Alright guy this chapter has some dialogue in spanish, but I'll write the translation in italics beside it just so you guys don't get confused. I was also aiming for a double update but this chapter is turning out to be a really long one so I'll update the second and then update next week!

Enjoy!

Hope you guys enjoy:)

PRESENT DAY
AMAZON RAINFOREST

AURORA

I have seen threats and people be murdered. I have been witness to thousands of deaths at the hands of Deviants and humans. I have seen empaths not eat at all.

I've seen people sabotage each other, overcome by the need for power and money. I've watched as they've become thirsty for power for control.

I've watched over the years, as if it were a movie, how people evolved and changed, leaving their values behind and becoming selfish beings.

I've seen them be born and then die of old age while I'm still the same.

Humanity is the most petrified thing I have ever seen.

I've been betrayed and lied to. Hurt and beaten up so bad I could barely breathe.

Drug was a prideful person. His beliefs were set in stone, and while we had the same values, there were still things we disagreed on.

I blamed it partly on having lasted each other for so long. Part of me felt like sometimes that routine we'd had for so long rose up, and we'd end up butchering over the smallest things.

Still, we always managed to fix it.

Because as much as there was bad, there was also good.

So much good.

We seemed to fit when we were partly, always in ways and together. Living with him was like living with a piece of myself. The piece that I couldn't even grow mad at me' I'd helped me grow and I'd made him see that maybe you didn't need to control people to let them be peaceful.

Sometimes, when I was in Africa or everything happened, I would wonder how he was doing.

How the village was doing.

As much as I loved my something got to me completely. Each and every empire I'd been to, I had been careful not to get too attached. I knew better than to have a place in my fullest extent because I knew that I'd eventually have to leave it behind.

But this place.

This place was all I'd ever. I got carried away. I made it my home. I really had no reason not to. Drug was here, and with his presence, he was able to make this place everlasting.

He'd kept this place alive and going for hundreds of years. He'd helped these people thrive. He'd protected the forest and everything in it.

And so I let this place into my heart completely.

How foolish of me.

Drug was an unpredictable person. Always had been, always would be. I had wanted to believe that maybe he wouldn't be that way with me. That maybe he would understand me and push his stubbornness aside.

He hadn't.

And in return, I'd been forced to leave my home. My people.

It had shattered my soul entirely.

Normally, I have no memory of the few weeks or he le.

I know he'd be here, of course. It was his home. his life's work.

But I didn't care to belong to them. I figured that he'd be a lucky bitch I hadn't smack into it, him, and so I jolted Zeni and she sold me to some black ops organization by him. That he would contact me in the next few weeks when he realized he'd made a mistake.

He never did.

Just like that, I'd lost my home, both literally and figuratively.

I felt shattered.

It was months before I could start to function normally. Again. I'd have those fits where everything would overwhelm me and the energy inside me would open up and then I'd explode.

Normally it resulted in me hurting people. I cursed my powers for relying so much on my emotions and my state of mind because it fed myself spinning out of control more so than not.

The engine I'd got the nerve to connect would get out of hand and I'd find myself unable to control when my powers started and when they didn't. I'd be at a bar and then someone would do something and I would absolutely love it and use my energy blasts on the wrong things.

I got out of control so much that Ayk advised me to visit Gil and There back in Australia.

But then my anger had failed to subdue, and instead of letting angry at him, I felt disappointment in myself.

I'd believed so long ago that love was complex and complicated, which was why I stayed out of it.

I hadn't listened to myself and look where it had led me.

My heart had been broken by the very same man that had fixed it in the first place.

Yet he almost there' Bats calls out from the front of the car, driving down the small dirt road between the forest.

I exhale a breath, my fists closing so hard I can feel my nails digging half-rotted shapes into the palms of my hands.

The thing about love though, is that you can never make it go away.

As much as I want to hate him, I know I'll never be able to.

He was my first love. My only love.

And I'm sure that as long as I'm alive I'll never stop loving him.

"Yes alright!" Sora's voice comes out quietly beside me.

I turn to her, my face questioning.

She looks down at my hands, eyebrows rising. I look down with her, watching as a drop of blood trickled from the palm of my hand and into my jeans.

"Oh!" I let my hands loose, using my sleeve to wipe it. She blood from the cuts.

"You don't have to do this, you know." She begins, reassurance dripping in her voice. "You can stay in the car while we talk to him."

I shake my head, swallowing the ball of emotion down my throat.

"You know he won't come if I don't go" I hesse in a breath. "I'm alright. Just nervous is all"

She looks at me for a second, scanning my face before humming. "If you say so"

I turn to look forward, watching as the car in front of us eases the village entrance. A hello to stays on the side of the road, Sparks, Kings, and Kanon getting out of it. Their heads turn to our car, watching as Bants slows to a stop and turns it in.

"What will we do if he says no?" I ask them as I unbuckle my seatbelt.

"Don't worry, Aurora. He won't say no" Ed turns to me, giving me a grin of his warmest smiles before he exits the car.

I exit, not giving a second thought before I step out of the car as well.

My feet touch the damp dirt beneath me. Instantly, I can feel the surge of energy this forest gives me. So much nature and power.

I turn to look forward, watching as the car in front of us eases the village entrance. A hello to stays on the side of the road, Sparks, Kings, and Kanon getting out of it. Their heads turn to our car, watching as Bants slows to a stop and turns it in.

"What will we do if he says no?" I ask them as I unbuckle my seatbelt.

"Don't worry, Aurora. He won't say no" Ed turns to me, giving me a grin of his warmest smiles before he exits the car.

I exit, not giving a second thought before I step out of the car as well.

My feet touch the damp dirt beneath me. Instantly, I can feel the surge of energy this forest gives me. So much nature and power.

I stare deeply, smelling the wet dirt and the trees around me. I revel in the urge to cry at all the memories and emotions come flooding back at once.

Have I'd missed it

I turn to the village entrance, looking up at the trees. Light comes in rays, illuminating the brown from.

Kanon holds up his camera, a look of wonder on his face.

"Come on guys" Kings calls out, walking towards the entrance with determination.

I hold out a hand to stop him, my eyes wide.

"Wait, Kings don't-"

He walks straight into an invisible force, sending him reeling back into the dirt.

I can't hold back a laugh as he groans. I turn to Kanon, unable to hold it in my smile.

"Did you get that, Kanon?"

"I did, I do so!"

Kings motions to Kanon, a death glare on his face.

"Delete that now, or you're food"

I pout, looking down at him.

"Why do you have to be such a crybaby, Kings?" I ask laughter in my tone.

He looks up, a scowl on his face as he holds out a hand covered in dirt and flora now.

"What is it?" Sora asks as he walks closer into the village entrance but stops a few steps away.

I catch up to them, unable to keep a smile o my face

"When I was here I set up a protective shield against unnatural beings. I don't so with the thought that very no one would be able to past, but not other creatures" I explain, walking closer to the wall.

I hold up my hand, reaching out and watching as the force field reacts to my palm, pulsating with my energy.

Immediately, the force field lightens a light purple, showing the entire dome that covers the village.

"Aurora," Sora looks up at the field in wonder "That's. that's amazing"

Ushilla, turning back to look at all of them.

"Yeah, I know. It took me a month to gather the energy to do it. I was exhausted for weeks after"

Without another thought I close my eyes, willing the force field to go down. I feel as it starts to fade away, the entire dome disappearing before our eyes.

"There, you can pass now" I motion.

Kings stands up, brushing the dirt o his hands and grumbling out about his pants being dirty now.

Kanon goes first, followed by Sora and then Ed and Throne. The rest follow next, all of them looking around as they head into the village.

I stand still for a moment, taking a second to prepare myself.

Here goes nothing.

I follow the team, taking my time to absorb everything around me like it's the last time I'm seeing it.

It's not long before the small houses are visible. I force down my panic, as they head into the town, people milling from place to place.

As my sight I can see people building hammers and axes, the steady banging of metal against metal filling my ears.

I force myself to walk forward, emotions and memories everywhere as I look around.

In essence, it was the same village I'd lived in so long ago, but there were some changes. The houses were a lot more modern. Lights hung on the porches. There were a lot more people than there had been 50 years ago, but that was logical.

On the porch of a house, a group of girls sits, making baskets and small cars.

I can't keep a s smile, the feeling of home filling up every crevice in my body. We walk through the village, looking around at the people and the animals.

"Aurora!"

I turn to look at the voice calling me. An old woman, her hair white with age, her face filled with wrinkles that showed a lot of love. I am filled with emotion.

She sits on a chair on a porch, rocking back and forth. She stares at me with wide eyes, as if she'd just seen a miracle happen before her eyes.

"Erm/ch" It is really you!Her voice comes out hoarse and withered.

I frown, confused as to why this woman knows my name. She stands up slowly, cart taking her eyes o me as she steps down the small steps.

"Aurora!" Sprey rolls my head to the side "Quién eres?" Who are you? My Spanish comes out with a thick accent, a consequence of not having spoken it for so long.

She laughs as she walks towards me, shaking her head in astonishment.

"Todos estos años yo has cambiado nada" All these years and you haven't aged one bitter! Have you been blessed with confidence and power.

It takes me a moment to place her, but with those eyes, I could recognize her everywhere.

I break out into a smile, laughing.

"Anci!" I ask, my eyes widening. She nods, laughing back at me. I go to hug her, making sure I'm not being too rough.

It had been 50 years since I'd seen her. She'd been about 15 years old when I'd le , meaning she was about 65 right now.

She hugs me back, the warmth of her body warming my own in the embrace.

"Tambu alba" Su nunca amaré yuß bark, unable to hold back my own from sobbing.

She stares up at me, nodding.

"Una vaz ye vitaj u ti?" Guest que Drog. Joanne como everyone" I'm so old now, but you? Just the same as Drog. Young as Jesusfer! Jesús waves at the mention of Drog.

"Como está?" How is he? Her, no, for proving.

"Es estrella." He misses you!He notes, nodding. "Llevo mucho tiempo extrañándolo" He's been missing you for a long time.

I nod, sighing. I'm about to respond when Thana's hand touches my shoulder.

"We need to keep moving" She motions to the rest of the team, which keeps walking forward. I nod, turning back to Anci.

"Me tengo que ir, pero ahora regreso para hablar contigo, Sí?" I need to go, but I'll be back to talk to you, alright!Aurora her.

She nods, salivating me away with a big smile on her face. She knows I'll be here one things.

"Ve, ve te espero" Go. I'll wait for you.

Without another word I turn around, continuing to walk forward and catching up with the team.

The man goes still, standing straight and then turning back with a smile.

"Hello, Spirit" Drog's voice comes out of the man. Around us, I feel as all the people are still, all of them turning to face the man building.

I roll my eyes at his dramatics. I'm at enough of a distance that I can stop unnoticed, but near enough to watch as the yellow doors open.

He walks through the door.

My heart skits for a moment as I take him in. He has a coat, wrapped around him, his hair is the same as how I'd last him to us all all those years ago. His expression is smug, filled with confidence and pride as he takes a couple of steps and walks down into the dirt ground.

The entire team except me walks forward as Drog scans all of them.

"I've missed all of you" His voice booms out in a resonant tone.

A strange emotion flashes over his features for a moment, his eyes passing through every one of them.

He thinks I'm not here.

He smiles, hands in front of him.

"I appreciate the care all of them have, but if we're being honest. I don't really want you here" He begins, taking a step back.

I can tell Ayrk is about to protest, his dominance changing as he puts his guard up.

Before I know it I'm taking a step forward.

"Drog"

My voice cuts through the silence. It's like even the birds and the crickets have stopped chirping.

He stills completely, his coy smile disappearing in an instant.

He turns to look at me.

I'm not sure how long we stand there, staring at each other. My heart is beating so hard it's almost cool everytime I see him.

"It's impressive" The voice comes out filled with emotion, even though I don't want it to.

He blinks, seeming to be in a trance. Then his gaze jolts away from me, and he turns back to the team, sighing before forcing out a smile.

"Take yourselves at home"

Just like that, we were one step closer to convincing Drog.

And I'm one step closer to figuring out why he is.

Continue reading next part