

Right Person 505

Chapter 505 What Have You Done to Hayden?

Staring at Queenie's hypocritical look, Colton grunted coldly on the inside while maintaining a nonchalant expression on his face. While he was initially skeptical about Hayden's speculation that Queenie was trying to harm him, the lady's fake acting confirmed his suspicion.

"Sure, Hayden is in his room on the second floor. You can take a look at him there. Meet me here when you're done." Colton showed no interest in accompanying Queenie to visit Hayden.

Queenie nodded and made her way upstairs while Colton stood there for a while before heading to the stairs on the other side. Knowing where Hayden's room was, Queenie made sure there was no one else around and decided to stop pretending.

Upon arriving at the child's room, she opened the door and was able to immediately hear incoherent moans. Queenie then took a closer look at Hayden, noticing his soulless eyes as he drooled with his mouth open like an actual victim suffering from a mental impairment. However, Queenie still remained wary, slowly stepping forward while she called out to the child in a probing manner. "Hayden?"

his hands while moaning incoherently.

gone nuts? Can't he even talk now?" She stepped closer to Hayden and kept her eyes on his fair cheeks.

instant, Hayden's eyes were filled with tears shortly before he broke down and cried out loud. As a child, his cry, coupled with his high-pitched voice, sounded so loud even though she was quite some distance away. As soon as she heard the boy's cry, she immediately got up and pretended to comfort the boy. "Alright, be a good boy, Hayden. Don't cry. I saw a mosquito on your waist, and was helpless and annoyed because she was worried that it would draw the rest of the Gardner Family members to her. She then thought of on her. At that moment, Queenie's face changed as she almost puked and went weak in her knees, collapsing