

Surprised Wife With Twins (Ivan and Jennifer) Chapter 196

He added, "Even if she and I had traveled together for work before, I had never been out alone with her, not to mention other women."

Jennifer couldn't help but smiled. She reached out and hugged Ivan, and gently pressed her cheek to his chest, "I see. There is no need to explain."

In the evening wind, Ivan responded to this hug with his hug, and looking around, he felt satisfied, as if he had had the entire world.

Later, they walked around the observation deck hand in hand.

Under the evening breeze, they admired the most beautiful night view without talking much. Both of them were enjoying the moment.

Ivan took out his phone to take a photo, and Jennifer snuggled up to him like a little animal. It was the first time that she had tasted the feeling of love. It was very unreal, as if even the air was sweet.

From the observation deck, Ivan took her to the open-air bar on the top floor, which was also a very romantic place, very popular with young people.

They had a glass of wine. From this angle, they could see the beauty of Manhattan and New Jersey at night.

"Hello handsome, do you want to dance with me?" A beautiful blonde girl in a miniskirt walked toward them and invited Ivan. She had been fascinated by the good-looking Ivan.

Ivan simply refused, "No, I'm going to accompany my wife." He looked at the girl in his arm, his eyes full of affection.

It made that blonde girl envious.

After finishing the wine, Ivan took out his phone to take some selfies with Jennifer before they left.

"Have you ever taken selfies before?" Jennifer asked curiously.

"Nope. Never."

"So, what happened today? Is it a task from our son?"

"Well, yes." Ivan was very sincere, "But to be honest, Alfie reminded me that the beautiful moments should be recorded, in case people lose their memory."

"Lose memory?" Jennifer laughed at him. "That only happens in dramas. Do you really believe it? Why would one lose their memory?"

Taking the elevator downstairs, they walked hand in hand through the streets of New York against the wind.

Ivan bought her half a watermelon, and she ate it with a spoon while walking. At the same time, she fed him too. It was such a loving scene!

Ivan had never experienced this in his life. He felt safe to be with her. He had no need to hide anything.

She walked in front, and he followed behind, taking pictures. She looked radiant in the sparkling night.

Later, they went into a photo studio to print the pictures.

They got two exquisite albums of palm size.

"It's so pretty! Even the cover is so well designed." Jennifer put them in her bag carefully. "I didn't know you are such a good photographer!"

"I am a well-rounded husband," Ivan said proudly. "There is nothing I can't do except for giving birth."

"Haha... Cocky!"

"I have the right to be!"

Tired of walking, they stopped at an open-air café by the river.

"Let's take a break."

The two sat in the chair. The stars were shining overhead. The moon was also particularly beautiful. The night view was amazing. The surface of the river was sparkling. Occasionally, there were cruise ships passing by.

"Jennifer, let's be together." Ivan looked at Jennifer with warm emotion in his heart. "Forget about the agreement. Let's date, not for the children, but for us."

Was this a confession?

But... She was about to leave.

Throughout the night, Jennifer had tried hard to forget about the fact she was leaving. She put so much effort in maintaining that smile on her face.

"I'm probably in love with you." Ivan confessed sincerely, "I want to protect you. I want to be with you. I'm not doing this against my mother, or to get rid of Catherine. I don't need to do that."

He said, "I just want to throw everything behind and be with you."

The two looked at each other. Jennifer could see his sincerity.