Not One, But Two Chapter 5 How Shameless of Them

Alissa looked at her masterpiece happily and felt very satisfied. “How could you abandon your wife and children! Meanwhile, I’ve been ridiculed for being a child with no parents for so long. Let’s see how you’re going to suffer at my hands.”

She quickly walked around the internal system and saw a piece of data that looked like an important contract. As the corners of her lips raised slightly, she pressed her beautiful finger lightly upon it. With a swoosh, the data disappeared.

“Bingo!”

Alissa almost jumped with glee, but her smile froze instantly.

Oh no!

Someone had spotted her movements, and they were quickly tracking her.

“Help, Arianna!” Alissa shouted.

Arianna had just gotten her sister’s change of clothes and was coming out of the bedroom. When she saw Alissa hitting the keyboard hurriedly, she rushed over.

“What are you doing, Alissa? You’re touching my computer again!”

Arianna was usually quiet, but she had very good computer skills. Now that Alissa had seemingly meddled with and invaded someone else’s system, she quickly pushed her sister away and instantly typed out a series of codes.

“You’re so bad at this, Alissa. Your traces have been sighted, and we will be exposed in no time. When Mommy asks, you will inevitably be punished. How can you meddle around like this?”

While Arianna rambled on, her fingers tapped quickly on the keyboard. The speed of her typing made Alissa feel dazzled.

“How would I know that the other party is a master at this? You know that I am not very good at computers, anyway. This is not one of my strengths.”

When she heard Alissa say this, Arianna sighed again.

“Yeah, you’re not very good at it because you learn everything halfway and give up. The teacher also said that it would’ve been easy for you to become a powerful hacker with your talents. However, you gave up learning halfway through. Now that you’re being tracked, I don’t know what to say,” said Alissa as she critiqued Arianna once more.

“How dare you talk to me like this? I’m your sister! Hurry up, the other party is getting near.”

“It’s done. I’ve moved the server abroad. Even if they manage to trace it, they can’t find us here since it’s a virtual server.”

Arianna stopped typing as she finished her sentence, and the computer returned to its original state.

Just as Greg thought he could finally locate the other party’s IP address, he was upset when he saw that it was a virtual server.

He had been tricked!

Although his computer had returned to normal, this feeling of being led by the nose by someone else was really unpleasant.

Greg’s face became gloomy, and the cold aura all over his body made the temperature of the entire conference room drop to freezing point in an instant.

At this moment, the technical department called to inform him of something.

“Mr. Buckley, the bidding data recently submitted by our internal system is missing.”

“What?”

Greg stood up suddenly, causing his chair to make a harsh dissonant sound. No one dared to speak, for everyone knew that this bid was the most important project of the Buckley Group at present.

Troy swallowed before he gathered up his courage to say, “Mr. Buckley, our hostile rivals probably sent the other party. I will investigate right away.”

Greg didn’t say anything, but those fiery eyes of his let everyone know that if they couldn’t find this culprit, they would suffer.

When Alissa saw that Arianna had solved the trouble she caused, she immediately hugged her sister happily and gave her a kiss.

“Dear Arianna, how am I supposed to live without you?”

“Oh, you’re disgusting!”

Arianna pushed her away. Although she wiped her forehead with some disgust, the corner of her lips raised into a slight smile.

At this moment, the door suddenly opened, and a gorgeous woman with high heels stepped in. However, her expression was not very pleasant.

“Alissa, come right here!”

The woman suppressed her anger as much as she could, but her voice was still loud and harsh.

As soon as Alissa heard this voice, she immediately jumped onto the table and shouted at the woman, “Can’t you talk to me nicely?”

“Talk to you nicely? You beat up the governor’s son until he cried for his mother! How dare you ask me to talk to you nicely! Do you know that your mother, I, was in the surgical room at that time? I was reprimanded by the governor over a phone call! When I named you Alissa, I wanted you to grow up and become an honorable and dignified noblewoman one day. Yet, you are like a monkey all day long. You either beat up the son of the governor or the son of the county magistrate. Tell me, why are you fighting others again?”

Abigail was about to go crazy.

Her eldest daughter was born from bad karma, wasn’t she? Alissa fought with others every day, but no one could beat her up. Hence, she became more and more reckless.

When Alissa saw Abigail coming toward her, she quickly jumped off the table, bounced herself off the coffee table with one hand neatly, then jumped to the back of the sofa.

She ran and shouted, “They are a bunch of useless things, yet they still want to provoke me. What can I do? They couldn’t beat me, so they complained to their parents. How shameless of them!”

“You think you’re right, don’t you? Come here! I promise not to kill you!”

Abigail was a talented doctor who had a perpetual thirst for knowledge. Naturally, many important people had to wait in line to be treated by her. In everyone’s eyes, she was cold, elegant, and awe-inspiring. No one would have thought that she would also be driven crazy by children one day, though.

As for Arianna, she watched the chaotic scene that unfolded before her every single day. She hugged her computer as if it was the most precious thing in the world and was planning to slip back to her room. However, she was discovered by the sharp-eyed Alissa as the young girl dodged Abigail's pursuit skilfully like a monkey before jumping directly in front of Arianna. After pushing Arianna in front of Abigail, Alissa then roared, "They called me a b*stard child without a father, so it's considered a very small matter that I only beat them up. I am not in the wrong!"

Abigail's movements suddenly stopped, and a trace of pain and guilt flashed across her heart. Not being able to give the children a complete home with fatherly love was the most regrettable thing in her life.

She steadily caught Arianna and the computer in her arms, and when she looked at Alissa again, the child's eyes were red. However, Alissa stubbornly raised her head and forced her tears back.

"Mommy is the worst! I hate Mommy!"

She turned around suddenly and ran toward her bedroom. Her salty and bitter tears seemed to hang in the air, and it made Abigail feel a little distressed.

"Don't blame her, Mommy. Although she fights with others, she knows what she's doing."

Arianna noticed that Abigail's expression was not good, so she quickly comforted her mother without caring about the computer anymore.

Abigail looked at her well-behaved younger daughter. She couldn't help but smile, though it had a touch of bitterness to it.

"Will you help me comfort your sister?"

"Sure thing!"

Arianna nodded obediently.

Suddenly, a melodious ringtone rang in the air. Abigail looked down slightly, and her face changed immediately.
