Chapter XIII

~ ...and never look...? ~

~ ^v~^v~^ ~ v~^v~^v ~

The Amazon

Kinda was a beautiful place.

Faint chatter, the birds singing light tunes along with the sun touching nature so it.

But it would have been more beautiful if Persia hadn't been so enfeebled.

She knew Drog stayed here, solely because of her instinct guiding her.

His energy was imprinted on her skin, her heart.

It made her sick, all these years.

But following that energy back to its source, although it was so unnerved, took her last bit of energy to.

Her vision was a little blurry, when her eyes spotted lights.

The others walked in front of her, and she stayed back.

Mary'd occasionally turn back to make sure they still were on the right path.

Persia took a breath.

"We're here."

"Shit!" Kings cautioned as they reached the first taverns, "he's living in the middle of nowhere!"

"Oh, look!" Rhea shrieked and tugged at Persia's sleeve, "Lamas!"

Persia smiled, grateful a few people who came across their way.

They weren't shunned by a few strangers shooting us at all.

Welcoming, rather.

She turned around herself in her spot, allowing her eyes to take in the sight of the villages.

It was all peaceful.

Ah so close.

Of course it was, they wouldn't tolerate any ill - even if he was still the boy she knew him as.

"It's very nice here sir," Aaron said, his cameras still strung in his hand. "Don't be fooled," Kings replied, hesitantly pushing new fuel in front of the other.

"ignorance is bliss!"

But her hair on Persia's neck stood, her fingers twitching without her asking them to.

She abruptly turned to where the energy came from.

Scythe stood separate a man, his eyes glowing in that creeping yellow. Feels Spitter

Unwillingly, Persia pulled Mary back towards her.

Her eyes shot towards this biggest cabin, pale wood running as beams, creaking metal as the doors opened outwards.

Persia swallowed, let down on her tongue.

She had no clue whether she wanted to turn around or burn him to the bones.

But her feet still carried her around the water fountain, until the animals were assembled in front of her door.

When she turned to follow the other steps with her ears picked up on in a rhythmic patterns, the whole village slipped themselve behind her.

She couldn't believe it.

But she was certain.

It was him.

He stepped out of the door, placing his hands behind his back.

His chin raised high, posture straightened.

A slight curl to his lip.

Still that dark hair, but it sat more neat than it did centuries ago.

And his eyes.

That consuming blue which she despised so much.

They rushed about the eternals, with each one his each tongues clattering. Until he met her eyes.

Then mouth them away.

"I've missed all of you."

Persia felt wavers clam up her throat as she heard him speak.

"Please, make yourselves at home"

~ ^v~^v~^ ~ v~^v~^v ~

Persia couldn't count on two of her hands how many times the eternals have been to speechless over the course of only four days.

She was glad that Sera took over the speaking at least.

All of them sat in their seats, but it either looked like a garage. Some benches, cold air wrapping around their breaths.

And those stupid burning lights which she was tempted to crush.

Her head was pounding without that stupid voice making it worse.

Drog leaned against a bench at the very front, the floor slightly elevated.

"You've given me a lot of bad news in one go sir lady." Drog finally sighed.

"Will you help us?" Sera asked on ly.

"I'm glad."

His voice was cut o by some song suddenly playing.

Sera's ringtone.

Persia was ill - at ease , but pressed her lips on top of each other to suppress herself from laughing.

Mayo would need to her was having a slightly harder time with stopping herself from cackling.

"Um, what's your service?" Kings whispered, leaning toward the embarrassed woman. "I'm not getting any bars."

"Do you all remember this forest?" Drog spoke again as or silence settled "Beautiful"

Of course Persia knew it, that's why it was so easy to find. It still held so much energy that yearned o each of her family members.

So many years.

So many memories

"It's the last place we all lived together."

Drog continued, peering a smile before it faded. He got up and moved along the room.

"I have promised these people to it's ground once, " He turned explaining. "From the eternals words and from themselves."

Persia brought her eyes over to something else, avoiding the look of Drog.

She had to endure his talking for thousands of years, always about the same thing.

"Your kind my friend, will be responsible for your own extinction one day." It took her long enough until she realized that he was speaking to Kanon.

"Don't you think?"

The poor man lowered his camera.

"I think we should learn from our mistakes and do better sir."

It's not continuing to speak, but his words were indescribable.

Energy flooding the room.

His eyes closed in that gold.

Persia regained her breathing, Maya giving her hand squeezes every now and then.

There, Kanon threw the camera against the wall.

Persia was threatening to get at the boy when Kings luckily spoke before.

"Jift my pubs dich."

The man got up, over their ears aligned.

"Okay, clear rule. No more possessing peoples vaisis."

Drog's eyes shrunk creating back.

"Oh, where's your sense of humorthings?"

"I'm sorry." Kanon tried, obviously confused with what just happened.

"Don't apologize, it's not your fault."

Kings stared back at Drog.

"You can see a god?"

he narrowed his eyes, voice going more quiet.

"you know that, right?"

"Now more," Drog mocked like a child, "Kings, the movie star."

"I've directed some things too."

"Oh yeah, like what?"

"some internet content."

"some many viewers?"

Burn let go of an nervous smile, pouting with mouth.

"Let's go, he's wasting our time."

Persia was about to follow on, when Maya placed a hand to her shoulder.

"We need him." Sern begged, aware of the but that things slipped out of her control.

Persia moved, "He won't do it!"

Drog sly sid just her so quickly, she almost lost feeling from that rush of energy which hit her.

Persia though she wouldn't have to stand this close to him if she had herself assumed into back row.

"Rarin" the boy smiled, an edge to his expression, "I misenkra," He tilted his head to the side, reaching his nose further up.

"Are you going to charm me, or threaten me?"

Sern snapped, Persia noticing how his fists clenched and released again.

He turned, head slightly dropped.

"There's a kind option, if you'd prefer that."

Drog didn't have a chuckle in him, but did for eye contact.

"Must be heartbreaking not to be mothers favorite."

"I'm sure she'd be real proud of you."

Sera slowly got up, put a hand out.

"Drog, this is serious"

Drog had his eyes piercing through him, feet shuttling against him hand cold his eyes right down his.

"I will tell you what's serious."

His voice shook the air, shook Persia's corpse and made her flinch back.

"I have just been told that I a been and as a suicide moustiher the year 1900 and part that my entire existence is a lie"

Persia sat down on her knee' so, hard she feared it would break.

How dare he speak to her like that

"So excuse me if I don't give a shit about your plan right now." Drog turned away from Sera, his back stays leading to the others.

Persia rubbed along her forehead, happy that the get him out of sight.

Her eyes found Sern.

"How not. I will you it was a waste of time."

The steps stopped.

She rose her face, knows knitting in confusion.

Drog had stopped.

He slipped his head to the side, yet still not looking at her.

"You know, out of all people, I wouldn't have thought that you were going to throw sis here." he said, directed towards her.

She inhaled a sharp breath.

This was the first time he acknowledged her.

His tone made her furious.

"Why is that?"

"You never cared about anyone, you never cared about me." he started, glowing louder with each word until she sat here s.

" CARE!"

Her self echoed through the room, everyone going quiet. She noticed how Gilgamesh woke up next to Thona.

But Drog still stood, a small smile forming.

His head dipped, then rose again.

Her nostrils flared at a sign, almost resting him her cheeks.

"You know, you stinky little bastard, I didn't come back for you." she said through gritted teeth, getting up from the stupid bench which it crashed in response to her standing up so harshly.

Maya's hand fell o her shoulders

Drog turned his whole body, facing her. Cackling his head again. Strong

"or anyone."

The waves shocked completely.

The words flowed out by themselves then, the knot in her chest tightening only more.

"I was ready to go home and never think about this torture again. I anyone this you a sort charm every single one of you"

Her hand had carried herself closer to Drog, who raised his chin. She raised her face too.

" We lost"

His jaw was clenched so tightly, the pain that pulsed in her teeth made her nauseous.

"Your world wasn't the only one that was shattered."

" your world" he asked. Though it wasn't a question.

He wanted her to learn.

Like he always tried to.

Drog didn't give a shit about what she had said. He wanted her to feel awful.

"Yes, my world," she replied, releasing some of the tension on her face.

"not just because mine has been destroyed doesn't mean I will take it from every single being on the planet."

Her fists were balled, knuckles in white. There was no feeling in them anymore.

They threatened to collide with his face.

Her energy was boiling over, burning her skin almost.

But she held herself together, drawing in a dry breath.

Drog's smile had collapsed into itself.

His jaw protruded from his face, pursing his lips slightly. He was angry.

She could almost hear him tell her that she had no right to say such a thing.

You are the cause for destruction, how do you want to fix it?

"To go on, stay with your little village.

Keep them under your control until this earth bursts. Maybe then you will feel like you accomplished something."

"Persia, this is enough." Sern started, startling her.

It's like another step closer, she'd blow him up.

"Isn't this what you always wanted? Keeping of these people safe? And now that we are a string you to try and rescue them, you say you're not capable of it?"

She felt a hand on her shoulder, but she didn't pay attention to it. Her face hovered further into that of Drog.

Persia spatted it,

His lids cut down his brow.

His eyes darted through her, lungs shaking in heavy breaths.

"I had always known you were weak.

Even if we could save this planet, I wouldn't want to have someone like you on my side."

Her voice shook with such intensity, it scratched her throat. Still, it she once drank water it would only be would treat it.

"I never wanted to be on your side."

His eyes seemed empty, taken up by hollow anger.

Her nose and eyes twitched, mouth opening to say something else. There was nothing she wanted to say though.

All she wanted to tell him was not.

Persia allowed Aaron to pull her numb body back, shaking it o instantly a or.

Tears shot into her eyes, for no reason at all.

Drog and Persia still stared at each other, until she finally brushed it and dissolved the tie between them.

She brushed past him, holding his side while reaching for the door and walking outside into the fresh air.

Mayo called a her, but she barely heard it.

The cold oxygen prickled against her face and made her stop in place to stop herself from fainting.

A rage coursed through her veins, she couldn't stop it. It flashed itself with every second she spent thinking about his face.

Tears spilled from her eyes as she closed them to ignore the stars that danced before her.

Her lower lip started quivering, the breaths she forced herself to make didn't help.

Then, her mind suddenly calmed.

A hand rusting into hers, taking the dangerous energy from her.

She held her breath, a weight falling o her shoulders.

It such a long time, she hadn't felt anything like this.

Relief. peace

But the void of energy rushed with something else, a it event consciousness, an otherther presence

It consumed her mind, replacing every part of herself.

Fire tracing through her mind and burning every cell to piece of herself.

Her eyes shot open, fingers digging into her palms as she forced it out of her head.

Persia flopped around, ignoring her care raging energy filling it every bit of her body again.

Known, a sort of comfort to it, yet crashing like violent waves pushing her feel as if she was going to drown in it.

She didn't allow her weak knees to show.

" Drog" she started, thrashing the door wide open so everyone was looking at her.

She ignored the stares, them voices too.

Her feet stopped in front of Drog again, her mind not even comprehending it at all.

She seemed faceless almost, none of his features entering her head.

He was still taken up by that anger, but when he saw how outraged she was, his brows knitted slightly.

Persia concentrated on his cosmic energy, her own obeying to her and interwoven with his.

They connected, the girl easily putting her mind to overpowering his power.

Tugging at it until she felt it slip into her hold.

Persia swirled out its eyes widened slightly, focusing on taking the last fragment of his energy until it was all in her grasp.

She held all of it.

His hand rose to his chest, taking small gasps for air. Fingertips feeling for his heartbeat as if it was no longer there.

" Never get into my mind again!

He was paralyzed on the spot, chest quickly rising up and down, when she released her hold on him.

His energy flowed back into him, Persia having to take a deep breath.

He shook his head in confusion, the girl already out of the cabin door.

She was heading somewhere, far away.

Its destination at all.

Just the furthest she could.

A/N: HELLO THERE !! thank so much for 1k reads i'm honestly so overwhelmed :)

also, thanks to everyone who commments and votes, as well as all the new people.

so, we will be getting into the more serious sto. now.

i have some fun things planned, so i hope you're looking forward to that.

love <33

Continue reading next part ⟩⟩