Chapter 1211

Sally came over with the little girl and gently held Connie.

The three held each other while holding Patrick's photo in their arms.

Sean saw it and felt terrible.

He was not mad at Connie's outburst.

Patrick was the only male in their family. They were now orphaned and widowed.

Patrick's death felt like the sky falling for the family.

It was not difficult to imagine that they must be crying day and night. Their hearts filled with pain, but they had no one to vent it to.

They even wanted to lose their temper and get mad, but they had no idea who to lose their temper at.

They vented it at Sean since he showed up today.

Sean understood how they felt.

The thugs witnessed all this.

"Brother Moby, the son of this family seems to be a soldier who had fought and killed our country's enemies..."

A young man with bleached blonde hair said to the leader.

"Yes..."

The leader was also somewhat silent.

No matter how bad someone was, they had respect for soldiers.

After all, everyone knew soldiers sacrificed for them to live peaceful lives.

No one could deny that.

The three of them had witnessed the bad guys' strength and how hard it was to resist them.

She knew Sean said that because he was worried about it.

Vroom vroom vroom!

Just then, a rapid roar of car engines came from the distance.

Swoosh!

Sally, Connie, and the little girl immediately huddled up with each other.

Besides that, they trembled uncontrollably.

They were like scared birds, scared by the slightest movements.

You could imagine how much unbearable harassment they had experienced during this time.

“Whew!”

Sean exhaled gently, clenched his fist, and slowly turned around to stand in front of Sally, Connie, and the little girl.

Vroom vroom vroom!

A dozen cars turned on the double signal as they sped over from a distance.

Dust clouds rose on the country roads.

Swoosh!

The leader stood up immediately.

The others also got up subconsciously.

“On your knees.”

Sean’s frowned and scared the men so hard that they dropped to their knees again.

Screech! Screech!

The cars came to a screeching halt in front of the crowd.

The car doors opened, and strong men in black stretchable vests got out.

You could tell at a glance that they were gangsters. They were not the same as these seven or eight young men.

Bang!

It was chaotic.

Zander darted right and left through the crowd, knocking down nearly ten people in a minute. However, Zander soon began to feel exhausted.

Having been through a fight earlier, he lacked the strength to face more than 50 men alone.

After all, he only had a pair of fists, no matter how strong he was.

However, the other party could add up to 100 pairs!

No matter how fast Zander was, it was impossible to avoid so many people simultaneously.

The physical exertion caused him to become slower and weaker. He needed more time to handle one person.

The more it went on, the greater the physical exertion.

Therefore, they were caught in a vicious circle.

Sure enough, Zander was surrounded after knocking down over a dozen people.

The remaining 30-over men attacked Zander aggressively.

However, there was no way a tough guy like Zander would beg for mercy.

Therefore, he was still holding on.

Sally and the rest looked very worried.

Then they subconsciously looked at Jeffrey and Sean.

Jeffrey was disabled, so he could not provide much help.

Sean's figure did not look buff, so he probably could not help Zander either.

Sally and Connie sighed.

Sean knocked over a dozen people in less than a minute.

Tyga's men did not even touch Sean's clothes.

"Gosh!"

Sally and her family could not help but widen their eyes.

Zander was swift when he struck earlier but did not seem as at ease as Sean.

Fighting was supposed to be brutal.

However, Sean made it seem like a performance.

The way he easily knocked over the men shocked the crowd.

Thud!

Tyga dropped his cigar to the ground.

It had never occurred to him that a man could be so strong.

Was he human?

What was the difference between him and a god who could easily decide your life and death?

"These fighting skills..."

Tyga was impressed after being shocked.

With such strong fighting skills, he could fight dozens or even hundreds of people alone.

If he could get him to work for him, would he not be like a tiger with wings?

“Stop!”

Tyga ordered, and his men backed away from Sean.

Sean responded to Tyga with a sneer.

“Chop him!”

Tyga stomped his foot and ordered instantly.

“Get him!”

“Kill him!”

Holding their weapons high up in the air, the 20-over men rushed toward Sean.

Surrounded, Sean instantly vanished into the crowd.

Sally and the rest outside could not see Sean.

Ding! Bang!

Clang!

The steel rods and machetes collided, drowning Sean in the crowd.

Then there was a brief silence.

Sally and the rest tensed up at this moment.

They were worried whether Sean was hacked to death.

Even Zander and Jeffrey could not help but frown.

After all, Sean was only human!

“Ah!”

Suddenly, there was a scream.

The next thing they knew, the 20-over men surrounding Sean instantly jerked away like they suffered an electric shock.

Swoosh! Swoosh!

Before they could see what had happened, they heard the sound of a blade cutting through flesh.

Sean had grabbed a broad machete at some point.

With his body moving like a fan and his right leg grounded, he slashed the men with the machete.

"You... You can't kill me!"

Tyga finally started feeling scared.

Having been in the underworld, he could tell at a glance whether the other party was bluffing him or if they were going to do it.

Sean's expression right now showed no signs he was bluffing.

“I have many lackeys. Don’t you dare touch me!”

Tyga widened his eyes and yelled at Sean.

Sean had no intention of replying to him. He only slowly raised the machete in his hand.

Swoosh!

Everyone saw the fearsome Tyga’s legs go weak before a dark stain spread between his pants.

He was so scared of Sean that he peed his pants.

Even if Sean did not kill him today, he would never be able to hold his head up in front of Sean again.

Sean would be a nightmare for the rest of his life.

However, when Sean said he would kill someone, he meant it.

An enemy’s life was nothing to someone who had experienced a brutal battlefield like him.

“Die!”

Before Tyga could react, Sean slashed at him.

Blood flew.

Connie said as she grabbed the little girl and tried to push them away.

“I’ll take the blame.

“Mr. Lennon, I want nothing. I only hope you can help my daughter-in-law and granddaughter find a place to live.

“If my daughter—in-law meets someone suitable, I support her to remarry. I know how hard it is to take care of a child alone.

“Promise me, and I will die without regret.”

Connie looked at Sean and said seriously.

“Grandma, I don’t want you to die. I don’t want you to die...”

The little girl seemed to know what the word death represented as she burst into tears.

Sally even covered her mouth, her eyes red.

“Little girl, we represent justice. Why will she die?”

“With me around, none of us will die. Do you believe me?”

Sean took two steps forward, slowly crouched down, and said as he touched the little girl’s face.

“Yes!”

The little girl nodded heavily.

Although young, she also saw traces of her father, Patrick, in Sean.

It was protection and a sense of security.

“Okay! If you believe in me, I won’t let you down.

"They insist on us subsidizing them for a cemetery plot, or they won't sign it."

A nearby assistant said, looking at the file.

They did not even glance at Sean and the rest right in front of them.

"What's so impressive about, a soldier?"

"Get the excavator and dig!"

“Subsidize them? Did I owe them anything? Do it at once!”

The young man called Brother Randy spoke even more domineeringly.

“Come here. I’ll tell you what’s so impressive about a soldier.”

Sean said, and everyone finally noticed him.

“Who are you?”

Brother Randy asked, looking at Sean and frowning.

“A soldier.”

Sean answered quietly.

“Haha. Are you here to help?”

“What do you want? Tell me!”

Brother Randy glanced at Sean with disdain on his face.

“Crawl over.”

“Kneel and apologize.”

Sean said, and the young men and women froze instantly.

The sun shone on the horizon, reflecting off countless rays on the sword.

The Guardian Sword was drawn instantly.

It was dazzling as its sharp blade left the sheath.

As the sword turned, its reflected light flashed across the face of Mr. Evans and the rest.

A young man sitting in the car was reading a newspaper.

The light reflected from the blade was as if someone had held a mirror and reflected the sunlight into the young man's eyes.

The young man was uninterested in seeing what was going on earlier.

Dazzled by the light, he slowly turned his head to look over.

At first glance, Sean stood proudly holding the Guardian Sword under the sun.

It was hard to miss him with his supercilious gaze and the imposingness of his presence.

At that moment, the young man suddenly widened his eyes and clenched his fists. He even crumpled the newspaper into a ball.

Then

the young man's heart rate suddenly raced. He hurriedly raised his palm to rub his eyes and looked over again.

"HSSS!

The young man gasped after confirming he was right.

At this moment, the young man's head buzzed like a bomb went off in his head.

At this time.

After Sean took out the dazzling sword, everyone fell silent instantly.

Mr. Evans and the rest frowned slightly.

The young man ran over and turned to look at Tyga's men and the developer's staff.

"F*ck off!"

“If word of this got out, you’ll bear the consequences yourself.”

The man said, and the crowd shuddered before nodding repeatedly.

Soon more than half of the crowd left.

The only ones left were Sean, government officials like Mr. Evans, and the rest.

“He killed Tyga, sir.

“And now he wants to kill me.”

Mr. Evans pointed at Sean with a sneer.

“He wants to kill you?”

The man asked with a frown.

“Yes!

“How should we convict him?”

Mr. Evans chuckled, his face smug.

“If he wants to cut you, why don’t you clean your neck and stretch it for him?”

Mr. Evans and the rest froze as soon as the man said that.”

“What did that mean?

Is he asking Mr. Evans to offer himself?

‘Is he serious?’

What happened next surprised them.

The man stepped forward and looked at Sean.
