Chapter 1371

Especially Henry. He had no idea that Sean was a doctor.

Besides that, Leonard even called him a miracle doctor!

Henry knew the serious Leonard would never joke about something like that.

Leonard had always prided himself on his medical skills.

What kind of miracle doctor would Sean be that would convince him and make him so deferent?

Henry then recalled Leonard saying Sean was a miracle doctor who could cure Henry's mother.

Was Henry not chasing away the miracle doctor who could cure his mother?

"Mr... Lennon!"

Without thinking much, Henry stepped forward and shouted.

"Sean..."

Leonard stepped forward and yelled.

"I must leave when the host drives me out."

Sean smiled and opened the door.

"Sean, I'll leave with you!"

"Hmph!"

Leonard immediately expressed his attitude and snorted coldly at Henry.

"Dr. Wester, Mr. Lennon!"

"Don't... Don't go!"

Henry no longer pretended to be high and mighty. He raced to the door to stop them.

So what if he was a big shot?

Big shots experienced aging, illnesses, and death too.

Money and power could not be exchanged for your life.

However, a miracle doctor like Leonard could keep Henry and his family safe and healthy.

The value could not be measured by money!

Compared with peace and health, their faces were nothing.

“Sean?”

Leonard said again when Sean was silent.

“I don’t have a problem with Henry.

“But Billion Trees Real Estate has some beef with me.”

Sean shook his head slightly and said to Leonard.

“Jimmy Lidell? I never liked him.

“He invited me to his home many times, but I rejected him.”

Leonard nodded.

Sean knew Leonard was telling the truth.

Leonard was okay with Henry when they were at Henry’s house earlier.

However, Leonard never looked Jimmy in the eye the whole time.

“So you know.”

Sean nodded gently.

“I don’t know much about the business circle.

“But I know some of the dirt on Billion Trees Real Estate.”

Leonard shook his head. He had a relative who bought a unit from Billion Trees Real Estate, so he knew some of the inside stories.

“I want to break them up.”

Sean pondered for two seconds before slowly turning to look at Leonard.

"Mr. Lennon, please have a seat."

Zane reached out his hand and beckoned Sean to sit down.

He and Sean were alone in the room, and Zane did not have an assistant with him.

After all, it was a personal agreement he had made with Sean.

"Mr. Lennon, why do I find you familiar?"

Zane asked quietly after looking at Sean for a few seconds.

"I have an average-looking face.

"It's normal that I look somewhat familiar."

Sean waved his hand slightly and did not say more.

"No, you're not average, Mr. Lennon.

“There must be something unusual about your identity, Mr. Lennon.”

Zane shook his head slightly. He had a feeling he had seen Sean somewhere.

He had probably seen him in a photo or from somewhere, even if he had never met him in person.

“Tell me who I am, Mr. Curley.”

Sean smiled and picked up the coffee pot in front of him.

“Well...”

Zane was puzzled by Sean’s remark.

It was because he had no idea what to say.

Besides that, he had had people look into Lennon Real Estate and Sean in the past two days.

After all, he could not randomly support someone he did not know.

However, to Zane’s surprise, he found nothing after two days of investigation.

The best he could find was that Sean was from some corporation in River City.

Everything else was blank.

Zane took another deep glance at Sean before shaking her head and smiling.

He realized he could not treat Sean the way he treated young people.

There must be a scheming old fox in this young man!

When dealing with someone like this, it was more appropriate to get straight to the point instead of beating around the bush.

“Billion Trees Real Estate is indeed a black sheep.”

Zane looked at Sean and said slowly.

“But they have been in Joules Town for years, and it’s not easy to bring them down.

“If you can bring them down, I can give you what you want.”

Zane looked at Sean and said earnestly.

Sean’s request was naturally getting Lennon Real Estate to the top of Joules Town’s business circle.

“Okay.”

Sean immediately nodded in agreement.

“But I gotta warn you.

“If you can do that, I will help you without going against my principles.

“But I won’t meddle in or offer help to your battle with Billion Trees until then.”

Zane looked at Sean and said again.

“I understand.”

Sean nodded gently again.

May, Caitlyn, two caretakers, and dozens of children were crammed into one room.

Five or six expensively dressed men and women stood on the platform.

You could tell the young men and women were young heirs at first glance. They had watches costing six figures on their wrists.

May wore a red scarf around her neck and appeared to be smiling stiffly.

On the other hand, Caitlyn pouted and looked dissatisfied.

"Aunt May, you should never have received them.

"It's disgusting how these people take things away every time after they finish filming."

Caitlyn turned her head around and muttered something under her breath.

"What are you doing? Can't you even smile when I've donated? Did someone in your family die?"

The woman shoved the little girl, and the little girl almost fell.

"You've gone too far!"

Caitlyn rushed forward and gave the woman a shove

Their actions made Caitlyn angry.

"It's alright. The kids have no use for them."

May grabbed Caitlyn, urging her not to protest.

"What the f*ck? Young Master Willer, the video went viral as soon as we posted it. We're going to gain a lot of followers, right?"

"Haha, look at the comment section. An idiot said they want to donate money to help us."

The young men and women laughed shamelessly, not caring that May and the rest were present.

"Hurry and bring it back. We can't return it if it's dirty."

The woman urged and aggressively took off the smartwatches the kids had just put on.

May and Caitlyn looked at this and said nothing but shook their heads.

Queen Children's Orphanage had been open for more than 20 years.

May was used to such things.

"Madam Randall, right?"

“You don’t need smartwatches anyway.

“So we’re taking them. Here are 1,000 dollars.

“Isn’t it more practical to give you this?”

The leader of the young men and women was a young man named Ken Watson.

Then he took 1,000 dollars out of his wallet and handed it to May.

Ken shook his wrist, his face arrogant.

Clap!

Clap!

As soon as Ken finished speaking, two claps suddenly rang outside the door.

"Nice.

"Today I learned."

Then came Sean's voice, and the door opened.

"Brother."

Seeing Sean's entrance, Caitlyn pouted as her face was full of grievance.

Tears swirled in her eyes.

"Seanie, it's okay. It's alright. They're leaving in a minute."

May did not want Sean to mess with a rich heir like Ken.

It could be quite unpleasant to have a wad of money slapped in the face.

Ken taught Sean he could bully people and do whatever he wanted because he had money.

“Sean, do you have a death wish?”

Wes and the rest were about to fight back after coming to themselves.

“Shut up.”

Sean pointed at Wes with a cold look in his eyes.

“You!”

Wes froze but grit his teeth and walked toward Sean.

However, Sean calmly turned his briefcase over.

Swoosh!

Pile after pile of cash, sealed with white strips, fell onto the table.

They were all sealed with white strips. It was ten thousand dollars a stack.

Sean had only withdrawn the money to settle the balance for the supplies.

Otherwise, he would not have carried so much cash with him.

Swoosh!

Wes and the rest stopped in their tracks as soon as they saw this.

The pile of money was even more of a deterrent than Sean’s threat.

The two girls’ eyes widened instantly.

The visual impact of cash and card balances was different.

You only had a few zeros behind the digit one when you put one million dollars in the bank.

You could spread the banknotes out. The net weight was more than ten kilograms.

Though the money Sean took out was less than a million dollars, the impact was still considerable.

After all, if he could casually take out hundreds of thousands of dollars, there was no way it was all he had.

Wes and the rest hesitated for a few seconds but stayed where they were.

Chapter 1380

The two caretakers tried to say something and were also stopped by May.

Everyone was equal, irrespective of high or low birth.

However, what you could not argue with was that there were gaps in the world.

Everyone had the same starting line.

However, being in a sports car or on foot, how could the result be the same when you were at the same starting line?

These children were unlike other children. They had no parents, background, money, or power.

Maybe Sean’s words could help them adjust to the cruel reality in advance.

“Uncle Sean, how could we be stronger?”

A good-natured boy, who looked seven or eight years old, asked seriously.

“Good question.

“There are many ways to become stronger.

“All you can do now is study well, eat well, and listen to Aunt May.”

Sean knew these kids were still young.

It was too deep a subject for them to understand after all.

“Brother Lennon, I saw the news on TV.

“Why do the kids who do well in school end up working for their classmates who don’t?”

A boy over ten years old asked after biting his lip.

“Well...”

May and Caitlyn were speechless when the boy asked that.

After all, it did happen a lot.

They had no idea how to answer to correct the children’s view of the world.

“Do you have the same question as he does?”

Sean slowly turned to look at the other children.

He did not spend much time in school.

However, he could not let these children give up learning at such a young age.
