

Pursuing My Ex-Wife Isn' t Easy chapter 2139

After listening to Bonnie's plan, Joshua immediately sent a few of his men to pack Bonnie, Harvey, and June's bags and send them to Tea Cottage. When Bonnie finally finished her IV fluids in the evening, she felt a lot better.

With Joshua and Luna's help, she finally returned to Tea Cottage. Standing at the gate, a bitter smile crept across Bonnie's face as she stared at the familiar building She still remembered..

This was the place where Jim and her first slept together, a place that held too many memories of her and Jim.

This was where they first met and started dating.

The first time they cooked together. The first time they showered together... All of these memories surged into her mind as she closed her eyes. The image of Jim's cold and hostile attitude toward her that afternoon appeared before her eyes. 'Forget him,' Bonnie thought to herself.

It was time to let go. In a few days, after the person who raped Nikki was captured, and after she settled the issue of Harvey's guardianship, she would leave this city.

She, and the child inside her belly, would return to the place she belonged.

As soon as she thought of this, Bonnie let out an exhale and strode into the yard.

"Bonnie," a low, male voice rang out from behind her before she could reach the front door. This voice sounded both strange and familiar.

She glanced in the direction of the voice.

Christopher, who she had not seen in a long time, was standing underneath the trellis in the yard.

When he saw her looking at him, he smiled and walked over. “Long time no see.”

Bonnie instinctively took a step backward.

Truth be told, it had not been that long.

It had only been half a month since she last saw Christopher, which was when he broke her finger out of brute force.

Her finger had not fully healed yet.

As soon as she thought of the incident, as well as the time Christopher brought Jim with him to Joshua’s place to force her to return home with him, a surge of fear rose in her heart.

She pursed her lips and glanced at the bodyguards standing next to her. “How did he get in?

The leader of the guards quickly stepped forward and explained, “Mr. Roberts said that he’s here to visit Ms. June, and he gave his word that he wouldn’t hurt Ms. June, Master Harvey, or Ms. Shelly; that was why we let him in.

“After he came in, he kept to his word and didn’t try anything to harm them at all, and in fact, even helped the babysitter coax Ms. Shelly to sleep...so...”

The guard pursed his lips. “He also said he wanted to talk to you, but if you don’t want to see him, Ms. Bonnie, we’ll...” Bonnie furrowed her brows when she saw how terrified the guard looked. “It’s okay.” Then, she turned to look at Christopher. “What did you want to say to me?” Christopher perked up when he saw Bonnie finally talking to him. “I... First off, I want to apologize to you.

“I have a family history of psychiatric illnesses, and I knew that one day, I’d end up like my mother, which was why I remained by Aunt Rosalyn’s side all this while so that she could help me gain control of my disease through medicine. “However, after she fell into her coma, no one could formulate the medicine for me anymore. Even though I tried to make it myself, the drug didn’t come out as effective as how she made it ...and so, I lost control of my symptoms.” Then, he bowed at Bonnie and added, “Besides apologizing to you, I also want to tell you...”

He let out an exhale. “I hope you don’t give up on Jim too soon.

“The reason he doesn’t remember you is not that you don’t matter to him, but on the contrary, it’s because you matter too much...”

“I’m already in the middle of formulating the appropriate antidote for him, and if you wait a little longer—” “There’s no need for that,” Bonnie interrupted him curtly. “It’s not entirely bad that he can’t remember me.”

Christopher’s entire body stiffened when he heard Bonnie’s response. He stared at Bonnie dazedly, his eyes etched with sheer disbelief. “Haven’t you always wanted Jim to remember you? You...” “I changed my mind.” Bonnie curled her lips into a smirk. “It doesn’t matter whether he remembers me or not; it won’t change our outcome anymore. You don’t have to waste your time and effort anymore.” Then, she let out a sigh and continued, “I accept your apology, Christopher. Since you haven’t fully recovered from your episode yet, you should focus more on getting your rest instead of worrying about Jim and me.

“When... When your condition is stable, I’ll send June back to your side. After all, you’re her father and legal guardian, so I shouldn’t keep her by my side for too long.”

Besides, the baby in her belly would be born eventually, and not only would she return June to Christopher, but she would also try to track down Shelly’s birth parents.

Bonnie did not think she was capable of taking care of four children at the same time.

Christopher fell silent upon hearing this.

A split second later, he nodded and replied, “Alright. Thank you for helping me take care of June all this while.”

Bonnie was right. His condition was not entirely stable yet, and previously, he had hurt Bonnie during his psychotic episode. He was worried that if he were to lose control of himself again, he would hurt June, too. “No need to thank me. Get well soon.” With that, she circled past him and strode into the house. Christopher remained motionless as he stared at Bonnie’s retreating figure and heaved a great sigh.

At that moment, Jim was sitting in his study, looking through some information that his assistant had forwarded to him. When he received

Christopher's call, he froze for a second before finally picking it up, frowning

He never expected Christopher to ask about Bonnie as soon as the call connected.

This was the name that he wanted to hear the least. Jim let out an exhale (BV;EC) I said, a hint of displeasure in his tone, "Christopher, it's been a long time since we last met, and I thought you were calling to catch up with me, but this is what you want to talk about?"

He sneered and added, "If all you want to do is talk to me about Bonnie, I don't have anything to say. You should call me again another day when you finally think of something else to talk to me about." : Then, he hung up the phone. Standing outside Tea Cottage, Christopher let out a sigh as he gripped the phone in his hand, listening to the dial tone.

He knew that something bad must have happened between Bonnie and Jim. Not only that, but this problem was far bigger than what they had gone through in the past. He let out a sigh, returned to his car, and ordered the driver to bring him to the largest pub in Merchant City. As he did so, he dialed Jim's number again and said, "Jim, I can tell you're in a bad mood now. Why don't we meet for a drink? "Meet me at our old spot. I'll be waiting for you."
