

Phase One: The Beginning

"This is the end, because of him?"

After the founding of the ten eternal, things were in balance.

the worlds were at content, the ten eternal holding the cosmic energy like their destiny told them to. but their creation expanded into something dangerous and sought more.

After the ten were established, a void formed, which exceeded beyond any power that the universe could bring about.

it caused the destruction of several universes, and the birth of ten times more.

it caused death and blood spilled on foreign soil, hunger and suffering.

The chaos was ravaging, consuming more and more to fuel itself.

until this day,

if it hadn't been stopped,

all there ever would be was the void.

a void of torturous screams and eternal pain, endlessly reaching beyond time.

by the power of all ten eternal, the void was narrowed down, to the point that it collapsed into itself.

fire fell from the sky, blades pierced the fragile skin of beings.

the next moment, it all was gone.

all that was left

was a being.

a being that was not capable of any more than a normal eternal.

Arishem believed the being was destined to be one of his to aid him to keep the galaxies in place.

that it was his reward for saving anything and everything there was ever and will ever be.

He took it into its security and made it one of his soldiers.

She took the name of perseus, persia.

Bringer of chaos, conqueror. destruction.

while the others wail in the comfort of their own abilities, are content and have their natural middle, she does not.

her connection to reality holding onto a thin string.

Untamed,

emotion driven.

A child of chaos in every way, flaming in the destructive power of her own inability to control.

and this child soon showed it's true colors which it could not hide.

it was a matter of time until something went wrong.

and that day was destined to come sooner than even she had thought.
