Alpha On The Hunt Chapter 36

Lexa waits a few second to ensure he is indeed submitting to her before she shifts back. The moment she does I fight the urge to race over and cover Elena's nudity, but the blood coating her does most of that when she gets to her feet. She is littered with injuries, her skin more black and blue than its usual sunkissed tan skin.

The moment she rises to her feet, Derrick's pack drops to their knees, her eyes scan over them, and they bare their neck to her. Michelle moves toward her as Khan shifts back, giving me control, and Michelle backs off when I grab her, helping her stay upright. She flinches when my arm wraps around her waist.

"Restrain him," she orders her new pack. Yet her breath wheezes, and her chest rises and falls heavily.

"Yes, Alpha!" they speak in unison, moving to do as she asked.

"Marco's on his way!" Sondra sings out from the porch holding up a phone and shaking it. Elena turns, glancing over her shoulder, and Luke escapes his mother, rushing over and slamming against her. She grunts as his arms wrap around her.

"I'm fine," she tells him, however, she is anything but fine, her wounds taking forever to close, and I'm taking most of her weight.

"Get the door for me, Luke," I order him.

"Don't you dare!" Elena snaps at me, and I press my lips in a pack to see
