

Surprised Wife With Twins (Ivan and Jennifer) Chapter 397

But now...

Linda took a deep breath, she felt that she was about to cry.

When she heard footsteps outside the door, she hurried back to her senses and walked out.

"Mr. Russell." She said softly in an uneasy voice.

Finnley, who was facing her, stopped and stood still in front of her but said nothing, wondering why she was there.

"Mr. Marsh asked me to come over." Linda saw his confusion and said awkwardly, "Catherine has left. What should I do?"

Finnley pondered for a while and said to her, "Wait here. I'll go ask him what the arrangement is."

"Okay."

Then he left and Linda secretly breathed a sigh of relief.

There was no arrangement for her at all. Finnley didn't know that. She felt that she was begging.

Linda went back to the vice president's office and told herself to pull herself together and say goodbye to the past once and for all.

At least there would be a job for her and she could still find a way to support the family.

In the spacious and luxurious president's office next door, Ivan had just finished a video conference, and he was standing in front of the floor-to-ceiling window with his hands folded.

Hearing Finnley's question, his thin lips lightly opened, "Her work will not change and she will still be the assistant of the vice president."

"But what about Mya?" Finnley reminded, "Should we arrange two assistants for the vice president?"

Ivan glanced at him, "Can't I afford two salaries?"

Finnley froze for a moment and hurriedly replied, "Of course not!"

"You think Mya can do some real work?" Ivan did not think so.

Finnley, "..."

"I brought her here just to find an accompany for Jennie."

Hearing that, Finnley was surprised.

He couldn't help but wonder if this was still the president that he has known for many years.

“Got it.” He hurriedly nodded his head, “The actual work still has to be done by Linda. After all, she knows those work best.”

“Wait.” Finnley was about to leave when Ivan stopped him, “Jennie won’t be coming to work soon.” “I know.”

“So, Linda will be working with you during this time.” Ivan told him, “Didn’t you take over the job of vice president? Consider that she’ll be your assistant.”

Finnley nodded thoughtfully, “Okay.”

Then he went to the vice president’s office.

Linda turned her eyes as she heard footsteps, “Mr. Russell.”

“You’re still the assistant to the vice president.” Finnley said to her, “I’m currently taking over the vice president’s job, so you need to work with me. And you can also move to the president’s office.”

“Anything you say.”

She said, “I’ll just bring files back and forth. It’s not tiring.”

Finnley understood that a young girl who just entered the workplace surely does not want to be watched by the big boss every day.

So he did not force her.

The recording went very well although Jennifer and Pippa went there late.

Georgia didn’t bother her anymore, perhaps because she gave up or she didn’t have time to come over as she hadn’t finished filming her scene.

Pippa has been accompanying Jennifer and listening to her charming voice. Her eyes were full of admiration and she was immersed in the scene. It turned out that the voice was more powerful than the picture.

On the set of “Love in Violet Gold Bay”, the director looked nervous.

Then he said to Spencer, who had just finished a scene, “Spencer, the ending analysis page was left in the office and I forgot to take it, and there is no file here, can you drive over and take it for me? They’re not good enough and they need that.”
