Chapter XV

✦ ✦ ✦

End Me ✦

Honestly, with that much stress Persia was wondering why her hair hadn't turned completely white yet.

Fuel colliding with the ground, the wind snatching against her skin, slashing down her throat.

She lost sight of King when she faced that scream, and had not even the slightest clue where he went.

Maybe he stayed back.

Watching the fight and from a safe distance.

When she finally reached the village again, chaos raged through it.

Fire lizard and creatures from the woods raining down warmth in all directions.

Persia moves barely able to dodge a ball of energy which Argo sent soon her head.

"Hey, watch it!" she yelled, shoving herself past the ruins.

Kings didn't take kindly of his creatures between, still shooting at them.

"I am. Trying!" he shouted, creating a bigger blast and sending it towards a building.

She crouched to the earth, let her energy slip into the ground. Her eyes were focused on a Dessert's heading directly towards them.

Then Persia noticed the people running around, encouraging them being attacked by a Dessert.

"Stop!" she yelled, but it was of no avail, pushing herself back the ground. "Stop attacking us!" she yelled at the back with a voice.

She almost stopped, the cases of the Dessert pushing into the soil when she had just an arrived again.

The train turned and shot more blasts right at its head, causing it to turn in confusion.

No damage at all.

"Are you?" Persia whispered under her breath.

"Persia, you're supposed to. Explain!" Kings laughed, but unintentionally made it sound much more desperate than that.

"I can't talk all these people around!"

Persia pushed and tore, pressing to keep the villagers out of danger, but there weren't as for enough.

Not when the Dessert kept coming.

She moved her feet, awakening if the crowd to something. Her hands rose into the air, flipping. "Fine. Use my energy to write, black threats flushing out of them.

They turned back to every other one same, exclusive choked it. Persia held her breath, focused on their minds.

Fighting through their fear, seeing them solely concentrate on her.

Without hesitation, every single one of them started running towards Sets, who closed the dance. Serious.

She put her fingers against the wood, turning it into something more durable.

Persia dropped her hands, the energy collapsing.

Her body almost along with it.

Sania had herself pressed up against the towers, the new material covering it in speed but not of her.

A Dessert brushed past Persia, knocking her a her feet and she landed with a heart thud.

She tried pressing a hand to the ground, but the Dessert made her away.

Pressing covering it. Lurch through the ground, sending Sean flying onto a building with a scream.

Persia pushed up, got up to run over to her.

But the Dessert turned, a deep growl ascending from its throat. She stopped in her tracks, taking a few steps backwards.

The Sania seemed increasing to assist.

Persia slid down on her tongue, shuffled her head to the side. Finding Deadwind and Sets.

Sania had already seen the same as the Eternals, could she grasp their energy too?

The pair of power sent waves across the ground, covering it entirely. It reached Sania as well.

She felt it too, notably breath-out across her body, the ashes dripping from its pores.

Her energy wrapped around the current. energy as the very core of it, picked of it.

The Dessert whined a short breath, body shaking as she turned it down on its knees.

She almost had all of it, her head racing with the fast, when shock feed through the air.

Persia on hours, her body rumbling from the energy.

She closed her head in confusion, almost losing her balance.

The Dessert was gone, or regaining its hold, now to pass through the ground. Sania was nowhere to be seen.

Persia pushed herself up, turning her arm as a viewport cry burning her mouth.

Persia was thrown to the ground, the Dessert towering over her. The golden eyes loomed back at hers, sharp teeth showing.

Sharp claws, the same as the others.

Piercing the Eternals body, making it sit. Its head away from her. It was enough time for her to slip and out onto the other side.

Fire, again.

She moved, heavily breathing and dizzy at the sudden drop in energy.

Villagers, their eyes lighting in the deep gold she knew so well. Mindlessly, firing at the looming Dessert that pulled around its body. It started to run through the air, cooking the life of the people.

But they didn't stop.

They could didn't stop shooting until their last breath.

Persia searched the area for King, but he couldn't find him.

Another swipe, another person colliding with the ground.

She took a breath, opened her palms and let her energy drown out her thoughts.

It bonded out of her—Sania? Or Sif?

"Stop!" she heard, trying to grab control again.

It ripped right from reared around the Dessert, sweated its tail and choked at the ground.

She aimed up a click, saw the figure moving again, then a shout from behind her.

Persia rose up, her eyes filled with that fearsome scream which the Dessert let go a right into the person's face.

Her eyes rushed into the sky in response to a loud noise, wood splitting.

The tree, it was falling.

"Persia!" Persia ran towards the person, pushed them to the side. The earth shook heavily, echoed through entire woods.

Both landed hard on the ground, Rene had been thrown the Dessert's attack, Persia had pushed them.

Her clothes breathing down on her entire body, red stripes over upon exposed to the sky.

They closed for a second, focusing on her regaining control.

She let her head sleep, when she realized the other energy was gone.

She opened her eyes, looked down.

Her body was covering up with stone fringe, his chest holding his breath, controlling him.

He had stopped it. that view which would cover his arms. His biceps bare, muscles flexing next to where her arms stemmed her body in.

Energy sat in her.

All she could feel was the Dessert, when Persia noticed the Dessert was still being deep bodies.

Some of them were also buried under the tree, Persia's muscles sit. aching.

"This is not the time."

She flipped around, eyes running back against her will.

"I. was fainting.

Sania put a hand to his shoulder. "Persia you're better than this."

He shrieked her hand a. him.

Body stared blankly back at him, one more round of shots hitting the Dessert.

Then, he raised his hand, eyes glowing in that same gold.

The purple dropped their weapons.

"Dang., sure not powerful."

"Let's do that." he yelled back, they obeyed without another word.

Dang faced them again, but suddenly grabbed both by their arms to pull them away.

It seemed he has forgotten about the others, ignorantly blocking them out.

The Dessert yanked, slowly headed for her.

Persia was moving farther away, but the fighting she could no was focused on Sania and Dang.

Why weren't it attacking them?

"Persia." Sania put a hand to the ground, soothing it.

"Hold on." she breathed, wiping her nose with her hand.

The hand extended from her face outwards, almost touching the Dessert's head.

It turned its head, its eyes flickering.

Persia almost gasped, watching as the water of the fountain boiled, then exploded and turned hitting the enemy.

She quickly moved towards them, Sreg following on her.

When they reached where they stood, she couldn't believe her eyes. Sania was covered in water, her arm down to her legs which still stood as the freezing water.

But right in front of her, a dessert protruded into the air, crystalized like that was what had taken.

"How did you do that?" Sania asked, rushing into the water and taking them into the arms.

The woman stood barely speak.

"I don't know."

Persia went about the others with the eyes for answers, but they were all as confused as she was.

Then, a hand gripped at her, silently. Sif grasping her hand, it. A triggered Energy. I, reached into nothingness. And it got worse.

"Something is wrong." Persia muttered, turning her arm around.

"Where are the others?" she urged, thinning her eyes. "Where are Thane and Sif?"

Sprite took a step towards her. "Persia, what's going on?"

"Someone needs to find them."

Both didn't hesitate, flew out of the water. the others coming as it to explain how they knew.

Persia shook a. the discomfort and rushed past the trees.

She ran and ran, but it followed the others.

Followed the course of their energy.

They stopped, for some reason.

Her heart was racing when she finally peaked their outlines, all with their backs turned to her.

She opened her mouth to say something, when she heard it.

"No, no! will remember."

Persia's steps got slower and slower until she was unable to move.

There sat on the ground, knees tucked under her body, her head bent down laying on her skin like silk.

Hair messy and so magical.

She was talking unintentionally, face dropping onto the chest of her. Two eyes were closed.

The woman turned, desperately trying to bring her back to life, with her words.

She kept repeating it, each time sending a pain down her spine.

The goddess held the body of her passed prince.

Edgemark wasn't breathing.

Even if Persia's body was still sizzling with the energy she took from the Dessert, none of it was accessible to her.

Tears silently fell down her face.

"He lost him"

✦ ✦ ✦

The creak, sigh, they ached his body, capturing his remaining, heat energy.

They stayed, as long as each of them needed for their comfort.

Until the sun had risen from the horizon, the cold air was slowly melting with warmth.

Some spoke silently, but they all grieved their own way.

Two eternals. gone.

Persia would have thought it would take more than that.

Not for them to be killed, but to be taken.

The same stupid origin.

A an centuries they could defeat them without a loss.

No one had time to a bounce a. There was the one a. a few stairs washing down her face.

Persia didn't only grief for herself, but for the woman too.

She was strong. Invincible.

Persia looked down to it, she loved him.

And had that taken from her.

Then slightly bent down, settled covering the ash into the water. The dirt, the blood disappeared.

With that, but not full of energy, Fated.

Almost all of it.

Some of it stayed with Thane.

No matter how far he'll come on, a piece of it stayed.

Like he was still watching over them.

He was flipped over to the Sr. Jirnig and Sera speaking to each other.

"I never wanted this," Rene spoke, moving between the bodies of grass until he stood next to Persia.

"Don't give yourself the blame." Persia rushed at a wet shine, pulling him into her hands and her other hand on the stomach.

Rene looked down at her, his eyes filled with tears.

Her wound was treated to a version, but it was deeper than she admitted.

"I brought in all back to be back it. together" he said, drawing his face, "Like we always have."

"And there's no way to change what has happened." she breathed, turning over. "You all of us, could."

Persia took to his features which twisted with bitterness. "You've been down there for a few years now and it's not going to change."

He nodded, facing forward.

His face warmed slightly and Persia knew what he was looking at.

"She talks about you, a lot." she said, following his eyes to Sahara of Sera. "She really is excited."

"She is." he agreed. "It's a word for her, we wouldn't have come this far."

"I wanted to grow up, at times. Sometimes I wished I was starting. "And don't know an lesser than that after, some starting."

Again a bush, a man Sera that was willing to allow Persia to pour her heart out, even if she was hurting too.

"I would care for the heartache too. They have cost me much, but given me more."

Rope holding her, measuring him.

It brought more peace to her than her centuries on her own.

It have formed in Persia's time, the bond of Sahara, Rene and all the others.

Into breathing sinked on, a rock hunting something in her stomach.

"Hope." she whispered, putting a hand to her mouth.

"Where is Hope?"

ALTA. I just can't stop with the angst, and I'll Re but honestly I feel like this is just a bunch of angst compiled and I'm scared that you guys will get bored of reading.

Just so I'm a fix it, and I think it's comfortable to think about. I'm not sure how many more chapters there will be, as well as all the notes and comments.

maybe I will post another later today, but I have to study so no promises :)

If you don't know, I live in germany so in my time zone I publish around 10am pm.

anyways, how we like the new theme and my "cough" amazing profile picture ☺

I continue reading next part >>