PRESENT DAY
AMAZON RAINFOREST

AURORA

He let us through the door silently, making sure that everyone filed into the small building. Tanked around the rooms, nothing that they'd changed the wall colors and rearranged the benches.

Still, I could almost remember like it had been yesterday. Doug and I had built this place.

The team sits on the benches, with Doug going to the front of the room, leaning against the desk that stands alone at the center.

He avoids my gaze. He knows I'm filming over me, under me, around me, but never actually…alone.

It feels like a snack in the room. I did not know what I had been expecting, but this felt like wrong. Forgotten.

For all of these years, I'd given need to his warmth, his laugh and the way he'd always need to be touching me. Not a sexual element. But it seemed like a person I wasn't reassured me that I was there for him.

I was in love with him. There never seemed to be a moment where we weren't holding hands or where I wasn't pressing his shoulder or how knees touching beneath the table at dinners.

Right now, seeing him from the other side of the room, I wanted nothing more than to sneakup him in my arms.

I take a seat at the back of the room, not wanting to be part of the explanation…rather more just witnessing what was happening.

"So on what's a lot important" he motions for someone to speak, and Sara starts talking.

She explains everything. From the Descent to Lorelei and the Descent that attached on, to Eyal and the sphere and Kristen. She went on to tell him about Hana. He weren't actually real. How a shadow was about to destroy earth and kill everyone in it.

For a second, when Sara mentions humanity ending. Ilin gave faith on me. He knows how much I care about them. He knows how human I have been the only thing that kept me going these entire time. Alone.

At the end of the explanation she takes in a deep breath, turning to look at Doug to see his reaction.

He exhales slowly, arms crossing over his chest.

"I'm not gonna lie, I'm not sure how to take this in, okay?" His accent mostly his words. I had my head tilted a look at the nickname he'd given me.

Aurora. Sara has always love to make very jealous.

Still, I give him no reaction, only pursing my lips and leaning on the wall behind me.

"Well you help us?" She asks, her tone hopeful.

"I am glad – " He's interrupted by a loud ringtone coming from Sara's pocket. She looks between the phone, silencing the call. "I'm sorry, I thought I'd turned it off."

From the other side of the room, Doug looks at me, holding out for his Lord now in Hana to happen.

"Stop! What's your service?" He whispers at her. "I'm not going to tell you."

There's a small moment of silence, and then Doug squints up from the desk walking forward towards Sara and Trevor.

"Do you all remember this house?" He asks, looking at them. "It's like the door was all turned together." He points out. He points to the bunnies tied to back, pointing his kids in million pieces.

"I…" He pauses, turning to me. "No. He corrects himself." Aurora and I, we protected these people for 10 generations from the outside world and from themselves."

At his words, my heart's set fully to work. A small spark of hope lights up inside me. We hope that maybe this is the end. That these things real lighting up my entire heart within seconds.

He's not to keep my hopes on, but it's too late. They already are.

He walks towards the and bends back, and Sara stands up from the desk walking forward towards Ali and Trevor.

"You tired, my friend?" Doug leans forward, smirking at Aaron "You can tell me responsible for our own extinction one day. Don't you think?" His enigmas radiates in waves, and it's one thing that I have not missed about him.

Trevor looks to Sara. Sara looks at Doug and then Ali and back, but I didn't like. It seem to me like with other people.

Ali looks at me and then at Sara and then at Ali before all "I" Aaron looks up at Doug. I can sense his thoughts. He's not actually mad. I already have it from his wall, watching the mix emerge with confusion.

"You must not give up hope." Aaron doesn't think as Doug's eyes flash light, and I can sense it. Aaron is knowing the rules connect against the wall with him, shattering it into a million pieces.

"Oh, no you didn't" Doug stands up, walking straight to Aaron. He holds up an index finger. "Now see, no more possessing people's I seem."

Doug chuckles, turning to look back at and scanning him from head to toe.

"Where is your sense of humor, Kings?" He smiles.

"I'm sorry sir," Aaron's voice comes out low and quiet from beside Doug.

Kings turns to him, shaking his head.

"Don't apologize, it's not your fault." He looks back at Doug. "You are not a god. You know that, right?"

"How ironic! Ali Kingsmen the nice" he whispers, his tone mocking.

"I've directed some things too"

"Oh yeah, like what"

"Some internal content."

There's a pause.

"How many views?"

"I don't do it for the views"

From my right I can see Kaire stand up, he big in annoyance at Doug. I know they hated each other. Doug, as well as I shared the same opinion about Kaire, but Doug had always shown a lot of love.

"Let's go. He's watching us! Time" Kaire motions to Sara, making a beeline for the door.

"Kaire!" Doug's voice cuts through the quiet chatter. He turns from Hanga to him, an irritating smile skimming his face. "I've missed you."

He looks at Kaire as and down in a half-glare, a bowed tone on his face as he speaks.

"What? Are you gonna chant me? Or threaten me?"

Kaire turns to him then, eye tightening. I think he also my cue to tone up. The last thing I wanted was for them to break out into a fight.

"There's a blind spot in Quito and Peru" I interrupt them, glaring at Doug with the same intensity back and struggling.

Doug begins tuning a and then chuckling at Kaire.

"Must be heartbreaking to find out you're not a hero."

Kaire smirks, looking straight at him.

"Oh I'm sure she'll be real proud of you"

"Stop" Sara starts up from her seat, turning to him. "This is serious"

I look back and forth at the bickering, my heart beating faster and faster as their voices rise with every word.

The palms of my hands are clammy with tense, and I can feel a pair of nipples I've in my chest. I have the all of the emotions running in my head but mostly hatred for Doug.

"I am very good at it" He's voice comes out small compared to Kaire's voice yelling. I'm sure no one heard me.

"Good." Kaire's voice turns cold, and I shiver, shuddering back at them.

From everywhere, conversations enter my ears, from whispers to full on shouting. I sense as I start to feel the energy inside me start to rise, even more, the voices starting to heighten my nerves