

Never Late, Never Away Chapter 787

Vivian let it ride. Yet, she couldn't help but frown when she took a gander at Rachel, who had accidentally fallen from the bed as she was trying to hit her.

"Send her to the nursing home instead. Don't let her be in the hospital anymore," Vivian said to Finnick and also asked for his opinion at the same time.

Certainly, Finnick agreed to it. Rachel hurt Vivian even though she had also raised Vivian. That said, Vivian no longer owed her anything as she had paid her off for raising her.

Hence, Finnick wouldn't tolerate Rachel's way of treating Vivian anymore.

Leaving the ward together with Vivian, Finnick saw Larry and Noah, who were waiting outside.

"Mr. Norton, Mrs. Norton, I've checked. Evelyn had made a full withdrawal from her bank account before we discovered that she went missing," Noah told them about the findings of his investigation.

Even though it was a task given by Vivian, he gave his all in completing it and reported it to both Finnick and Vivian.

"Well, in that case, let's check if there are any trails left by her in the ward." Noah's account of the matter was expected by Vivian as well.

Evelyn's success in running away indicated that she had borne this idea for a long time in her mind.

It was reasonable that her plan was perfectly concealed from others since it might have been plotted long ago, but Vivian didn't believe that an immaculate plan could exist.

Therefore, she was determined to go to the ward to have a look.

“Alright, let’s go then.” Finnick agreed to Vivian’s idea to go to the ward because, in the event that they could get any clue from her ward, it would also be helpful to their search for Evelyn.

Taking Vivian’s hand in his, Finnick reached the door of the ward. The ward wasn’t any different from how it used to look usually, but there was one exception—a few words were carved on the door.

Leaning closer to it, Vivian saw what they read: I’ll be back!

Looking at the few words made, Vivian wondered how much strength was needed for one to carve these words on the door so deeply.

“There seems to be nothing suspicious in the ward except for the words in this corner.” Vivian circled and checked all the corners of the ward. It was clean and tidy.

In any case, Evelyn was brought up in a decent environment. Hence, it was also reasonable for her to tidy up and clean the ward before she left.

Nonetheless, what was unknown to Vivian was that the nurse had already cleaned the room after Evelyn left, which was why the ward was spick and span.

Thus, it wasn’t surprising that Vivian couldn’t find anything in the ward. However, out of the blue, something occurred to Vivian.

Earlier on, because she was afraid that Evelyn might be scheming something in the ward, she had installed a surveillance camera in Evelyn’s ward.

Never would she have thought that the surveillance camera would come in handy to her one day.

It looks like I’m fairly foresighted.

“Quick, get the surveillance camera down from the door. Let me take a look.” Vivian instructed Noah to take down the camera so that she could check what happened.

Back then, in order to keep it away from being discovered by Evelyn, Vivian had specifically installed a pinhole camera. Hence, they had to take it down to see what was being captured.

"Yes, Mrs. Norton," Noah replied and stepped on a stool, preparing to remove it from above the door.

"When did you install a camera here? How come I was totally clueless?" Finnick was astonished. When did Vivian even install this thing here?

As far as Finnick was concerned, he had escorted Vivian every time she came to the hospital. But never had he seen her fixing the camera in this ward.

"Well, it was after our divorce," Vivian looked at Finnick and replied to him thoughtfully.

That means, this camera was fixed after we got a divorce. Thus, I'm not required to tell you about it.

Hearing Vivian's answers, Finnick thought what she said was true, so he didn't ask further.

Noah was swift, and while they were talking, he had already removed the camera and took it down.

Vivian went to borrow a laptop from the nurse and checked what Evelyn had been doing in the ward.

After watching the footage, they found out that the words carved on the door were indeed Evelyn's own works.

Furthermore, when she was whittling on the door, she wore a monstrous expression on her face, as though she was going to kill someone. But immediately after that, an ineffably gentle expression crept on her face, and it made Vivian felt as though spring had come all of a sudden.

Vivian knew all too well that it was only when Evelyn was thinking about Finnick would such an expression appear on her face.

Therefore, Vivian turned to Finnick and shot him a glare.

Not knowing how to react, Finnick rubbed his nose as an indication that it had nothing to do with him.

Vivian fast-forwarded the recorded clip and saw Evelyn taking a piece of cloth in her hand, tearing up alone, and seemed to be yelling something.

However, none of them could lip read.

Nevertheless, judging from her intense emotions, Vivian reckoned that Evelyn must have been berating her then.

Seeing that, Finnick felt even more awkward, but Vivian didn't say anything, nor did she blame him.

"Look, this was what happened on the day that Evelyn ran away." Vivian pointed at the laptop screen and asked them to take a closer look.

All they saw from the screen was Evelyn escaping from the ward as soon as she woke up early that morning. Even before the saline bottle attached to the back of her hand was emptied, she pulled the needle off and ran out of the ward.

"Well, we can't really find Evelyn anymore now," Disheartened, Vivian looked at Finnick and said.

Initially, she thought she had found some trails that would be able to trace Evelyn and find her back.

But then realization dawned on her that they ended up with nothing meaningful. What are we going to do now?

Vivian wasn't afraid of Evelyn, but once Evelyn got outside, she would cause them more trouble, and their life would be greatly affected.

Vivian didn't want that. All she ever wanted was to lead a peaceful and happy life.

And that wish seemed a little difficult to be fulfilled at the moment.

The only way out for Vivian was to look for Evelyn and keep her at a place where she could see and manage.

"Let's go and check the surveillance camera on the road and see where she went." Finnick also knew very well the significance of Evelyn's escape.

Hence, he was of the opinion that they should go looking for her immediately since she hadn't left for too long.

They were left with the option of checking the surveillance cameras on the roadside in hopes of finding the routes that Evelyn had taken.

"Alright," Vivian answered after she turned to look at Larry, who had been watching them from the side, and then to Noah.

"Noah, you take Larry home with you first. I'll check the surveillance cameras with Finnick." Vivian didn't want Larry to follow them rushing about anymore, so she could only ask Noah to take him home.

"Mommy, is that person very hard to find? Why is Mommy looking so troubled? I'm not leaving with Noah. I want to be with Mommy."

To Larry's understanding, searching for someone was a very simple task. One just had to look around oneself.

However, as he saw the helpless and deeply concerned faces of his parents, Larry couldn't understand why they looked so lost, so he wanted to stay and help them look for the missing person.

"Little pumpkin, listen. Mommy has one piece of clothing missing at home which I can't seem to find. Why don't you help me look for it?" Vivian had to tell a white lie in order to make Larry leave.

"Okay." Hearing that he could actually be of help to his mommy, Larry was uplifted in an instant.

He couldn't wait to go back home with Noah and help Vivian look for her missing clothes.

Noah took a glance at Finnick and was waiting to see if he would give him any instructions.

Nevertheless, after a long while, Finnick didn't respond. It was only when Noah turned around, preparing to leave, that he heard an utterance from Finnick. "Take care of Larry."

That cheered Noah up, and he quickly agreed.

Seeing as Noah left together with Larry, Vivian and Finnick went to the nearest police station to check the footage of surveillance cameras on each of the streets.

It was fortunate that they found out the time when Evelyn left the hospital. Hence, with that detail in hand, they only needed to target the image and appearance of Evelyn in the footage.

Time passed with every tick of the clock, but there was no sign of Evelyn at all in such a big city.

When Vivian and Finnick were about to give up, out of the blue, a white shadow appeared across their sight.

“Quick, look at that!” Seeing as such, Vivian was so excited that her eyes were fixated on the screen, unable to turn away.

That figure on the screen was none other than Evelyn. Nonetheless, judging from where she was heading, there could only be one possible destination—the airport.

It seemed like Evelyn was planning to flee her home country just to avoid Vivian.

Thinking of that, Vivian couldn't help but lament how silly Evelyn was.
