Chapter 1381

It was no exaggeration to say that it was not easy for the orphanage children to have adequate food and clothing.

May and Caitlyn taught the children.

Besides, kids sent to the orphanage were mostly physically weak.

Some had hearing problems, some were deaf–mute children, and some were more serious.

It was not realistic for these children to go to school with healthy normal children after all.

“If I find you a place with schools, hospitals, and dormitories, will you go?”

Sean was thinking about his plans to build an orphanage.

“I won’t.

“It costs too much money.

“No matter how hard I try, I can’t give them all the things that normal kids enjoy.

“My best hope is to raise them till they’re adults, and that’s enough for me.”

May shook her head gently and rejected Sean outright.

Her idea was simple. There was nothing complicated.

Just being alive.

Yes, she was content to keep these children alive.

Letting the children go to university and get a Ph.D. was a luxury.

“It’s alright. Leave it to me.”

Sean said with a smile as he waved his hand.

Even animals could be grateful.

Sean was raised in the orphanage by May.

Now that he was capable, he wanted to do everything he could to give back to the place that raised him.

It was a person’s most basic conscience.

The two girls glanced at each other before shaking their heads.
They could not believe Sean could handle Bingley, a big shot in the government.
“So you hit them?”
Seeing that May was silent, Bingley confirmed for the last time.
At a loss, May kept fidgeting with her clothes.
Sean slowly stepped forward to take over the conversation.
“Yes, I did it.”
Just as Sean was about to speak, May looked up suddenly and took all the responsibility.
Just as she did when Sean was little, May still tried her best to protect them.
“You did?”
Bingley shook his head slightly. He did not believe it, of course.
“Talk to me if you need anything.”
Sean slowly stepped forward and shielded May.
May tried to say something, but Sean stopped her with a wave.
He was an adult now, and May did not have to risk her life and stand in front of them as she used to.

“And who are you?”

Bingley glanced at Sean and asked indifferently.

Sean knew he was asking what he already knew the answers to.

Ken must have pulled strings at home to bring Bingley here.

Otherwise, would things have proceeded so fast?

“Cut the crap.

“What are you doing here?”

Sean and Bingley looked at each other without any nervousness.

Bingley touched the tip of his nose, somewhat surprised that Sean would be so calm.

Chapter 1383

Sean was so arrogant.

Bingley's face was dark when he finished.

May, Caitlyn, and the rest were stunned.

No one had expected Sean to say such a thing to Bingley.

Who was Bingley?

He was the chief government official of the area.

He had the power to intervene with anything in the area-whether it was a conglomerate, a school, or a hospital.

It was no exaggeration to say he could shut down the operations of any business with just one word.

You could get mad but only swallow it when facing someone like him.

Whoever met Bingley was polite and respectful, fearing to offend him with anything they said.

However, Sean told Bingley that he was protecting the orphanage.

He even said he would kill anyone who laid a hand on the orphanage.

Was he threatening Bingley?

No, it was a provocation and a threat.

In Bingley's jurisdiction, saying he looked after the place and that whoever touched it would die was definitely a provocation and a threat!

If Sean had a strong identity and background, so be it.

However, he was from the orphanage too.

So what if he had some money?

Bingley's fury rose. He could not tolerate it!

"What did you say?"

Bingley gritted his teeth slightly and tried to suppress his anger.

If he was not in uniform today, he would have slapped Sean.

"Are you deaf? Do I need to repeat myself?"

Sean's gaze was indifferent, unfazed by Bingley.

He had been polite to Bingley because of Bingley's identity.

May and the rest panicked.

Seeing things were about to get worse and out of hand.

“Stop!”

Just then, there was a sudden shout from behind the crowd.

“Over my dead body! Arrest him!”

Bingley snorted coldly and gave orders again without looking at who it was.

“Mr... Mr. Hommer, it seems to be Mr. Zackman...”

Bingley pushed the young man away before he could finish speaking.

“It doesn’t matter who comes! Arrest him!”

Bingley burst into anger.

“Bingley Hommer, how dare you?”

Then another stern shout came from behind.

Besides that, they called Bingley’s full name.

“Who is it?”

Livid, Bingley turned around sharply to look.

When Bingley got a good look at the person’s face, he froze instantly.

It was like someone poured cold water from the top of his head and extinguished his fury instantly.

“Oh!

“Mr. Zackman, what are you doing here?”

Bingley hastily rubbed his face, forced a smile, and met the person.

The other staff also recognized the person and quickly stopped what they were doing.

Sean also recognized the person.

After all, he had just met this guy yesterday.

Henry nodded gently before turning his head slowly to look at Bingley.

"What did you tell me earlier? Why are you here?"

Henry asked, adjusting his clothes as he looked at Bingley.

“Ah...

“It’s like this. Mr. Zackman, we just came over to see if the orphanage needed any help.

“If necessary, officials like us should look after them.”

Bingley’s change of heart was quicker than flipping a page.

“Really?”

“Didn’t you say their staff broke several laws and even beat people up?”

Henry asked again, deadpan.

“Mr. Zackman, no! Absolutely not!

“Queen Children’s Orphanage has always been the most caring welfare institution in our area.”

Bingley waved his hands hastily, beaming.

“So you mean I misheard you?”

Henry asked again, his hands behind his back.

“No, no, no! We misspoken, Mr. Zackman...”

Bingley’s brow dripped with sweat as he was extremely nervous.

“Mr. Zackman, I was wrong. They reported another orphanage. I made a mistake.

Bingley’s assistant hastened forward to explain.

May and the rest had mixed feelings when they saw this.

However, it also made them understand how great power was.

Bingley wanted to shut down the orphanage and take Sean away.

Henry’s appearance caused Sean’s status to change.

Bingley corrected himself and cleared up all the problems.

Henry looked like he was facing a tricky problem.
Sean already had some ideas about what was on his mind.
What Henry valued most about Sean was his medical skills.
He thought of what Leonard had said before about Henry's mother not being well.
Therefore, Sean figured Henry must want him to help him.
"What's the matter?"
Sean asked indifferently, glancing at Henry.
"Old Madam hasn't had a drop of water for two days..."
"I was also in a bad mood yesterday because of this. That's why I was a little rude to..."
Henry was a little guilty and embarrassed as he spoke.
After all, Henry knew what happened yesterday. He was only helping out Jimmy.
Then Leonard came forward, and Henry learned that Sean had miraculous medical skills.
However, Sean turned Henry down then and there.

Sean had to be able to accept Henry's bow.

The driver and Henry's assistant were silent.

They knew that even though Henry was powerful, it was not power that would decide whether Old Madam Zackman could survive. It was Sean.

Therefore, no matter how humble Henry was, it was justifiable.

"You're right.

"Your father died for the country, wanting peace.

"But you polluted the peace he protected with his life.

“How can you sleep at night standing up for villains and bullying civilians?”

Sean pondered for seconds before slowly turning his head to look at Henry.

His eyes were stern.

The stern gaze made Henry shudder.

The driver and the assistant even turned their heads sharply and looked at Sean in disbelief.

The Lennon Real Estate that paid the generous price of five billion dollars at the auction was that young man's company?

"Hsss!"

The driver and his assistant slowly gasped.

The disdain in their heart disappeared.

They no longer doubted Sean's wealth and abilities.

He could spend five billion dollars without blinking an eye. If he was incapable, then no one was capable.

With his wealth, Lennon Real Estate could replace Billion Trees Real Estate and do better than them!

The driver and assistant were now convinced.

Henry moved his mouth and went straight into the car.

The assistant nearby hurriedly asked.

Bingley frowned slightly and glared at his assistant.

He did not need his assistant to tell him what to do.

Bingley dared not say out loud what Henry had done, of course.

After all, Henry had a sensitive identity, and anything a big shot like him said could be misinterpreted.

Bingley dared not expose Henry's whereabouts casually.

However, he needed to warn Ken.

However, Old Madam Zackman's clothes were also clean. It seemed that she was well taken care of.

Old Madam Zackman in the wheelchair looked lifeless, and her eyes were dim.

She sat in the wheelchair, motionless. She was not blinking and not moving her mouth.

It was kind of creepy.

"I made some nutritious soup for Old Madam. She didn't even take a sip.

"Why don't we just give her an IV drip?"

Henry's wife whispered.

"Oh..."

Henry sighed and shook his head slightly.

With Old Madam Zackman's current condition, she was not even strong enough to get an IV drip.

She had not had a drop of water in two days. She was only going to die if this went on.

“I know my body. Stop looking.”

Old Madam Zackman said indifferently without glancing at Sean.

Hearing this, Henry felt even more helpless.

Old Madam Zackman had been like this for 1.5 years.

“Old Madam doesn’t look disabled.”

Sean whispered after looking at her for a moment.

“She’s not disabled. She just couldn’t walk suddenly.

“The hospital checked and found nothing wrong.”

Henry nodded, his tone frustrated.

“Old Madam, let me feel your pulse.”

Sean asked Old Madam Zackman.

Old Madam Zackman glanced at Sean with a hint of disdain on her lips.

“Alright.”

Old Madam Zackman nodded and held out her wrist.

Her wrinkled wrists looked scrawny.

Sean immediately reached out his hand to feel Old Madam Zackman’s pulse.

After feeling both wrists, Sean slowly withdrew his hand.

“How is it, Mr. Lennon? Is Old Madam seriously ill?”
