. He could remove the aura from a strike, making it powerless, making one feel like they no longer had power going to their legs. And could redirect and change the direction of one's aura, changing the path of the attack.

The problem was, the stronger the enemy Leo used this skill on, the more of the enemy's aura he would have to manipulate and it would only tire him out quicker.

This was why even though Leo was a vampire with great stamina, sweat was running down his forehead.

"I will keep my promise and get rid of all of you!" Leo shouted, as he continued to fight off the remaining blood suckers.

Rowa who was stuck in a mist looked almost bored.

“If you were thinking that the other vampire knight would be able to help you, then think again,” Rowa said. “Those bloodsuckers that are still alive were the top of the top. Candidates to become vampire knights, vampires living in the castle area. Why do you think they were able to kill your castle vampires so easily? I don’t know whether your friend is the lucky one facing all of those, or you are, only having to face me.”

Rowa was doing a lot of talking, but Edward hadn’t said a word. He didn’t want to do anything that would reveal to him where he was.

“Your skills are good, they always have been.” Said Rowa. “I have no clue where you are but it doesn’t matter.”

He stretched back both of his arms, as far as he could, then storing up the energy in them they started to slightly vibrate. Like a spring, both of his hands shot together, clapping them. A deadly loud bang rang out. It was a hundred times louder than a gun going off.

Nonetheless, it had done its job. With a simple clap, Rowa had gotten rid of the annoying mist and Edward’s real body could be seen.

Edward tried to start up his ability again but it was too slow. Punching downward at the top of his head, Rowa used his full power. This caused Edwards’s head to collapse into his ribcage and his body falling to the floor.

“No!!” Timmy cried out. “Edward, Edward!” Timmy continued to shout.

Using her ability Erin could see it... Edward was dead.

All it took was one hit from Rowa. His strength was beyond any current vampire leader.

When Rowa looked up he was surprised at what he could see, twenty five of his elite bloodsuckers had all been killed, and a bald headed blind man was standing in front of the students, huffing and panting.

'Who is this vampire knight, he is as strong as a vampire leader, yet I have never seen him before.' Rowa thought. 'It's a shame he is already spent.'

Placing his blade in the ground, Leo held onto it, holding himself up. He had used his soul weapon for too long and he was now completely out of breath. The bloodsuckers were faster than he thought, but he had kept his promise as not a single student was hurt.

"Erin..." Leo said, taking in huffs of air. "Take everyone and run, I will hold him as long as I can."

After seeing what happened to Edward and seeing what condition Leo was in, Erin didn't think she could beat such a man. She knew she would lose.

'Again, it's all happening again. Everyone's going to die and I can do nothing about it!' Erin thought as she turned around and started running. She then felt her head bang into something sturdy.

"I'm sorry, it looks like I have come too late," a soft old voice said.

When Erin looked up at what or who she had bumped into, it was an unexpected face.

It was the vampire king.

"Nobody interferes, I will be dealing with this matter myself," The king said.

Behind him, ten royal vampires and his two royal knights bowed down.

My Vampire System Chapter 727: The second ability

Seeing the king arrive himself, everyone felt a sense of relief that this would soon all be over. The kids could feel the comfortable, strong energy radiating from him. To them, the king was a sign of power and they could never imagine him losing to anyone.

The students were quickly protected by the royal vampires, and Dwight had even pulled Leo back with them.

'Did he do all this by himself, it looks like my evaluation of his strength was off by quite a bit.' Dwight thought, seeing all the dead bloodsuckers on the floor. 'What worries me more than anything is this might not even be his peak.'

When they knew all the kids were safe, they moved a distance away from the fight so as not to get hurt, but could still see everything with their superior eyesight. With attacks coming from these two strong forces, if a stray was to come at them, not even they could stop it.

"With the king here, it should be over."

"He'll get rid of that giant bloodsucker and get revenge for us." The students started to talk.

Although everyone seemed calm and thought nothing could go wrong, there was a look of concern on both Dwight's and the other royal knight's face. This was because only they knew what the current condition of the king was.

'Please, just don't use too much power.' Dwight thought.

"The king is finally getting involved, I thought you would never leave your castle old man." Rowa said. "Well, it looks like we have just moved from step three all the way to step ten. This was going to happen eventually." Slamming his fist into his hand, each time creating a loud bang.

"Edward!" Timmy continued to cry, he hadn't stopped crying his name since he had seen what had been done to him. That's when Dwight realised that his body was still in range of their attacks. Quickly going in, he grabbed the body and returned to where the others were.

When placing the body on the floor, everyone saw Edward's headless body, though the head wasn't missing, it was just inside of his own chest. He was dead, and there was no coming back from this.

'What will happen to the Tenth family without you Edward?' Dwight thought. 'Now was not the right time for you to leave them.'

The Tenth was already a shambles before, and there were many times where the council had thought about selecting a new leader, but Edward was what held it all together. He knew the ways of the vampires and how the vampires acted, with him gone, who else could take the lead of this fragmented family?

The king took off his grand white robe, dropping it on the floor to reveal a strange armour that was radiating with power. The chest piece was black in colour but the design on it almost looked like a demon face was engraved into the front, and there were two red glowing eyes near the pectoral area.

Underneath the armour he wore a simple white bright shirt, but there were more pieces of armour around his hands and feet. They had a similar design of red and black to match the chest piece.

"The king's armour, passed down from king to king." Rowa said. "It looks like you decided to take this fight seriously, then so will I."

Rowa was the first to act, pushing both his feet off the ground. The power was so strong that the floor beneath him rose up like an explosion. The ground had been flung so forcibly that it destroyed a house behind it.

When Rowa reached the king, he threw out his fist too fast for nearly anyone to keep track of, but Erin and Leo could follow it with their aura. The attack continued moving forward destroying three buildings in front of it from the force of the wind generated.

"How is it possible to have that much power?" Xander asked. "Can the king really beat that thing?"

"Do not doubt the king," Dwight said sternly.

Standing on Rowa's body on top his shoulder was the king himself.

“With such a large body you are very easy to hit, and the biggest weakness of a blood sucker, how weak their vitality is!” Lifting his foot up, the king stomped hard into his shoulder and Rowa’s feet were sunk deep into the ground.

He tried to grab onto the king but he was no longer there, instead he clawed at the back of his knee making him fall on his front. Pulling one of his legs out of the ground, Rowa managed to land a kick on the king, but he had blocked the attack in time raising both his hands.

There was no time for rest between the two of them, as they continued to attack each other, but it was clear that the king was faster, and it looked like his blows were dealing more damage as well. Soon Rowa was covered with cuts and punctures all over his body.

Rowa had managed to hit the king a few times, his speed was also great but each one was blocked. Soon it looked like Rowa life was going to come to an end, there were too many wounds on his body.

Dwight was thankful that so far the king hadn’t used any blood skills, for this was his main concern if he was to get involved in a fight.

Falling to the floor, it appeared that Rowa was done for.

“We will bring you in and find out who has been helping you.” The king said. “You shall suffer for the rest of your days, never getting a day of peace until you tell us who has been helping you.”

But then, something strange started to happen. Rowa’s body started to shrink down, the blood sucker’s features were becoming less prominent and he was now back to looking like a normal vampire.

Apart from the hair, he looked exactly like his old self when he was leader.

“Surprised?” Rowa croaked out. “You thought that once someone turned into a blood sucker through blood addiction, it wasn’t possible to turn back into a regular vampire. This was why you punished us, tried to chase us out, but I knew that one day I would prove you wrong.”

Rowa was expecting the king to be shocked by this revelation, to feel bad for how he had treated all the past vampires, but he just stood there looking at him.

“Come on say something! Think about all the vampires you executed that didn’t need to be killed! I was right, I proved you wrong.”

“Is this why you have decided to return?” The king finally replied. “That isn’t the reason for getting rid of the blood suckers. When you turn into one, you are too far gone for us to change you, the way you think. We already knew it was possible to change your body back. Just like when a vampire is starved from blood, there are ways for it to revert back, of course there would be ways for those addicted.”

Rowa’s hand was now shaking with anger, he didn’t understand. What had he been doing this whole time? Why had he been trying so hard to solve this problem? There was a time he thought that maybe if he returned to the king proving this fact, that he would allow them to return to the vampires, to live side by side with them, but now the king was saying this was never a possibility.

“Why! Why do you reject this part of the vampires so much!” Rowa shouted, as blood continued to pour out from his wounds. The more he moved, the quicker it looked like he would come to his death.

“Because, we must protect the humans,” The king replied. “This is something that not only you, but some of the vampires don’t understand. It is our mission, it was what we were born in this world to do.”

Barely standing on his two wobbly feet, Rowa was still shaking with anger.

“Once I’ve killed you, I’m going to kill all your precious humans as well.”

A strange bubble formed around the whole of Rowa’s body, and nearly in an instant all of his wounds that he had, seemed to be disappearing in front of everyone’s eyes.

“Is he healing himself?” Amy asked. “But he didn’t drink any blood.”

“No, he’s not healing.” Dwight replied. “Rowa used to be the leader of the Second family. They have the ability to reverse time in a small area and right now, he’s making it as if the wounds on his body had never happened yet.”

When all the wounds had finally healed, Rowa started to transform his body into the blood sucker once again.

“I know you’re getting tired old man, I could feel and see your movements getting slower towards the end of the fight.” Rowa said. “You thought the fight was over, and now you will have to beat me all over again, and I will come back no matter how many times it takes to beat you!”

Instead of looking at Rowa, at that moment the king turned towards Dwight.

‘No your majesty please don’t.’ Dwight wanted to call out. He knew why he was looking his way. ‘If you do this, you will die.’

“You are right, if I have to battle you over and over again, I would tire before your ability would run out.” The king said. “Which means I only have one option – to completely over power you and kill you. I will not give you a chance to use your ability again.”

The king’s eyes started to glow red, and his whole body started to shake.

My Vampire System Chapter 728: The king’s power

At first when they looked at the king, they thought they could see him shaking, but that’s when they realised it wasn’t him that was shaking at all, it was them. The strange power the king was activating made everyone’s body start to vibrate slightly and the students, including a few of the royal vampires, fell to the ground. They felt weak and couldn’t take the upsetting feeling they had in their stomach.

“What is going on?” Erin asked, as she too had fallen to the floor, taking a knee. But Leo stood there strong, still pinned up with his sword.

“Listen up,” Dwight said. “You two don’t know much about the vampire world but you are now too involved. There is a reason why some of the leaders are so obsessed with becoming the vampire king. When one becomes king there are two things that get passed on to the next. The first being the armour the king is wearing. It is one of the only two sets of armour in existence that has been purely made out of blood crystals.

“Today we haven’t seen the extent of this armour, due to its power not being activated by any human blood. As for the second thing, it’s a skill passed down that only the king can learn and that skill is what you’re about to witness.”

When saying these words, there was a sharp pain going through Dwight’s heart. With the current king’s strength, using such power could possibly end his life, if it didn’t, it would certainly shorten it.

“Summoning this much power, are you trying to kill your self old man!” Rowa said, even he felt uneasy.

“Rowa, you are strong, stronger than possibly any other vampire I know of...” the king said. Then the image of a certain someone who had returned recently popped into his head. “Let me take that back, you are stronger than any vampire here. You could beat any of the leaders. I can’t go easy on you.”

Lifting his hands from his side, red balls of red liquid had formed, and soon from all the dead blood suckers around, and all the dead vampires in the inner castle area, their blood was floating in the air. Every single last drop of blood had been lifted from the ground and taken directly out of the dead bodies.

“The skill passed down from king to king, absolute blood control.” Dwight said. “When one obtains this skill, they can control the blood in their own body, advancing the vampire’s body beyond what any leader has ever seen. There’s no need for the king to become a blood sucker to match up with Rowa’s speed, for his body has already reached that point.

“But that’s not the only thing the skill can do..”

Rowa charged in once again, at full strength. He was just as fast as he was before. But suddenly at a light speed, all of the blood that was in the air, had moved to where the king was and had formed a giant wall of blood. It looked like there was a waterfall pouring from above.

When Rowa punched the wall of blood, it did nothing, his hand went through it but there was nothing else. Then, a sharp pain could be felt through his whole body and eventually into his back. Turning his head he could see that thousands of blood daggers were floating behind him, stabbing him constantly.

With no choice, he attempted to run through the waterfall of blood but that was his biggest mistake. The blood surrounded him like a tornado, and threw him up in the air. He noticed that from the wounds that had been made, his own blood was working against him, restraining him from doing anything.

He couldn't see anything and had no clue what was happening, looking around all he could see was red blood swirling around. He kicked and punched, nothing was effective.

Finally, the blood had disappeared around him, and he could now see that he had been thrown up fifty meters into the air, he could see the whole city from up high. However, there was something else there that wasn't there before.

It was a giant blade made of blood. It was taller than any of the castles. Turning his head, he could see six more surrounding him.

"Old man, do you really have to go this far!" Rowa shouted. "Do you hate us this much!" Now genuine tears were running down his face and sadness was taking over from the anger. Rowa started to revert back to his regular vampire form.

"Look at me, I am one of you. I served you and you're going to kill me, kill your own kind over them!"

The king had his hands held up to the sky, he said nothing but coughed as his own blood had started to trickle out of his mouth. That too started to float up in the air and join the blood made blades.

Swinging his hands down, all of the giant blood blades swung at the same time. At the same time they had clashed into Rowa's body. When it did, the swords started to crush into each other and a great explosion of blood occurred.

The sight could be seen for miles in the vampire settlement and all of the vampires had witnessed what had just happened.

“Pathetic.” Bryce thought while watching the spectacle from his castle window. “If I was king, I would have never used so much power against a weakling like that.”

“Damn it! Damn it! Damn it!” Another vampire stomped the ground, witnessing Rowa’s death.

“It may have been the end of your life Rowa,” Cindy, the current Second vampire leader said, “But you have affected the vampire world far greater than you know, now it will be the start of a new era.” Saying these words, tears started to fall down her cheeks.

As for the rest of the vampires, they soon found themselves covered in a rainfall of blood. Little droplets fell down like rain and covered everyone’s faces from the explosion. In the sky where Rowa’s body once was, there was nothing. Not a single scrap of flesh or clothing, but somewhere in the rainfall of blood, was his.

The king had since fallen and was laying on the ground.

Dwight, knowing the fight was over rushed over to his majesty’s side. He held him up to check if he was okay, and thankfully there seemed to be faint sights of breathing.

“Tell Cindy to head to the main castle now, we will meet her in his majesty’s room. Your majesty, you have done enough, you have protected the people from the great threat.”

The king shook his head disagreeing with this, he wanted to speak to tell Dwight of the Tenth people that had died and of the future he wouldn’t live to see. Killing Rowa would not put an end to the vampire’s deaths, but he was too weak to speak.

“Don’t worry, I promise we will work harder than ever, we will find which dreaded bastard was working with the blood sucker, and I will personally kill every last one of them!” Dwight said, shaking in anger.

My Vampire System Chapter 729: The fallen king

After the incident with those that called themselves the true form vampires, the Tenth family was in recovery mode. Now standing outside the inner castle, were a few vampires from the royal family who were each as strong as a vampire knight.

They were placed there just in case anything else was to occur. They had realised after the attack that the Tenth family were the only family who were attacked. None of the other vampire families, or areas had been touched.

Even though the supposed leader of the true vampires were dead, they still suspected that there were more blood suckers out there that hadn't joined in with the battle, without a leader, or perhaps now under the control of whoever was helping them before, which was why the guards were placed there.

An investigation was carried out with the main purpose of clarifying a few things. Why was the Tenth family targeted? It would have made sense if it was another family's doing, but not for Rowa to target them since he knew nothing about the recent changes in the vampire council. The second purpose was to find out who had helped them.

The investigation led them to discover a few key things. The guards that were stationed at the Tenth's gate to the inner castle area had been influenced to not raise an alarm. It was assumed this was how the blood suckers were able to infiltrate the Tenth area without anyone knowing and killing those that were inside.

It was hard to tell whether it was a vampire from one of the other vampire families or not after the revelation that Rowa was able to turn back to his regular state and use his powers as per usual. As a leader, he would have easily been able to influence them and anyone on the way who would have seen anything.

Still, Dwight was keeping to his word and he wasn't letting any leaf go unturned in his thorough investigation. It would take some time, the problem was he felt like time was something they didn't have.

At the Tenth castle, they were struggling without Edward, there was no support sent from the council and on top of this, the king wasn't in a position to help them much either with the investigation. All the trust that they had built up with the vampires had disappeared in one moment.

Since the other families were full, vampires who wished to move families weren't able to, but no longer did anyone want to move into the inner castle area where so many had died. In their minds, the Tenth leaders and vampire knights failed to protect them and the one thing that put them altogether was Edward.

The only ones that had remained in the inner castle area were staying at the castle itself, and those were the students that had survived. They saw what happened first hand, they could tell that if Rowa had attacked any of the other castle areas it would have been the same result.

It was why the king had to use so much power. Also where else could they go? Their families had been slaughtered and now there was nothing else they could do. What stood out in their minds though most were the vampires that had fought to protect them from the blood suckers.

That memory was ingrained in their minds, when they fought, they fought as the Tenth family vampires and the students wanted to do the same, not letting their blood be split in vain.

With Edward gone and wishing to help Leo with his duties, two people stood up to the task. That was both Xander and Timmy. Xander knew a lot about vampire politics as he studied about it before joining the First family.

It was important for him not to offend anyone and tip toe around if he wanted to rise up and he thought this knowledge would help greatly. As for Timmy, before Leo and the others arrived he was Edward's personal assistant, so he knew the tasks that needed to be done day in and day out.

In front of the Tenth castle, a ceremony was held for the vampires that had died as well as a special send off to the vampire knight Edward. Anyone was free to join from the other families and surprisingly nearly every vampire from the Tenth family had attended.

Even if they never wanted to be in the Tenth family, they could still remember and appreciate everything Edwards did for them. Surprisingly there was also a high turnout from the other vampire families, with six family leaders turning up with their vampire knights.

They were the leaders that had chosen not to get involved on the day of Fex's execution.

“Edward, you were quite the popular guy.” Leo said. “Our time together was short, but I could tell that you were a good man. Too many good people die in this world to allow others to live.”

When the ceremony was over, the students entered the castle in tears, and Xander, Amy, and Timmy couldn't stop sobbing as they walked back inside. It was an unusual thing to experience, vampires often just went into eternal sleep when they were ready. It was peaceful and it was something they wished to do.

To them, death was a horrible thought, leaving the world without doing everything one had wished.

As for Erin, she stormed off after the ceremony and when she entered the castle she went straight for one of the training rooms. She threw her katana-like blade on the ground, and used the large thick heavy blade on her back. She didn't want to focus on practicing on skill, she didn't want to think about anything but just letting her anger out as she swung the heavy blade.

Images would constantly appear in her head, not just of what had recently happened but also what had happened in the past.

“It's the same! I didn't do anything! I thought I had gotten stronger!” She screamed, swinging the blade again and again.

A strange energy was rising in her as she pictured Edwards' head getting smashed in. She swung hard hitting the floor, when she saw her parents being killed by the Dalki.

“What am I meant to do noooow!” She shouted.

At that moment the doors opened and Erin turned around huffing and panting to see who it was.

“Erin, are you okay?” Amy asked, but she soon covered her hand over her mouth. “Erin, your eyes, they're, they're yellow.”

In the king's bedroom, Cindy the Second leader had tried her best to use her ability on him, but it was impossible. Her ability could only reverse time by so much. If she was reversing his condition by two hours, he was worsening at such a rate that all it was doing was slowing it down.

"Is there nothing you can do!" Dwight shouted in anger.

Cindy didn't take this personally, as she knew Dwight just cared about the king. If a new king was elected by vampire code Dwight would have to leave him, this was why most royal vampire knights decided to pass on with their king.

But Dwight didn't want the king to go to sleep, not yet. Not until he found out who was betraying them and had caused him to go into such a state. This was why if the king needed to go in internal sleep, he would choose not to.

"I'm sorry, if he sleeps now, then he will regain his strength and no longer be in pain. Maybe after a thousand years or so, he will have the strength to move like a regular vampire, but he has already aged greatly, he will never be at the strength he once was."

Clenching his fist, Dwight knew what this meant.

"So you're saying he has no choice, he has to go into eternal slumber now, and a new king needs to be elected?"

My Vampire System Chapter 730: New Era powerhouses

"This is the last one," Bonny said, as she carefully steered the spaceship and it started to descend.

"Thank the heavens," Void replied, as he started to get his equipment ready from his little satchel bag that was attached around his waist. He pulled out a flat square device that was no bigger than a book, then placed a round camera lens on the front of it. "Visiting all these places has been quite intense, we're lucky that everyone has been so nice to us so far."

“We’re reporters, that’s our job,” Bonny replied. “They know that people like us are needed, besides we’re practically the only ones, don’t you feel a sense of duty?”

Void sighed in defeat as he knew she was right. The two of them had been in countless life or death situations together being war reporters, and this time was no different. He knew the job he had signed up for.

Bonny was a well known reporter that had continued to give reliable information to the civilians, and update the people living in shelters all around. But it was a job she couldn’t do alone.

Many new reporters relied on gadgets like drones and such, but she liked to do her reporting the old fashioned way, with a good old camera man and that was Void.

She was quite the beauty as a reporter. She had silky straight brown hair with a fringe that went down to her eyebrows and no further. She looked like a pop singer and also had the diva personality to go with it.

Her facial expression could change whenever she wished. On camera when it mattered, she would have the right emotional face to match, but off screen or when needed to be, she could smile warming people’s hearts.

Meanwhile the man behind the camera never got enough credit for his work, but he didn’t have the face to be on camera either. Freckles covered his nose and were heavy under his eyes, even though he was an adult. He also had curly hair that was a nightmare to deal with.

At times like this, he didn’t care and just allowed it to go wild, as long as it wouldn’t block the camera lense he was fine with it.

As the ship descended they could see they were landing in the middle of a plain tiled floor, right in front of a Chinese styled palace. There were several buildings placed around on different levels and tiers and they were landing on the lowest. Leaving the ship, there were men waiting to greet them and each of them wore bright white robes.

“We have finally arrived,” Bonny said with a big smile. “The Graylash family.”

The group of men escorted Bonny and Void as they headed into the building. While walking, Void couldn't help but continuously take pictures of the spectacle around him, it had such beautiful architecture and it felt peaceful.

"Could you please delete and not take any more photos," Hector said, the member of the Graylash family who was currently leading the reporters. "Maybe not know, but those photos could help our enemies know the layout of our base and more."

Void immediately bowed down, apologising and got to deleting the photos right away. He was surprised that they had told him so respectfully. There were times when they would get in quite the pickle for something like this. He knew better, he just couldn't help but want to take a picture when he saw such an amazing sight.

As the two of them continued to walk, they thought back to the reason why they were here right now, and the reports they had made so far.

Before coming to the Graylashes, they had met with the military leader Oscar, and also with the Bree family leader Mona. They tried to meet with Pure but had no clue where their base was nor had any leads to go on.

The reason for speaking to these people was to ask what the current state of the civil war was looking like. News about an emperor tier beast on a particular planet had already been spread far and wide, and everyone knew each powerhouse had their eyes on the prize.

The question was, why hadn't anyone acted yet? The reply was a surprising one and it gave hope to those that maybe the civil war was coming to an end.

The powerhouses were currently in talks with each other to see if they could somehow make it so it was a joint hunt for the emperor tier beast. All sides had already felt that there had been too much death on all accounts.

They could only imagine what would happen if they all tried to go for the emperor tier separately, it would be even worse. So they were currently negotiating a way to make the hunt fair between all of them and hunt together.

It was a sign that maybe the talks after this, could lead into something further and end the Civil war. However, there was something else on their minds and something else Bonny wanted to ask each of them.

“In your current talks, are you considering inviting one of the, as people are calling them, new era powerhouses?” Bonny had asked Oscar, the supreme commander.

“It’s actually one of the reasons why we have been so patient. After the Sunshields disappearance there has been a lot of speculation about what will happen. Everyday members of Pure are coming out more and more and I believe they will no longer hide and will be willing to talk soon. My bet is on them becoming a big powerhouse.

“Daisy however does have a way with the people. Many factions have decided to go with her because of her charisma and skill of leading. Honestly, I am unaware of how much strength their group truly has, but I could say the same for Pure as well.”

When Bonny had asked the question to Mona, leader of the Bree family, she had said the opposite.

“I think that Daisy will come out as one of the major powerhouses,” Mona replied. “In the past, they have always been right behind the big four in terms of strength. If it wasn’t for Truedream’s strange ability, I always thought soon we would be inviting them over to the leaders table.

“As for Pure, there is speculation amongst the people that they are an incredibly strong group but I don’t believe that. If that was true, why did they ever have to go in hiding and act as a terrorist group in the first place? The only person we have to worry about is their leader, who contains an emperor tier weapon.”

Both of these interviews were broadcasted all over and the public were split when discussing who would become the next powerhouse, but Bonny had one more thing to ask.

“Recently there has been talks about a new power rising, a faction called the Cursed family. They have quickly taken over a few planets with very small forces. Because of this, they have also been considered a contender, do you know anything about them?”

“The Cursed family?” Oscar replied. “I have heard their name in reports here and there as they have taken over only a few planets, but when looking into their members, there seemed to be no names that stand out.”

“The Cursed family,” Mona said, a little surprised at the name. “I don’t think it’s even worth mentioning any new powers. This happens from time to time, and they will just be absorbed by either Pure or Daisy. Although, maybe if one of these groups takes over the Cursed family they will have enough power to take over another.”

Both Bonny and Void had entered the room where Owen was sitting down in a relaxed manner. They had already asked him a few questions but finally, Bonny had gotten to the same question as she had asked the others. About which new era power did he think was going to rise to the top.

So far, the military had said Pure, while Mona had said Daisy. It was expected that the general public opinion was also one of these two, so she was excited to see if a third opinion would sway one side’s favour.

“Which is the new era powerhouse out of those two?” Owen repeated. “I think neither. The ones that will shock us all, are the Cursed family.” Owen replied.

This blew Bonny’s expectations out of the water. Owen had said those words so confidently, while the other two had debated over the two. Just what had made Owen so confident?
