

Surprised Wife With Twins (Ivan and Jennifer) Chapter 415

After the proposal succeeded, there was thunderous applause on the scene.

Stacey McCarthy, starred by Georgia, shed tears. She was indeed a good actress.

Although Spencer disliked her, she acted as if she and Spencer were in love for real. The people who watched them even expected them to fall in love in their real life.

The director announced, "Cut! Perfect!"

Applause sounded on the scene.

Everyone was cheerful about the ending.

The drama would launch on the market after dubbing and editing.

"We'll have a celebration party tonight. Everyone must go," the director spoke through a speaker in his hand while standing on a stool, "We'll have fun and get drunk. Let's relax."

"Great!"

"Whoa!"

"Wonderful!"

Thunderous applause sounded on the scene with people's cheers.

Georgia let go of Spencer's arm, staring at him. He pursed his lips indifferently, looking unhappy.

Georgia guessed that it must be because of his negative news online.

Spencer turned away and sat in the Volvo.

Watching his car leave the scene, Georgia thought he was like an iceberg. No matter how hard she tried, he just never melted.

However, the more he behaved this way, the more she was obsessed with him.

In the studio, Jennifer recorded her dialogues wearing an earset. She fully expressed her emotions for the dubbing.

Pippa had been working as her assistant for several days, but she was still touched.

After several hours, Jennifer took off the earset and sipped the mineral water from Pippa. "Do you like it? You looked so focused."

"I wish I could learn to dub," Pippa answered with a bright smile. "It's like a way to express emotions. I cannot write a story or act, but I can dub. As long as I have a good story, it'll make me feel as if I can experience their life."

"Are you serious?" Jennifer was generous. "I can teach you. All for free."

"May I try it?" Pippa couldn't wait to start. "I want to try it when you are free."

"Why not?"

Suddenly, there were a few knocks on the door. Pippa went to open it and saw a group of people outside.

The director entered the studio room with his assistants, the producer, and other staff.

They all stared at Jennifer. The director walked to her, reaching a hand. "Nice to meet you, StaRise. I'm the director."

Jennifer shook hands with him. "Nice to meet you, too."

"I like your voice a lot. I listened to several episodes, and you did a great job." He appreciated her work. "Thank you so much."

"Of course. I signed the contract and got paid, so I must do it well," Jennifer replied gracefully. "Has the last scene been completed? How may I help you?"

"It's ended just now. The posted episodes will be sent to you tomorrow by the earliest," the director answered. "I want to invite you and your assistant to join our celebration party tonight."

Jennifer had no reason to turn him down. She dubbed for this drama, so she was also part of the crew.

"Mrs. Marsh, are you available tonight?"

"Please call me StaRise." Jennifer felt a bit shy.

The director wanted to confirm with her. "Would you like to join our party, StaRise?"

"Sure." Jennifer smiled at him. "I'll take my assistant with me."

"Great. Six this evening. I look forward to seeing you there." The director was relieved.

He didn't stay in the studio long before leaving, afraid of interrupting Jennifer.

When the director and his group went to the office, Spencer was waiting for them.

He curled up on the sofa next to the window, his right foot on his left thigh leisurely. Although the group entered the office, he didn't change his gesture.

Since the drama filming had ended, Spencer didn't belong to the crew anymore, so he could disobey them.

When he worked in the crew earlier, he was also wanton without obeying the rules.

“What’s going on between you and Hanson Moran?” the director asked worriedly instead of chiding him, wishing to know the story behind the current matter.