

Surprised Wife With Twins (Ivan and Jennifer) Chapter 446

The following morning.

Rowan's Villa.

Jennifer woke up beside Ivan. She got up gingerly, went to the kitchen, and told Carla what to prepare for breakfast.

All the dishes she mentioned helped cure the wounds.

Then she found the tools from the medical kit, planning to change the dressing for Ivan before breakfast.

Changing the dressing helped recover his wound.

Meanwhile, Linda arrived at the Marsh Group early. She was spirited every day.

She wore a beige vintage dress, looking gentle with a sweet temperament.

The bowknot on her chest made her womanish. The tight waist perfectly showed her slender figure.

The first thing she did after arriving at her office was to water the green plants.

She enjoyed life.

Finnley also arrived. When he left the elevator and bypassed the office, he accidentally saw Linda through the glass wall. Without slowing down, he darted at her a few times.

In his opinion, Linda was bright, lively, and energetic, with a good attitude and efficiency at work.

She had worked till quite late the previous night but came to work so early in the morning. Finnley believed that she should be the role model for the employees.

He entered the president's office.

Probably he had been working for Ivan for many years, or he was born like this.

Finnley always looked solemn and seldom smiled. The tailored suit made him look handsome with a strong aura.

Rowan's villa.

Ivan got up. Sitting on a bench, he unbuttoned his shirt. Jennifer carefully helped him to take it off.

The bandage wrapping his shoulder had become brown due to the blood from his wound, which had already formed a scab.

Jennifer gently cut the bandage with the scissors.

Ivan didn't feel hurt as he took the painkillers every day.

The room was quiet.

Spencer also woke up, watching them while lying on the bed.

When Jennifer carefully removed the bandage, Spencer saw the wound on Ivan's back. It was at least four inches. His heart skipped a beat, a fierce pain rising.

Jennifer sterilized it, put on ointment, and changed the dressing.

Although she looked calm, she felt sorry for Ivan.

Spencer thought the moment Ivan protected him from the stab, his eyes darkened. Mixed feelings surged in his heart.

After finishing it, Jennifer tied the bandage, helped Ivan get dressed, and buttoned his shirt.

Ivan held her hands, staring at her affectionately.

"Time for breakfast." Jennifer looked into his eyes with a gentle smile.

Then she darted at Spencer. "Join us, Spencer?" she asked.

Spencer got up in silence.

They went to the dining room together.

Spencer hesitated while keeping quiet. He wanted to thank Ivan but failed to speak it out since the previous night.

He was indeed weird.

After breakfast, Finnley called Ivan to ask about his status. Then he reported work to Ivan.

Jennifer told Rowan, "I'll go back to Emerald Bay to get the stomach medicine for Ivan."

"Be careful."

"It's alright," Jennifer replied, "It's not far from here. I can tell he needs to stay here for a few more days. His wound is recovering fast."

Rowan explained, "I used a newly developed medicine. It's particularly for curing the knife stab. The effect works well."

His words delighted Jennifer, as her student had made excellent achievements and developed many special medicines. She was proud of him.

"All right. I gotta go. Ivan is still on the phone. Can you tell him later? I'll be right back."

“Sure. Go ahead.”

Jennifer left the living room and sat in Spencer’s Volvo.

Ivan talked to Finnley on the phone for almost ten minutes. After ending the phone conversation, he received a call from the police.

Ivan swiped to answer, “Hello, Officer Chapman?”

“Mr. Marsh, there come two updates,” Officer Chapman sounded solemn as if something terrible had happened.