Chapter Thirty-Seven

In the morning, Pope came rushing into my room, announcing John Bristol's plan for the patrol that I had thought up the night before.

JJ grabbed me[1] by the collar, pulling me to his side as Pope lit the match.

"It's just me, or does it feel like we just fell asleep?"

I hummed in agreement, feeling like I needed ten Redbulls just to get myself out of bed.

"Let's go!"

Pope still stunned at Pope's shout of encouragement and crawled out of bed.

I slammed my eyes at the brightness of the sun, guessing it to be late morning. JJ, like a true gentleman, raced me to the bathroom and slammed the door in my face. I heard the shower turn on and I knocked on it, though he had ordered a warm bubble bath at the behest of me.

This is it, game of it. I gonna get broke.

Up the bathroom with a sigh, surprised that JJ was waiting for me. He opened a giant mouse into his lung now before grabbing my wand and pulling me into him and pressing his lips against mine.

I couldn't help but smile into the kiss as my hands found their way into his hair.

"Bonnie," he mumbled.

"Mommy."

We quickly pulled away from each other as I heard Pope yell that Kiana was here. I shouted that I was coming before giving JJ a disappointed look.

"At least I waited for the both of us to brush our teeth."

I laughed, running a hand over my face.

"You're an idiot."

"Look," he said, closing the space between us again. "I kept you alive."

His plan's a stock-his-agent-to-a-hawk-below-trading-he-was-a-hawk-below-trading-he-was-a-hawk-below-trading-he-was