

Surprised Wife With Twins (Ivan and Jennifer) Chapter 250

"I'm not sure about that." Finnley said, "I didn't ask him, and I can't ask."

"I see, thank you." Jennifer didn't stay long. She walked out of the office with mixed feelings.

Then she took the elevator downstairs and left the company.

For Ivan, this was probably the best ending.

But how was she going to take Alfie and Diana with her? She wouldn't let Catherine be their stepmother, and if Ivan didn't remember the children, he wouldn't be able to give them fatherly love.

He had gotten rid of all pain. Yet she was to suffer all.

The wind was cold. Dark clouds gathered in the sky. Suddenly, it rained heavily.

Jennifer didn't want to take shelter from the rain, she wanted the pouring rain to wash away her past.

The rain came just in time to hide her tears. From then on, she and Ivan were strangers.

"Goodbye, Ivan, I wish you happiness."

Spencer held the steering wheel in one hand, his eyes staring forward. His mood was gloomy. He was anxious.

Ivan had lost his memory. Even if he woke up, he couldn't help her.

Jennifer was so kind. She would suffer if she met Catherine or Aubree.

Spencer was worried about Jennifer.

At this time, a black custom Lamborghini stopped in front of the main building. A bodyguard in a suit and leather shoes opened a large black umbrella, and another one opened the car door.

Ivan walked down, he looked serious, like a king looking at his land.

When he was about to enter the company lobby, he caught a glimpse of a girl in the rain without an umbrella, who was walking toward the traffic.

Pieces of memory about his accident flashed through his mind.

Ivan grabbed the umbrella from the bodyguard's hand, instinctively striding toward the girl!

Jennifer desperately suppressed her tears. The rain washed away the tears and blurred her vision.

The car halted with a sharp screech.

A glare of headlights shone through!

Jennifer stopped and instinctively covered her eyes with her hand. At the last second, someone grabbed her.

Meanwhile, the black Volvo stopped, and Spencer quickly got out of the car.

Just as he was about to walk to the company, he saw the scene not far away.

Jennifer turned and threw herself into Ivan's arms.

"Be careful!"

She was surprised by the familiar voice and the familiar embrace.

She could still hear the sound of the rain, but couldn't feel it falling on her anymore.

The traffic around me returned to normal.

Jennifer looked up and saw Ivan close at hand, her eyes full of surprise! Her heart seemed to have skipped a beat.

Ivan's eyes were as unfathomable as the dark night sky, with a natural pride and dignity in them.

He held up the big black umbrella and released the hand that was clenching his arm.

Spencer rushed over, grabbed Jennifer, and dragged her into his arms! Staring at Ivan with hatred, he roared, "What are you doing?"

Ivan looked at him calmly as if he didn't know him.

"Take care of your girlfriend instead of going crazy after someone else saved her." With that, Ivan turned away with his large umbrella.

Looking at the back and remembering what he had just said, Jennifer felt her heart broken. Even breathing was painful to her.

Ivan came to the door of the hall, and the bodyguard took the umbrella from him.

Before he entered the hall, he turned around and saw the girl get in a black Volvo. Ivan didn't feel anything. He just didn't want an accident to happen right in front of his company.