Chapter II

Espria Empire, 450.02

"I really don't want to wear it!"

"Oh, come on Spritz." Persia laughed, pulling the girl back towards her by her horns.

"Ow—Spritz. You know. Sorry will appreciate it."

Spritz groaned dramatically, throwing her head into the crook of her wings.

"I will get a…once the wedding is over."

"…Fine!" she replied, smiling into her face.

Both wanted to silence as Persia put the beautiful tiara on Spritz, adjusting the fabric she had spent with the other women.

It helped her calm.

She'd insisted on this—on Scires she had picked up on because she spent too much time around the citizens.

Kyah didn't like that.

Just the day before she told Persia that she needed to be more careful.

She stopped the humming and swallowed a clump down her throat.

"…Persia"

She raised her face to look back at the redhead.

"…Are you going to the ceremony too?"

Persia sighed under her breath and went back to smoothing a few imperfections.

"…I'm not sure."

Spritz took a step forward causing Persia's hands to drop into her lap. The girl looked down at herself, then back at her.

"…It's not your fault that you have control. No one blames you for it."

Persia took a couple breaths before she spoke with a lowered voice.

"Yes, I suppose you're right."

They both took the same moment.

"…thank you, Spritz."

"…We are your family." she replied, smiling lightly, "…and you are ours."

Persia returned the sy- expression and went to lay her head.

"…Woah, a big embrace mi?"

Spritz rolled her eyes, then flipped them towards the entrance.

"…do you know y-mmys, Kriga?"

The man laughed, then stepped in and let himself drop onto a chair covered in fabric and fur.

"…I'd bet the tomi you made, Avria?"

Persia looked back at Spritz, who demonstrated her clothing to make a show of it.

It reflected the light beautifully through the sun.

"…Ooh, it's so Lan's yet. But there was not enough."

"…Oh no, it was it." he clapped, gesturing to himself.

"…am I just upset that you didn't make one for me."

Persia laughed again, feeling her face heat a little. She hadn't been this happy in a long time.

"Of course, next time you will get the most eye-catching scarf all."

Kriga seemed to be taking this for more seriously than the other girls, getting up with a small chin.

"…Deal. Shake on it."

He walked towards the entrance, waving a arm over the top of his head.

"I will be seeing the both of you later."

Persia was about to say something when Spritz took the ex from her.

"You will, we'll be there."

The girl mischievously looked at her.

"That was funny. You know he won't leave me alone if I don't show up to the ceremony."

Spritz crossed her mouth and breathed in sharply.

"Oh- no- kataSpritz! I think of that! I am -wavery!"

Persia playfully poked towards her. Spritz running out of the tavern laughing.

Persia cleaned her throat as she sat down at the very back of the room, watching the ceremony closely.

Sims looked so beautiful.

She was a brilliant woman.

Her cheeks were pinched with a hint of red, flickering in the shine of the flames.

Her eyes glowed with passion and love.

It was what she deserved.

Persia was soon cussing illusions over the couple and the crowd.

Depicting beautiful pageants of vistes, the history of the world and the Eternals.

The corners of her lips curled as she watched them closely.

…is the ceiling more interesting than the wedding?"

Persia twitched, looking over to the right, …Somehow everyone bore standing mir.

Kyah grinned and walked over next to her.

"…but interestingly, Persia."

She stood there for a while watching Sorsi and Rark looking at each other. Persia still had her eyes on the woman next to her though. She were blue, with a scarf over her head.

"…I'm surprised you're not up there next to her you're his twin sister."

Kyah snickered, making the girl look away in embarrassment.

"…are here for Sims and Sorsi."

she replied, looking down at her hands, …And because Kriga wouldn't have it- no- stress."

Kyah laughed firmly, …Yes, I figured."

Meanwhile, his fierce and fiercely fluidy kissed. They were married now.

The first connection or ever 5000 years.

It made something stir in her heart.

…I want you to be happy here too."

Persia found Kyah's eyes again. Her face twisted into a sorrowful expression.

She didn't know what to say.

…Be are your family"

…You are not the first to have told me this today." it slipped from Persia.

…I don't like it when you others talk about me."

What- said yesterday doesn't mean I don't want you to have a life."

Kyah trudged her head towards starts and Sorsi. They were dancing now.

…I want you to be happy and also you should pay attention to yourself. You are harm yourself and other."

…I know, Kyle."

Persia pressed, trying to hide that her words punched her gut again.

…I understand, really."

Kyah elongated her chin higher.

She turned towards Persia with a motherly smile. Lip locked in understanding.

…We are your family, you don't need to fight alone."

Persia nodded.

Kyah looked at her for a while before she went o into the crowd.

Persia breathed out heavily, like she had been holding it the whole time Kyah talked to her. She was scared.

For no reason at all.

She crafted her chin into the corner and watched the night pass before her eyes.

It was a beautiful one, when the air was so still with sweet liquor and people spoke with ease. Laughs, arts got out from the open spot and mixed between the people.

She would have regretted if later if she hadn't at least done something.

Her eyes spotted Proxess talking to the Nations, deep in a conversation. He was clearly no longer fully minded.

Kriga and Sprtiz sing mirs each other- laughing about something that she couldn't make out between all the talking.

She had seen Sorsi and Rark go somewhere hours ago.

Probably somewhere discreet, and she turned to see Nathan.

Or your way to get your hands on something valuable?" he mirred, a scorching tint rose.

Persia's cheeks warmed angrily. …Sorrow

Persia couldn't will Kyah's eyes, the corners of her lips turned down.

…Jesus with stephinator suddenly agreed.

Persia stopped and stared at her in surprise.

Sleeve?

Nathan placed her hands to her hips.

Yes, Jesrra.

There's no mussy Persia signed, then put her hand over her mouth in realisation.

Nathan only shook her head playfully before grabbing at her hands and intertwining her fingers with hers.

Persia froze, then melted into the touch.

She looked at the girl, seeming her breathing as they started moving back and forth.

A rhythm settled between the two, falling into a pattern of movement.

Persia smiled as one of her hands fell around Nathan's waist and pulled her towards her.

Nathan placed one hand to her shoulder, letting her chin rest on her other.

Her heart beat darking, allowing herself to be fully guided by Nathan.

She enjoyed the security she had followed when she was around him.

She didn't know how long they stayed like this.

At some point she closed her eyes and they only opened when she heard someone clear their throat.

Persia's eyes widened.

Her head fl- as to look at Gigamesh who was obviously embarrassed to disturb them.

Spritz hi signed but mouthed the words along.

…I need your help Nathan. There is gone

Nathan nodded, her face falling into a stern look.

She stepped away, gave Persia one last squeeze with her hand before she went to Jemrod Gigamesh.

The space in front of her felt empty now.

Nathan could comfort her without words. She wouldn't know what to do without her.

She stood in the middle of the room for a long time lost in thought, the dancing in the middle.

What was that feeling in her chest?

A sonic itch not wrong when she put one on.

"Huh, I didn't believe you'll show up."

Proxss closed her eyes.

"I did."

"Why?"

She opened her eyes and his ed. "Because I was dragged here by chains."

Kriog listened at her.

He looked around the normal outfit, to her surprise. His shoulders she wasn't so much as they usually were.

…It's really that last bolstering that I showed up because I wanted to be sure!"

…You' don'twant to be here."

She opened her mouth to give him a response but closed it in confusion. his face was gentle. A little too gentle.

It felt like a trap.

Another trick to make her feel bad by seeming empathic.

…I am here for my family."

That word felt strange on her tongue.

It hadn't fallen from her mouth in a while.

It stin felt wrong.

She wanted to be back in her tavern.

…You shouldn't be here." he said, pronouncing heavily as he spoke. Persia was speechless, although she was used to it.

…I know." she inhaled, not having the energy to fight him.

Persia turned on her heels ready to walk down the path outside, but back already turned when someone tugged at her hand.

Her head turned with speed, going to spit something into Kriog's face,

…Kriog please, not."

…Jesrra with me."

Persia looked fine by up and down, pulled her hand out of his grasp and rubbed the back of her palm.

…Why would Jesrra with- yet?

she asked in confusion, pushing her face towards him.

Why would- puppet to Jesrra with- yet?

He glimpsed, then shrugged.

Persia couldn't believe her ears or eyes.

"…Answer me! she urged with an edge to her voice.

"Am I not allow with Mekkel, so why shouldn't I?"

…Because you're not family."

Really, it didn't even make sense.

"Is this an excuse to stab me or something?"

Kriog laughed, then reached for her hands again.

His touch was surprisingly light, humane. The skin on his hands so thin on his thumbs over the back of her hands.

…I won't stab you, Persia"

She couldn't remember the last time he had said her full name. No one said it like he did.

That title will be added unintentionally, he pronounced it with a shrug, but better.

She didn't know if she loved or hated it.

"Allow me a silence," he mumbled.

Persia stared at him, then realised he was still holding her hands.

She sighed, …short stories." he gave in.

Kriog's face twisted into a hateful smile, then slowly moved towards her.

Her hands first twisted for her reaction when he wrapped his fingers between hers, then he gave her a small nod and he rather on her wrist.

Persia held her breath, waiting for him to begin.

Or stab her.

She still believed that to be an option.

But nothing happened.

Her arms crawled around his shoulder and neck.

Kriog stopped ever closer, until his nose almost touched her ear. His guard was still up, but she tried relaxing into the touch.

It wasn't something she was used to.

It was completely ill- aren't from Mekkem right openess, or Kriga's malign or Sorsi's gentle hugs.

They started moving back and forth slowly.

She noticed how Kriog started nuzzing his hand gently up and down her back.

Persia shivered between the fabric of her tunic, feeling along her vertebrae.

It felt strange.

…Why are you like this?" she shuddered.

"Like what?" he hummed.

She raised her shoulders, then dropped them again.

He droned a short breath into her neck, making shivers travel down her back.

"I couldn't tell you how long I wanted to do this. "

"What?"

"Ask you for a dance."

Was he being serious?

Persia was never this confused at so last for words than at that moment.

Kriog hrumed his hips pent her ear, gently rising his chest up and down.

…I don't understand." it dipped in her lips, no volume to her voice at all.

Kriog just nodded in response.

Almost like a silent agreement.

I don't understand what'sMeant could have him in her mind.

…Do you think they will be happy?" he questioned, incredibly quiet. Quiet and tiern? I hope they will. I think they will."

And images of her kiss filled her head and it made her smile. Both dreamed that happiness. A life.

She pulled her face from his shoulder to meet his eyes.

His were closed.

…Kriog."

…I like it when you say my name. "

…Really? I don't think I ever said it that quiet, I feel like I'm always screaming it."

Persia was all to, lulling in the features of his face.

There was a crutch above his brow she hadn't noticed before.

And wouldn't leave if she hadn't been this close to him.

…but I do really like it." he said, his tone tepid.

…Even when you're angry at me."

…Kriog" she breathed, pushing his face lightened a little.

There was a slight arch to his lips, part of his dimples showing.

Persia was tempted to loosen her hand and run it over the rim of his face. The urge to trace his features with the sensitive tips of her fingers.

Finally, he opened his eyes and caught her looking.

A smile formed on his lips.

They were still moving in that slowly rhythm.

Persia took a deep breath.

Then she finally noticed.

Hell, it finally- clicked.

Her face, only inches before Kriog's,

And who he himself, all she could smell was the sweet liquor which he had drunk all night with the villagers.

The whole time she thought it was the sour aromas of the people.

But the intensity of it came right from him.

He wasn't changed or gentle.

Oddly drunk.

And Nathan was gone. There was no one he could be around, so he reached for her.

She was an idiot. A full on moron.

Why did she not question him?

It was worse than he made or blade clobbed through her heart.

…You are cruel, Kriog." she barked through gritted teeth, eyeing him his touch and stepping backwards until they were at least five feet apart.

She suddenly felt lightheaded.

The places where his hands had set were hot, slashed with their sudden vanish.

Her chest rose with heat, her eyes flipping back and forth between his features.

The sir above his brow.

Kriog dropped his head to the side, his arms still hanging in the air where they had rested on her body.

Rested on- bullsh-

Persia stopped her tears because of the anger for herself that she let is tricking in her veins.

…Persia?"

…Ah, my me? I'm choked…Never say my name again."

His mouth dropped.

…I hate you the whimpered, hugging her arms to her body because she suddenly felt cold.

Persia ran out of the tent, holding herself back from scratching her skin to forget the words.

…Remember to stay calm. Persyche don't want you to blow something up!"

Kriga called, anytime you won't hurt your family" she heard Shorg yell over her.

The fogg made her feel more and so soulless. However, she didn't give it up as it before.

Maybe she just pushed it away.

His words stung worse than usual.

She wanted him gone.

She wanted herself gone.

…Persia" Sorsi called on her.

Wherever she came from.

Her body refused to stop, but her head turned to face the girl.

She violently shook her face from one side to the other, tears spilling to the ground.

Spritz had seen it.

Kriga- dot-

Rark too, probably.

They all saw it.

Solis shook her throat as she ran along the path into the woods behind the taverns.

God, why was she always crying!

Why was she always hiding for this stupid ways even when he wasn't even trying?

Continue reading next part →