“Just pretend! No one deserves my mom,” Theodore replied casually.

Really? Looking at the message sent by Theodore, Alice smiled with her lips upturned, like a sweet doll coming to life. From her information, the man was not normal.

Arthur, chairman of Favonnis Corp, Edwin Davies’s third son, and Supervisor of the Athegate Branch. He worked resolutely and cautiously who ran the branch in Athegate three years ago. Only in a few years, he succeeded in making it one of the first-class financial companies and going public stably. And his former resume was more amazing.

At the age of 15, he entered MIT where he tackled many difficult scientific problems with his supervisor. He was the famous boy genius at MIT. It was a pity that he just returned home after graduation. Otherwise, he might be an influential man in the academic world.

“So what are you going to do next?” Alice asked Theodore curiously.

Theodore, who had obtained what he wanted, just smiled and sent a word to her which made her mad—Guess!

The next morning, Lucia came to wake Theodore up in his room and found that he was sleeping deeply with an iPad in his arms, seemingly smiling. Lucia was amused by him. What a “naughty” boy...

After washing and having breakfast, Lucia arrived in company with Theodore.

Actually, Theodore was at the age of going to kindergarten. Lucia had planned to arrange it, but she didn’t expect that JTP Group put her through hell. Now, she had no time to think of this, thereby intending to ask Nia to deal with it.

Hardly had Theodore reached the company when he found himself a place for fun. And Lucia dedicated herself to the case of CTD.

As Lucia became busy, Theodore began his plan.

Sitting on the soft crouch in the lounge, Theodore contacted Alice at once. After a while, the location information was sent to Theodore’s iPad. He shouted a “yea” excitedly and then observed the surroundings carefully.

He was the only person in the lounge.

“Good chance!” He looked out stealthily and quickly passed Lucia’s office when there was no one in the corridor. He then took an elevator. Nobody knew it.

Getting out of the mansion, he hurried to the curb and struggled to hail a cab. Many cars whizzed by him, but finally, there was one willing to stop.

“Great.” Theodore sighed with relief as he saw the cab stop completely. He hurried to open the door with all his strength and got on.

The driver saw the boy who had been in the back seat, frowning. He stopped just because of good intentions, thinking that it was a missing child. But he seemed not that kind of child at all...

“Kid, do you get lost with your family?” The driver turned to look at Theodore and asked.

“No!” Theodore raised his head and replied without hesitation. Then he told the location Alice gave him to the driver, “Please send me home. My father is at home.”

Although the driver was still puzzled, he finally started the car.

After about an hour, the cab stopped in front of the gate of Fraganerde Hall, which was an area of magnificent villas. Then they were stopped by a security guard.

“I get off here, thank you.” Theodore took out the phone to pay the fare and got out of the car after thanking the driver.

“Sir, I’m gonna go in here,” said Theodore with a smile. Facing the security guard, he was still composed.

“Child, do you come to find someone?” The guard was not that old ddd treated him very kindly.

“Yes. My uncle is Arthur. He lives in Building 3, Block B. Can I get in now?” Theodore raised up his smiling face and said.

“Really?” The guard stared at his face for a while. He knew Arthur, and the boy was a bit like him. However, he couldn’t let him in easily. Here was the area for wealthy people. If he wasn’t careful enough, he might make a serious mistake.

Theodore nodded firmly, and the guard told him he would give a phone to Arthur for confirmation. Theodore responded “OK” tactfully, but he then rushed in as the guard turned around. He was small enough to get through the gap of the gate and quickly ran to Block B according to the location information.

“Hey, stop there!” the guard never expected it. As he reacted to chase him, the boy had run far away from him.

Block A... Building 1, Building 2, Building 3... Theodore observed the mark of villas on both sides while running. As he saw Block B, he became excited and sped up, even the guard failed to catch up with him. Finally, he found Building 3, Block B!

Like a shooting arrow, Theodore rushed to the door of Building 3. But soon he had a hardship. The ring bell was too high for a four-year-old boy who was only 100 centimeters in height. It was fatal.

However, the guard almost caught up with him. Instead of thinking about it, Theodore struggled to jump and touch the bell. And he made it with effort.

He turned back and looked at the guard who was only tens of meters away, praying that the door would open in the next moment!

“Kid, why do you...” The guard out of breath finally reached the lawn outside Building 3. As he intended to stop Theodore’s trick, the door was open.

Theodore only focused on the guard getting closer to him and stepped back unconsciously. But what he touched made him feel strange. He raised up his head and found a pair of deep eyes.

Arthur stood at the door, staring down at the boy who leaned against his leg with his cold eyes.

Arthur remembered who he was.

In fact, Arthur didn’t care about trivia, even a boy who stopped his car on the road. What he cared about was the words his driver Zac told him – “Master Arthur, this boy is a bit like you when you were a child.”

‘Is he like me?’

Arthur sneered. He didn’t forget the woman with the boy that day. Did women scheme like this at present?

Arthur’s eyes were getting colder while thinking of it.

And Theodore couldn’t help to shudder at the coldness in his eyes. However, he would not shrink back. As the guard was about to step forward, he suddenly passed over Arthur and ran into the villa.

“Mr. Davies, the kid told me that you are his uncle...”
