

Reborn Baby - Chapter 611

Pablo had been annoyed by Timothy as he could see her around all the time.

She was either cleaning the yard or going to the kitchen to learn how to cook. She even tried to feed the eagle. Normally, his eagle wouldn't eat the food from others. However, she somehow gained its trust and successfully fed it. This made Pablo not so satisfied, and so he behaved stricter with the eagle. And his eagle was also very stubborn. It directly ignored him.

Timothy tried to let them make up with each other. She would take some meat to coax the eagle while taking snacks and comic books to coax Pablo.

Pablo was shocked by her ability to blend in.

As a total stranger, she befriended not only his eagle but also a few of his attendants. She even held some friendly competitions with the attendants.

Pablo could not believe she was the daughter of the lord of the Divine Immortal Island.

He couldn't relate this friendly idle woman with the merciless young general.

Once he told his attendants that this easy-going woman used to kill lots of their kin, they would never get along with her again.

The present peace was nothing but a temporary dream.

Since Pablo became the patriarch, he had known that he must shoulder the responsibility of protecting his tribe and merging the other two islands.

If he was to do so, there would definitely be a war.

Early in the morning, as the horn was blown, the hunt began. Pablo, in his hunting suit, saw Timothy was also equipped for the hunt.

"You want to go with us?" Pablo glanced at her. Although her skin was a little dark, she was still good-looking with her big eyes which were full of dynamic.

"Yes." she answered, "If someone wants to harm you, I can protect you. And then you may be touched and agree to cease the war between us."

Pablo was lost for words.

As the patriarch, there were lots of things he needed to attend to before everyone set off for the hunt. First, he went to worship the previous patriarchs and then went to distribute tents to the elders, the High Priest, and other people. Afterward, he would check on the security and the registration number. Finally, he would order his men to prepare the horses and weapons participants would need.

Since his tribe inhabited the Emerald Island, the hunting ground had been specially reserved. In it grew numerous plants and ancient trees, and lived many rare beasts. A few years ago, those beasts decreased in number, so the last patriarch built a reservation for them to multiply. Therefore, the hunting ground could be always filled with animals and covered by green.

Located to the east of the city, the hunting ground is about a hundred meters away from the city. Outside the hunting ground, there were already many people who had set up tents. An attendant had led the horses over. Suddenly, a wolf rushed towards and startled the herd of horses. The attendant hurriedly tried to calm the horses while someone shot an arrow at the wolf and killed it.

Everyone on the spot was terrified since they knew it belonged to Mr. Baron.

They looked at the person who shot the wolf. Holding an iron bow, wearing the hunting suit, and carrying a leather whip with him, he grinned and said, "My shooting skills were not as good as before."

It was Mr. Baron himself!

People around had come here early in the morning in the expectation of seeing Pablo. But now they were all stunned by Baron's astounding action.

As they all knew, killing animals before the patriarch showed up to announce the beginning of the hunt was an extremely disrespectful deed. However, as no one here was superior to Baron, they didn't dare to propose any opposing idea. The attendant who herded the horses could do nothing but comfort the horses and call others to take the dead wolf away.

"Zack, come and try this bow." Baron threw his bow to the masked man behind him. Then he took out the whip and fiddled it, which was a hobby of him. It was said that he enjoyed whipping prisoners in the dungeon. And he didn't stop until several elders persuaded him out of it. Later, he began to raise wolves.

Unlike Pablo's eagle who had accompanied him since childhood, Baron's wolves didn't share such a strong bond with Baron. Moreover, he never tried to establish loyalty in their hearts. The only thing he had done to his wolves was feeding them every day.. Therefore, the wolves were basically untamed.

Chapter 612

For the hunt, Baron brought six wolves with him. But as he just killed one, there were only five left, which was not a sign of luck for him.

However, Baron did not care whether it symbolized fortune or misfortune. He looked into the distance and saw the elders and the High Priest arrived. Dressed in a white robe, the Goddess got here on the carriage. Her long silver hair cascaded to her feet, swaying as the carriage moved.

Behind her was another carriage covered with sheers. Through the sheers, Baron saw the person sitting in it and became a little cheerful.

Zack had already drawn the bow and aimed it into the distance. He was strong enough to handle iron bows and arrows. Before he shot the arrow, he also saw the mysterious woman in the later carriage. Judging from the looks of the attendants, he was sure that she was Jennifer, Baron's biological mother.

It was said that she had committed herself to Buddha since after her husband died on the battlefield. She hadn't cared for her own son ever since. Therefore, Baron was brought up by the Second Elder who was also his grandfather.

Till now, Baron could only see his mother on important occasions with sheers between them.

Although he didn't say anything, Zack knew that he still longed for the care, at least a greeting of his mother.

But Baron's wish was never realized.

From the day that Zack began to serve Baron, he had never seen Jennifer or Baron visited each other. It was believed that Jennifer was so indifferent to Baron because she was wholeheartedly devoted to Buddha and did not care about the secular life.

Zack guessed that Baron never went to see her because he had received rejections from her.

Baron's eyes suddenly narrowed and smiled towards the distance. Zack looked over, and it turned out that Pablo finally made his entrance. His eagle hovered above everyone as if it was patrolling its territory.

And Vincent was pushed by Rex on a wheelchair after Pablo.

Behind them were some women wearing white robes and veils. They were previous patriarchs' wives. Baron should have called them aunts. But he never called his mother, not to mention them.

"The patriarch is here!"

"And so are the elders!"

"And look! It's the Goddess!"

It was rare for the residents on the Emerald Island to see the Goddess. Therefore, they were quite excited to see her. Some of them prayed at her, but none of them dared to look into her eyes.

As Pablo and the elders announced the prizes and rules of this year's Summer Hunting Festival., others went to the viewing platform with tea and snacks prepared for them.

Although the Emerald Island was small, it was populated with more than twenty-eight thousand people. And that number was yet to increase.

Today, almost everyone living on the island gathered here to take part in the hunt or to simply watch others compete. Crowds, tents, and partitions could be seen everywhere except for the giant viewing platform in the middle.

Rex took Vincent to one of the cubicles, attracting many people's attention. This was the first time Vincent showed up in public since Pablo accepted him as one of their tribe. Unexpectedly, he looked even more handsome than Pablo.

All the maidens were obsessed with his gorgeous look, imagining a romantic relationship with him. In spite of his disability, his appearance and status were able to win him a wife. Moreover, on an island where men were allowed to have plural wives, Vincent was even more attractive now that he had none.

The maidens stared at Vincent with obsession and attachment, dreaming about a love story with him.

Rex watched from behind for a moment. He drew the curtains to block their eyesight and sighed silently. He knew that Vincent would never develop a romantic relationship with any of the girls outside now that he had Emily.

After introducing the rules, Pablo and the elders let the participants clean their hands and humbly prayed to the ancestors for good luck. Summer Hunting Festival was a tradition, so as these ceremonies. Every procedure had remained the same since ancient times.. The elders would even ask the High Priest to predict the weather on the day of next year's hunt to make sure nothing would go wrong.

Chapter 613

Baron rubbed the whip in his hand and looked at Kason, who was behind a curtain and then said to the elders, "This is the first time that Kason participates in this kind of hunting. What's the point of just sitting there and watching? Why don't we play together?"

All the people were stunned in hearing his words.

Everyone in Emerald Island clearly knew that Kason was unable to walk, and could only rely on a wheelchair. How come Baron downplayed the invitation?

Was this a courtesy or a joke? Everyone looked at the sharp teeth of Mr. Baron and thought that it should be a courtesy.

The elders knew about Kason's legs, but Baron was right that this was the first time Kason had participated in the family hunting, so his own opinion should be taken into account.

Pablo could guess the result just by looking at the expressions of the elders. Just as he was about to retort, the curtain was lifted. He saw Kason sit on the wheelchair and look over indifferently saying "It's ok, let's play together."

When Baron saw his reaction, he licked the tip of his teeth and clenched harder the whip in his hand.

But Baron actually thought, "You asked for it. You can't blame me for it."

"Are you ok? Don't force yourself. Your legs can't take it." Pablo went off the stage to attend to Kason and asked in a low voice while the audience was cheering.

He was really concerned about him.

Even though Kason threatened his position as a patriarch, he sincerely liked Kason. He had longed for a brother since he was a child. Because he had been in poor health since childhood, his father wanted to have another son at that time to replace Pablo as the next patriarch. Therefore, Pablo was eagerly looking forward to his father's wives giving birth to a younger brother since he was a child. However, no younger brother was born till the end of his father's life. The medical equipment here was not advanced, and some women would get a lot of diseases after parturition. There were also some who suffered from different diseases because of the different temperature of the parturition environment. At that time, Pablo had some sisters, but then they died one after another, leaving him alone.

He longed for his brothers and sisters and finally found Vincent. At that time, he got a mixed feeling, but later, he came out to find him again and again.

There still existed a family who was of one blood to him in the world.

His brother Kason.

"It's fine. Riding a horse isn't a problem." Vincent paused for a moment, then looked at Pablo and asked, "Before you said that you don't want to fight anymore. Do you still think so now?"

Pablo was stunned for a moment. He didn't understand why brother asked this question on the day of the hunt. He couldn't help but turn his eyes to Timothy who was standing under the stage. She was still holding his bow and arrow, like an obedient attendant. However, her eyes were very bright, full of sincerity.

"Yes." Pablo gave a different answer as the one he said to Timothy, for he never disguised himself to Kason, "The people from the Divine Immortal Island and Paloma Island were all our people who ran out to found their own path. Maybe a hundred years ago, they once sat at one table and had meals together, but now they are clearly divided. No one dares to break in because of the rule."

"During the time I stayed in the Tea Manor, I had always been envious of the quiet and comfortable life there. I had always wondered if as long as there was peace, everyone would be able to live a life like before. Everyone could bask in the sun and plant tea together. They would go out and chat together. There was no hierarchy and superiority..."

After he finished speaking, he shook his head with a bitter smile and said to Vincent, "Let's go. I know that it's impossible. It was just a thought. Kason, I'll choose a docile horse for you later."

It was only when Vincent and the youths of the Emerald Island stood together and prepared clean their hands to show reverence and burn incense that Ferne and the others arrived so late.

"Why are there so many people?"

Both sides of the stands, including the front and back of the tents, were full of people. Many people were just sitting on the ground to save space. The built shelves were also full of people standing there.

This was also the first time Kamron had participated in a hunt like this. Seeing this scene, he couldn't help but shocked. A crowd with white robes and white hair. They didn't wear a wig this time. On one hand, it was hot. On the other hand, many servants also participated this time so there were many black-haired people.

When they were about to find a place to sit down, Baron somehow saw Emily who was curiously looking around in the crowd. He pointed at her and asked Pablo, "Patriarch, is the jackpot set? If not, how about we make her as a jackpot?"

All the people looked in the direction his finger pointed at and immediately fell silent.

Chapter 614

A very fairy-looking woman stood there, her long hair fluttering in the wind and her temperament outstanding. She was wearing a long blue dress with a thin rope tied around her waist, making her slim and graceful. As for her face, her oval face and the widow's peak looked a little cold. She looked back at the crowd very calmly, and showed a friendly and polite smile—the moment Baron extended his finger to Emily, Janessa had already moved quickly to stand in front of Emily, blocking the eyes of others.

At the same time, Armando, Jaquan, Ferne and the others formed a circle, surrounding Emily and Donna closely. As a result, the outside world followed Baron's line of sight and only looked at the most good-looking woman Janessa.

"Those are distinguished guests whom we cooperate with. The prizes are prepared by the elders. Mr. Baron, if you have any objections, you can tell the elders." Pablo smiled as he finished speaking. Then, he turned his head and raised his hand in the direction of Janessa and the others, indicating that they could find a cubicle to sit down.

He mentioned the elders to challenge Baron, so Baron naturally did not dare to disobey.

But ... Are they distinguished guests?

Baron thought about this word, and his eyes were still staring at Emily who was surrounded by the crowd. Even though they were separated by a distance, she was still eye-catching. There was clearly a relatively mature beautiful woman (Janessa) inside. However, it was strange. When Emily was running that night, her fleeting glance was deeply imprinted in his heart.

That pair of eyes was so beautiful that it was soul-stirring. For several nights, he could not help but want to snatch her away.

Baron licked the tip of his teeth and looked at Vincent who was sitting on the wheelchair with a look of regret. "That's really a pity. I heard that Vincent sent her back the next day. If she was with me, she wouldn't be able to leave the bed the next day."

He was trying to show off his ability between the lines and to ridicule Vincent for not being able to do that due to his legs, but he accidentally touched a raw nerve.

The girl was the only weak point beneath his hard armor, but she was insulted by Baron with such dirty words.

Vincent's expression did not change, but the black color in his eyes was thick and deep.

He had always had this expression, and Baron only felt that it was boring. He glanced at Emily from a distance before withdrawing his gaze and then obediently cleaned his hands to prepare for burning the incense.

Ferne and the others also took the opportunity to sit down in the cubicle below the stage. Although Emily was curious, she did not dare to look around. Just now, when everyone had formed a circle and surrounded her, she felt a little uneasy. Only when Donna brought her to the innermost seat and told her not to go out and to follow her did she realize that there seemed to be some danger ahead.

"Mom, what happened at the front?" She sat there and only saw a row of heads. She couldn't even see the stage.

"Nothing happened." Donna didn't explain much, because Emily wouldn't be able to understand it. She simply didn't say anything and just held her hand firmly and said, "Just don't run around."

Emily nodded.

Donna gave her another piece of candy and comforted her, "I'll let you come out to see the outside in a while."

"Alright." Emily concentrated on eating the candy.

Donna turned around and spoke to Janessa and the others in a low voice, "I met him on the road before. He kept staring at Emily. His eyes ... was like a wolf's eyes. Emily was very afraid of him."

"Don't worry. We have so many people here. He doesn't dare to do anything." Ferne said.

"Yes, we are all here. There is no need to be afraid," Jaquan agreed.

Donna was relieved.

After all the rituals were completed, Pablo ordered people to place the prize on the stage. It was a high-quality Night Pearl, about the size of a fist. In the daytime, people simply knew that the quality was high and the pearl was flawless, but in the night, it was full of light in the room.

Although the Emerald Island was close to the sea, the pearls that everyone had fished out from the sea over the past few years were all of a variety of shapes and sizes. They were either the size of a thumb or just mediocre pearls that were far worse than night pearls.

Therefore, very few people saw such a beautiful and luminous night pearl. They didn't even notice that there were other prizes placed on the side.

"After the given time, everyone should return with their trophies. The person with the most trophies will win." Pablo waved his arm and shouted, "The hunt begins!"

The horn was blown again. Four drums were placed in four directions—north, south, east, and west. As soon as the patriarch shouted, the four drummers waved their hands and beat the drums vigorously. The elders on the stage all went down, and a group of people wearing green-faced and fanged masks appeared on the stage, cheering and dancing.

The crowd was bustling with excitement.

Chapter 615

The group of people went to pick the horses and then selected the bows and arrows before riding into the green jungle.

Pablo said as he picked a meek horse for Vincent, "Vincent, just go have fun. It doesn't matter if you can't shoot any prey. I'll give you some."

He tried to keep his voice down and completely ignored the first place that everyone was after.

"Alright," Vincent replied. After that, Pablo and Rex smiled and helped him to get on the horse. It seemed that being needed by Vincent was a very satisfying and blissful thing.

Baron glanced at the Second Elder while getting on his horse. Then he casually checked the private box of Mrs. Britt with a curtain drawn.

Every year, Baron would coldly watch the mothers of other islanders caringly told their children to be safe and not to get hurt before the event started. Deep down, he wanted so bad to watch his woman come out of the box and say to him...

"Be careful, my son."

Even if it was just a brief reminder.

However, until Baron left on his horse, he did not hear anyone calling his name.

Pablo led the horse over with Timothy and her horse followed behind. There was no rule on Emerald Island that said women could not participate, but most of them were men. Thus, everyone thought she was just a servant of Pablo and did not pay much attention to her.

Pablo, on the other hand, frowned and glanced at her. He was worried that he would say something wrong in front of everyone, so he did not talk to her. He strode towards Ferne and Kamron and asked, "Do you want to participate?"

"Don't we need to clean our hands for the next ceremony? I'd like to keep my hands that way." Although Ferne said so, his expression suggested that if Pablo invited him again, he could only take the plunge.

"You can just go over there and wash your hands. There's no need to attend the ceremony together. Do you want to go? There are still a few horses over there." As Pablo raised his arm and caught the falcon, Timothy quickly held up the small bucket she carried and threw a piece of meat into the falcon's mouth.

Pablo gently swung his arm. Then the falcon spread its wings and ascended into the sky. It swept across the green forest with sharp gazes, and let out a piercing cry to send the location of the small animals to Pablo.

Pablo blew a whistle with his index finger, and the falcon responded with a shriek.

The islanders all cheered and shouted, "All hail the lord!"

Ferne was somewhat moved by this atmosphere. He looked eagerly at the expressionless Noah.

"Baron has already gone in the jungle. He would not come out for a while. Besides, there are so many people here. I don't dare him to do anything reckless. We can also go in and have some fun. Don't you think?" Ferne persuaded as he peered at Janessa.

Janessa was about to reply when she saw Emily, who was chewing the candy and asking Donna softly, "Mom, is that a real horse? Can I touch it?"

Donna did not know what to answer it.

Pablo stepped up and said to her, "It's a real horse. Come and feel it."

Timothy looked at Emily warily, not sure if this Emily was 'seven years old' or 'eighteen years old'.

However, she had this innocent look while chewing the candy, which was just how she was deceived that night.

Noticing that Emily's eyes were full of joy, Donna finally nodded. "Go." Then she looked at Janessa, Ferne, and the others, and said, "Go ahead. It's fine. Young people deserve to have some fun."

"Really?" Emily asked happily.

Donna was dumbfounded. She meant Janessa and the others, and she didn't want Emily to go. Besides, she just promised to let her touch the horse, not agreed to let her go with them?

"Let's go together. We'll take care of her anyway." Janessa smiled and put her arm around Emily's shoulder.

Ferne stood up in high spirits. "Yeah, we have so many people to watch her."

Donna glanced at Emily again. Her eyes were sparkling as if she was waiting for her mother's consent. Donna smiled reluctantly and said, "OK, but don't cause trouble for them."

"Sure!" Emily exclaimed happily.

Noah pinched the space between his eyebrows. He always had bad sleep quality but it was the first time that he had not slept much throughout the night. Moreover, he thought that Ferne would have to rest here for at least a few hours today. To his surprise, when Ferne heard about the hunting festival, he immediately became excited. So, Noah did not know whether he was bearing the fatigue or he had infinite energy at youth.

Janessa agreed. Armando naturally had no objections. In addition, Ferne and Noah would go. So did Jaquan and Emma. Only Kamron and bodyguard Tom were left .... No, bodyguard Tom also raised his hand high.

Chapter 616

Kamron was speechless.

Regretting bringing this bodyguard out thousands of times, Kamron felt despair.

Soon enough, Tom reached out and raised Kamron's hand, "And us!"

He didn't even leave an opportunity for Kamron to refuse.

Thus, they quickly made the decision.

"Put on that. Be careful not to be shot by an arrow." Pablo asked the attendant to bring seven or eight armors over, which were used to protect their chest.

After being dressed up, they went to clean their hands and burn incense. Then, they picked their own horses. Apart from Noah and Emily, as well as Jaquan and Emma, who shared a horse with a couple, the rest of them followed behind Pablo each on a horse.

Each of them carrying bows and arrows on their backs looked very imposing as if they were going to win the title of warriors. In fact, other than Noah and Emma who had practiced archery before, the rest of them might only barely be able to pull the bow full, and whether they could shoot would depend on God's Will.

The hunting ground was very large, and the sound of horns surrounded them. When Ferne and the others rode their horses in, if they did not look at the stands behind them, they would feel as if they had entered a maze. There were lush flowers and trees everywhere. If they went deeper, they would even encounter one or two small lakes. This hunting ground was too big. It was obvious that when the master of the Emerald Island found this place, he had protected it very well. This place was just like a primeval forest. Were not they riding horses, they might be even shorter than the green grass.

Their group was the last to arrive, so they didn't meet other people as they came in. The deeper they went, the louder the noise was.

"It ran! It ran! It ran to the east!" Someone shouted.

Then something ran over and rustled under the green grass. The falcon in the sky let out a cry. Pablo reached out his hand in front of Timothy, indicating her to give the bow to him.

Timothy picked up the bow and was about to hand it over when she saw that thing shoot out. It was a creep rabbit. It was gray and big. There was no time to think twice. Upon seeing it, Timothy pulled out an arrow from behind. With the sound of an arrow shooting, the creep rabbit was already lying on the ground motionlessly.

After shooting the rabbit, Timothy remembered her identity and quickly handed the bow to Pablo.

A few islanders who had seen Pablo, caught up, bowed to him, and began to flatter him, "My Lord, you are good at archery!"

Pablo looked at the bow in his hand and fell into deep thought for the first time.

There were all kinds of animals here. Some were oddly shaped birds and some were sitting in groups on trees. When they saw people picking up arrows, they would dive into the trees. There were also some small animals who loved digging holes. When they saw people coming, they plunged into the soil. However, they were strangely big.

Some of them might be ugly yet fierce, but Emma couldn't bear to kill them even with bows in hand. And she would leave the bows and arrows to Jaquan. Anyway, he couldn't hit them.

Words failed Jaquan.

'I need my dignity, alright?'

Noah had never drawn his bow all the way here. Ferne had the intention to compete with him, but he could not find a single animal. Every time, the animal was either killed by Pablo or was overtaken by others. That made him a little eager to try.

Emily, who was sitting in front of Noah, suddenly pointed to the grass ahead and said, "There's a sound there."

Ferne immediately aimed his arrow in that direction and said to Noah, "Let's see who gets the first shot."

"Shoot, then." Noah felt that his words were a little ambiguous. Just as he was about to add something, he saw Ferne stare at him, his ears suddenly turning red.

Noah was speechless.

A rustling sound came from the grass, and then an arrow was shot out. It was Ferne's arrow. He was probably a little nervous, so he missed it. Or maybe Noah's words distracted. He could not help but say to Noah, "I missed it. Now you shoot!"

Noah was lost for word.

"Can you two do it? If you can't, I'll shoot." Janessa couldn't help but say.

Noah was speechless again.

So was Ferne.

So was Armando.

However, Ferne's arrow startled the animals in the grass.

It was grayish-blue, standing on the ground. Its teeth stood out fiercely, revealing the four sharp fangs ahead. Facing danger, it glanced at the people in front of it. After coming out of the grass, it raised its neck and howled towards the sky.

It turned out to be a wolf!

Chapter 617

How could wolves appear here?

Almost all the wolves in the hunting ground were kept captive by Baron. Only a few of them were sent out today for the sake of the ceremony. But now ... the entire hunting ground was filled with the howls of wolves.

It sounded like there were at least a hundred adult wolves.

Did Baron let the wolf in?

Pablo's expression changed in an instant. Then, he thought of something and immediately rushed forward on his horse. He put his index finger to his lips and let out an urgent whistle. When the hovering eagle heard the order, it flew low, as if it was searching for someone. However, an arrow broke through the air. The eagle dodged quickly, but the arrow still scratched its wings. Then, its whole body swayed, letting out a weak cry.

In the forests a thousand meters away, Baron put down the bow in his hand. He stood there and stretched his neck. Then he took out another arrow from the quiver. Just as he was about to aim at the eagle again, he heard Zack say, "Someone is coming."

Baron looked at the eagle flapping its wings as it flew into the sky. He licked its teeth, "let you go for now."

On the other side, Pablo heard the eagle's shrill and short cry and immediately rode on his horse to run. Along the way, he shouted in the forest, "Vincent!"

What was the purpose of Baron letting the wolf in?

"Kidnapping Vincent and then using Vincent to threaten him to give up the position of the patriarch?" thought Pablo.

However, if such a person was allowed to ascend to the position of patriarch, he would be unable to protect anyone, including Vincent.

"What's wrong?" Timothy asked when she saw that Pablo's expression changed.

She originally thought it was normal to see wolves on the hunting ground.

"Wolves should not appear here..." Pablo said in a low voice, but then suddenly turned to shout at her, "You go out. Let the elders send a signal to end the hunting!"

"What's wrong with wolves? Can't we kill them?" Timothy asked nervously.

"Not only one wolf, and..." Pablo looked at the startled birds in the trees not far away and shouted at Timothy without turning his head back, "Go! Inform them to send the signal! Let everyone leave! The hunting ends!"

Moreover, before Pablo could finish speaking, Timothy understood that it was likely that those wolves not only ate animals but might even eat humans.

Timothy threw all her quivers to Pablo. When she was ready to go back, Pablo pulled the rein of her horse. He took out a dagger and handed it to Timothy. "Take care."

"Thank you," Timothy smiled at him.

"I should say that. Don't die on the way." Pablo had a complicated expression on his face. He was in danger now, but he had to rely on the help of the enemy. Moreover, he wasn't even sure if he could believe Timothy. What if she took the opportunity to join hands with Baron. No, she was here to seek peace.

He had no choice but to believe her for once.

Although Pablo's words were not pleasant to hear, it was out of concern. Timothy only smiled and pulled the rein of the horse to change directions. The horse quickly returned.

When Timothy returned, she realized that she had been chasing after Pablo in a hurry and had forgotten that there was still a wolf behind her. Moreover, she overestimated Emily's strength. Although Emily and the other people had the advantage in numbers, there were only a few that could fight.

Eight minutes ago when the wolf came out of the bush, Ferne and the others subconsciously held their breath.

No one dared to move. It was only when the wolf raised its head and let out a wolf howl that Ferne asked, "Did it call its companions?"

"Don't act rashly," Noah said in a deep voice.

As Pablo quickly left when he heard the wolf howls coming from all directions, Timothy also followed. Janessa wanted to shout at them at that time. However, when she met the wolf's eyes, she subconsciously gave up calling them.

That wolf stared at Janessa. Perhaps because she was holding the bow and arrow in her hand, the wolf mistakenly thought that the arrow that shot it just now was shot by her. It bared its teeth and fiercely pounced on Janessa.

The horse under Janessa was startled by the wolf. It raised its front hooves and head high. Janessa, who was sitting on the back of the horse, was caught off guard and fell off the horse. Fortunately, she was not trampled by the horse. Even so, everyone present was shocked.

"Janessa!" Armando shouted in panic and immediately jumped off his horse.

Janessa lay there in pain, feeling as if her chest and lungs were trembling, her ribs seemed to have broken, and she could not move at all.

After the frightened horse got rid of Janessa, it quickly ran into the forest, along with Armando's horse. Noah and Ferne's horses were also agitated, constantly swinging their hooves to run.

After the wolf saw Janessa fall, it directly rushed in front of her. Janessa could not move and felt dazzled. She was in a state of loss when the wolf pounced in front of her.

One of its claws almost landed on Janessa's neck. At that moment, Armando jumped over and kicked the wolf. At the same time, Noah and Ferne also came to protect Janessa.

The wolf seemed to target Armando. It lowered its head and bared its teeth as it slowly approached. Armando did not have any weapons in his hands except the quiver on his back.. He pulled out an arrow from the quiver and swung it at the wolf.

Chapter 618

The rest of the people also drew their arrows from their quivers and faced the wolf in unison. However, in less than two minutes, rustling sounds came from all around. Noah and Ferne kept their eyes on their surroundings. Emma and Jaquan turned around and asked Janessa with concern, "Can you move?"

Armando handed his arrow to someone else and entered the guard circle. He hugged Janessa and was about to get up.

"Don't help her up for the time being." It seemed to be Noah's voice, but Armando could no longer distinguish it. At this moment, his mind was in chaos, and his hands were trembling slightly.

"Check if there are any fractures."

"What about your head? Are you dizzy?"

"Janessa? Can you speak?"

Janessa just felt noisy around. Many people were talking, but she was so painful that she could not make a sound. After she came to her senses, she opened her eyes and looked at Armando whose eyes were full of fear as he held her hand and kept comforting her. "It's okay. Don't be afraid." He kissed her forehead and over and over again. His voice trembled imperceptibly, "I was scared to death ... Janessa, and I was scared to death..."

Janessa's heart seemed to have been poked by something. At that moment, her heart was incredibly soft. The feeling was very strange and abrupt, almost breaking through her chest.

The moment she fell off the horse, she thought she was going to die. Only now did her internal organs slowly feel a burning pain. She took a long breath but still could not speak. The ribs in her chest seemed to be broken, and every breath she took was accompanied by unspeakable pain.

The rustling sounds around them grew louder. Soon after, two mature gray wolves jumped out. Their fur was grayish-blue, one on the left and one on the right as they approached the guard circle. The horses retreated uncontrollably. Kamron and bodyguard Tom sat on the horses, holding the reins of the other horses. On the other side, Emily was also sitting on the horse. Noah was worried that the wolves would attack the people on the ground, so he did not let her down.

It was indeed a wise decision judging from the current situation.

"Quick. Find a way to bring Janessa onto the horse." Noah said as he handed the rein in his hand to Ferne, "You take them away. I lure away these wolves."

"How are you going to draw them away?" Ferne's heart skipped a beat.

Noah, however, took the arrow from the quiver and was about to leave. He frowned and said in a low voice, "I have plenty of ways. Hurry up and take them away."

Armando got on the horse first, and then Jaquan and Emma tried to lift Janessa up Armando's horse. It was a little strenuous. Noah also supported Janessa with one hand, and Armando quickly picked her up.

However, three wolves formed a circle and got closer.

Armando's horse let out a cry. Its four hooves were in a mess as it dodged the wolf's approach. However, Armando, who was on the horse's back, had to hold the rein with one hand and hug Janessa with the other. He had to maintain his balance and could not fall. Obviously, he could not hold on any longer.

The wolf was very vengeful. It thought that Janessa had shot it with an arrow, and then it was kicked by Armando, so it bared its teeth even more fiercely and wanted to charge at Armando's horse.

Noah didn't even think about it, he directly picked up the bow, nocked an arrow, and shot out.

The arrow was shot between the wolf and Armando. Taking advantage of the moment when the wolf was shocked by the arrow to retreat, Noah shouted to Armando, "Hurry!"

Armando clamped his legs on the horse's belly.

The horse had been frightened by the wolf. Now that it could escape, it ran as far as it could and disappeared within a minute.

The rest of them were ready to mount their horses again.

However, after Noah's arrow shot out, the encirclement was shrunk in a moment, and the three wolves were getting closer and closer.

When Jaquan was about to take a step towards his horse, a wolf stared at him and slowly approached. Other people standing beside their horses suddenly stopped moving.

"I'll lure them away. Take them and get on the horse and leave quickly." Noah said quickly, immediately turned over his horse and shot an arrow at the wolf with his hand on the bow, which hit the wolf this time.

The other two wolves immediately rushed over, but they did not pounce on Noah but the few people on the ground.

Emily was immediately scared to cry. After all, she was only seven years old mentally. The surprise and novelty of seeing a wolf had been replaced by fear.

It was too late to shoot an arrow. Noah jumped off the horse again. The moment he landed on the ground, he kicked the wolf. Then, he took an arrow and blocked it in front of him. He shouted at Jaquan and the others, "Get on the horse! Hurry up!"

Jaquan and the others took the opportunity to get on their horses.

"Come up!" Ferne shouted as he patted his horse.

One of the wolves was injured, while the other two desperately rushed to Noah. It seemed that they wanted to take revenge. Noah shot an arrow at the wolf but did not have the chance to pull it off. He turned over and saw Ferne reach out to him. He quickly rushed over and reached out to hold Ferne's hand.

The three wolves bared their teeth and fiercely bit the horse that Ferne was sitting on. The horse was frightened and kicked another horse that just happened to be Kamron's. The horse staggered and almost fell. However, it managed to stabilize itself. However, Kamron fell off the horse.

At the same time, Ferne was also lifted off by the horse. Fortunately, Noah held his hand and pulled him into his arms.

However, the few frightened horses suddenly ran out uncontrollably. The moment Ferne was lifted off, he thought that it was not good!

Chapter 619

The horse hissed. Ferne looked up again, and he was panicked and helplessly shouted, "Noah! Emily!"

Emily had been crying in a low voice on the back of the horse until the horse suddenly ran out uncontrollably, then she hugged the horse's neck in fear, crying miserably.

Jaquan and Emma sat on a horse. When they saw Emily's horse running out of control into the forest, they immediately chased after it without thinking. Noah and Ferne also wanted to mount their horses, but their horses had just been bitten on the front hooves by a wolf. The front hooves were bloody, and the horse could no longer bear the weight of two people. It slowly walked back. Ferne anxiously wanted to chase, but Noah pulled him back.

"It's useless even if you catch up with it. It can't even carry you."

Tom was trying hard to pull Kamron onto the horse. However, Kamron was wary of the wolves behind him. The more nervous he was, the more likely he would make mistakes. He failed to step on his foot several times. This horse was relatively tall. He could only reach the saddle by standing on tiptoe. However, at this moment, the horse was so scared by the wolf that it kept turning. And Kamron kept turning with it, and he was exhausted.

Tom was afraid that the horse would run away, otherwise, he would have come down to help them a long time ago. Now that he saw that Noah and Ferne were surrounded by wolves, he was also very anxious. He wanted to pull Kamron up and deal with the wolves himself.

"What should we do now?" Ferne asked Noah while watching the wolves.

"Get on the horse first."

Now, there was only Tom's horse left, and Kamron was trying hard to mount up. When he heard this, he immediately turned back and looked at Noah in shock. He doubted that Noah could throw him to the wolf and help Ferne get on the horse.

However, Noah only glanced at him, and then retracted his gaze. His expression changed, and Ferne who was close to him understood his gaze. He did not consider getting on the horse.

Indeed, it was not enough to have only one horse.

Noah would have a battle with these three wolves. Ferne began to sweat when he thought of that. He used to be in the police station. He had witnessed that his colleague was bitten on the neck by a wolf dog. Until now, he was a little scared when he saw animals like dogs. Now, the one in front of him was not a dog but a wolf! It was an adult wolf that ate people!

It was at this time that Timothy appeared. She did not have much time to stay as she watched the men fight the three wolves under their horses. Without hesitation, she got off the horse and hurriedly handed the reins to Kamron. Then, she picked up the dagger and rushed to a wolf. She was very fast. It was obvious that she had undergone special training or had been on the battlefield. She held the dagger and stabbed the wolf.

Ferne was stunned. Noah was very cooperative and launched an attack on the other wolf. The injured wolf watched as its two companions were killed and slowly took a few steps back. Ferne picked up the bow on the ground and shot an arrow at it. It was so close, but the arrow was still off.

While he was upset, the wolf actually charged at him fiercely. It opened its mouth and bared its fangs. He thought of his previous colleague being bitten. Ferne stood there in a daze and forgot to dodge.

It wasn't until Noah grabbed the wolf by its neck and threw it out that Ferne came back to his senses. He looked at Noah who was about to say something, but he noticed the blood on his hand. He shouted, "You are injured!"

"It's fine." Noah frowned, and then he said to Timothy, "Thank you, can you find us a horse?"

Timothy quickly mounted up her horse. She didn't have much time left, but after hearing this, she thought for a moment before saying, "I'll try."

As she spoke, she formed a circle with her index finger and thumb in her mouth and blew a strange whistle. The sound was very loud, but not long after, a horse ran over. It was not the horse they had here before, but someone else's horse.

Noah pulled on the reins and quickly thanked Timothy.

"Hurry up and get out. Pablo said that there are wolves here. The hunt has ended. I have to get out and send a signal to the people in the room."

After saying that, Timothy quickly rushed out with the horse.

After Noah got on the horse, he stretched out his hand and pulled Ferne up. He let Ferne sit in front of him on the horse. Before Ferne came up, he did not feel anything, but now he felt like he was sitting on pins and needles. The horse moved slightly, and the person behind him and his some part was very close to him.

"Let's go find Emily. You guys can go back." After Noah bowed to Kamron, he rode his horse and rushed inside.

Kamron was just about to answer them when he saw Tom got on his horse and chase after him.

"He asked us to go back. Didn't you hear?" Kamron pulled the reins and tried to control the horse below.

"Mr. Kamron, if it wasn't for saving you just now, they would have run away. Moreover, they went to save Emily as soon as they escaped from the wolves. They are so brave, and we should also be brave."

Kamron: "Are you saying I am not brave?"

"Mr. Kamron, my point just now was to save Emily," Tom was panicked.

"You said I am not brave?"

Chapter 620

Outside the hunting field, on a huge platform, no one knew when the several white-robed attendants had appeared. They were busy putting a huge white cloth on the platform. Then, they placed a projector in the middle of the platform. Under the puzzled gazes of the elders, they pressed the switch. The image of the hunting field immediately appeared on the white cloth.

However, with so many people in the hunting field, it was impossible to show all of them. Right now, the one it focused on was Baron who was preparing to hunt the falcon.

The Second Elder's expression changed. He stood up suddenly and questioned the attendant, "Who told you to do this?"

The white-robed attendant was startled. He immediately knelt on the ground and replied, "It is Pablo. He said that this is an invention from the outside world. It allows everyone to see it here. It's like that everyone was participating."

His voice became smaller and smaller, and he was almost was trembling facing the Second Elder.

"Turn it off!" The Second Elder was so angry that he wanted to turn it off, but he didn't know how. However, the other elders, including the High Priest, saw that Baron was aiming at the falcon. The First Elder directly held the Second Elder's hand and asked, "Why are you so nervous about it?"

The Second Elder's hands under his white robe trembled inexplicably.

"Let's take a look first." The High Priest also spoke.

The Second Elder fell back into his chair. He was desperate. He couldn't help but look at a room covered with gauze. In the end, he let out a long sigh quietly.

When the people below the stands saw this scene, they all gasped at the same time. Obviously, they could not believe that Mr. Baron would do such a thing. But after thinking about it, they felt that it made sense. Perhaps Mr. Baron pretended to shoot Pablo's falcon. Then he made an excuse that he did not see it clearly and thought it was a bird, so he accidentally shot it.

After all, the falcon was Pablo's, and Mr. Baron shot the falcon was just like shooting Pablo.

Everyone was shocked by this thought and immediately looked at the projection on the stage.

He didn't know how this scene was taken. It seemed to be taken by someone very close to Mr. Baron. The camera fixed on his face or back, as well as his profile when he raised his head to shoot falcon.

Until someone said, "People are coming."

Only then did the elders vaguely recognize that it was Zack's voice.

Then, the figure of Kason appeared. Before the audience could feel how elegant and handsome Kason was riding on a horse, they saw Baron shoot an arrow at Kason. Kason obviously did not expect that. His eyes widened, and then he covered his heart and fell on the horse.

The tens of thousands of people below the stage all stood up in an uproar.

The expressions of the elders also changed. Everyone understood why the Second Elder was so nervous just now. However, they did not have the time to punish him. They only waved their hands and called for the attendants. Then, they ordered people to start firing signal flares towards the sky, announcing the end of the hunt.

When the person who hit the drum saw the signal bullet, he quickly swung his arm and knocked on the drum. The sound of the drum was a call for people's safe return.

As soon as Timothy arrived at the stage, he saw the signal flare in the sky. Before she could say anything, she saw a group of well-trained soldiers appear on the pictures of the projection. They took off their white robes and revealed their armor and weapons. Each of them held knives and surrounded Mr. Baron and the attendants behind him.

It was Pablo's brother, Vincent!

Timothy recognized him, but was he dead?

In a short moment, many thoughts came into Timothy's mind, and she thought that if Vincent died, then there would be no peaceful time in Emerald Island and the Divine Immortal Island in a hundred years or even a thousand years.

Because if Baron became the patriarch, then there would be no peace in the three islands.

Everyone knew that Baron was bloodthirsty, raising wild wolves, abusing captives, and extremely brutal.

Timothy did not dare to think any further, pulled the reins and quickly ran into the forest.

The moment she turned around, Pablo appeared on the screen.

Pablo had followed the signal of the falcon and rushed over on his horse. He thought that Vincent was here. In fact, Vincent was indeed here. However, he did not expect that he was stabbed. He fell on the back of the horse, motionless.

"Vincent!"

Pablo anxiously kicked off the horse's belly and was about to rush over, but he was surrounded by Baron's people, and an arrow shot through the air. Pablo jumped off the horse to avoid it.

The people below seemed to be waiting for this moment. The moment he jumped down, they immediately surrounded him.. All of them had knives in their hands, one on the left and one on the right, placed on Pablo's neck.
