

There He Is Again, My Ex-Husband - Chapter 521 Long Time No See

Cameron knew what his mother was ramping up to something, so he interrupted her. He took out his graduation certificate, awards, and transcripts from a documents pouch beside him.

His parents were both befuddled by his action. Cameron said slowly, "Dad, mom, I've been living a life that you wanted me to live. I believe I've made you proud by winning all these awards and credentials. But I'm done with this. Over the years, I feel like I'm nothing but a walking dead. For once, I want to live my own life.

I also have plans for my career."

Randall and Colleen didn't appreciate his little speech at all.

By saying that, Cameron was letting them know that he wouldn't be controlled by them anymore.

Cameron had made it very clear that he wanted them to stay out of his career planning.

"I'm full. Time for me to leave. Have a good sleep." Cameron stood up from the chair.

Colleen was pissed. "Where do you think you are going?"

This was his home. Where else could he go?

"I've got a place to stay." Cameron had bought a house without letting his parents know.

He studied very hard and won a lot of scholarships abroad, which was used to invest in the establishment of Tymers with Viggo.

The money brought in by Tymers later served as the starting fund of his own biotech company. Cameron has long become an upstart in the business world throughout the years' hard work. However, he chose to stay low-key about it.

Buying a house or a car was nothing to him.

“You still need the keys to get in,” Colleen shouted behind him.

His parent had bought him a house before. Since Cameron was away all the time, they kept the keys for him.

“I’ll go to my place.” With that, Cameron walked out of the door.

Colleen and Randall were shocked into a daze. They looked at each other, didn’t know what to do. Then, Colleen burst into tears.

“What was that supposed to mean? Why won’t he stay? This is his home and he just got back! What did he mean by living his own life? Is he... He’s still in love with that Nina Sanchez, isn’t he?” Colleen cried even louder when she thought of that possibility.

Randall frowned, “Impossible. He had always blamed Nina for leaving him.

He and Nina had lost contact for so many years. And he never brought her up in front of us. I think he had moved on.” “Then why won’t he stay?” asked Colleen.

Randall comforted her. “Honestly, I feel like I don’t know him anymore. Let’s just hope that things will work out.”

When Cameron took out all his awards and said that he never felt alive over the years, Randall was also stunned.

Randall’s words wrung Colleen’s heart to the very core.

She also felt like Cameron was a total stranger to her now.

The couple was at a loss. They cleaned up the table after a few mouthfuls of food. They still had to cheer up to deal with all their relatives and friends, especially those who wanted to introduce their daughters to their son.

After Cameron left the Dauster residence, he asked the driver to send him to his neighborhood. He grabbed his two suitcases after the driver dropped him off and took another taxi.

It was his parents’ driver after all. He didn’t want his parent to know where exactly he was heading to.

He got off the taxi, called the gatekeeper, and walked into another neighborhood.

Nina was packing her bags for the filming when the doorbell rang. She wondered who would drop by this late in the night.

It couldn't be Sherlyn. Nina just had a video call with her. She should be in the comfort of her own home now.

Emelia was still on her honeymoon and wouldn't be back until days later.

"It can't be one of my crazy fans, can it?"

Nina went downstairs to open the door.

When she saw the man standing outside through the peephole, she thought she was hallucinating.

Cameron Dauster?

They hadn't met each other for years now.

He looked more mature yet still so similar the young man her used to be.

The ring of the doorbell shock her out of the daze.

She opened the door without hesitation.

For many years, she had been waiting to hear from him. Now that she had decided to move on, he just showed up out of nowhere.

In that case, she'd better just give him a closure and make a clean break from him.

When she opened the door, she saw the two giant suitcases by his feet. It seemed like he had rushed here right after he got off the plane.

She was too focused on his face and failed to notice that when she was peeking through the peephole.

What the hell was happening !

Before Nina could come around, Cameron carried his suitcases inside.

She looked at him, mouth agape.

As a popular celebrity who cared about her reputation, she stopped him. “What do you think you are doing?”

She was at the height of her influence right now. Being caught on camera with a man in the middle of a night at her house would ruin her career. Then she would have to make a clarification that he was her boyfriend or even fiancé.

Otherwise, people would gossip about her “promiscuous” private life non-stop. Thinking of that, Nina thought that he must be doing this on purpose. She collected herself and stood in front of the man again.

Cameron simply kicked the door open and forced Nina into the house with the suitcases in his hands until her back was against the wall.

The man’s slim and strong body pressed against hers as he whispered into her ear, “Long time no see, Nina Sanchez.” Nina admitted that her heart just skipped a beat. She was still in love with him.

But that didn’t mean he could do whatever he wanted to her! She was not some old toy that he could throw away when he was tired of it.

There He Is Again, My Ex-Husband - Chapter 522 Harbor

However, Nina was too much of a restive soul to be tricked by his flirt. She raised her head a little, showing her perfect jawline.

Then, she leaned closer to him and smiled, “Yeah, I haven’t heard from you for almost a decade. Long time indeed.”

She had pictured the day she met Cameron again over and over. The scenario that ran through her head most frequently was that Cameron would blame her for leaving him and give her a hard time.

She had also thought about the situation where they were alienated and he would treat her like a total stranger.

What she had never expected was that he would come back to find her right after he got off the plane and pressed her against the wall with his own body.

Although Nina was shocked, she still had a fully functioning brain.

The words she just threw at him were full of irony, insinuating that it was completely ridiculous of him to come back so suddenly and make such an intimate move on her after vanishing into thin air for almost a decade.

Nina thought that Cameron would be embarrassed after hearing that. Unexpectedly, he moved even closer to her and replied calmly, "Four years of college plus five years after graduation. It's exactly nine years."

Nina froze, didn't know how to react.

Her heart ached after realizing that it had been nine years since she last saw him. Meanwhile, she was shocked that Cameron still remembered how long they had separated.

She hadn't heard from him since he left nine years ago. She thought he had long forgotten about her.

Her feelings were mixed. She smacked him on his chest. "Cameron Dauster, you bastard!"

Nina tried to wriggle free in the heat of the moment.

Cameron tightened his grip, then lowered his head to kiss her on the lips.

Nina tried to resist it and even wanted to tackle him. But he was Cameron, the man she had dreamed about meeting again.

Although it was a little strange to be so intimate with him after he disappeared from her life for so many years, she had nothing to lose.

She wrapped her arms around his neck and kissed back harder.
Moments later, Cameron let go of her in an attempt to curb his burning desire.

He stared at her and asked, "Where's the bathroom? I have to take a shower. I just got off the plane and didn't have time to freshen up." His voice was hoarse.

"Second floor." Nina didn't know why would she tell him that.
Hearing the man's chuckle, Nina turned angry from embarrassment.

Her answer was tantamount to letting him stay and wanting to do something with him later. Thinking of that, she pushed the man away.

Cameron went to the second floor, leaving Nina downstairs regretting what she had said.

Cameron didn't even bother to take a change of clothes with him. He would have to take it off later anyway.

Nina buried her face in her hands and paced around the living room. He wanted to call Emelia for help. But Emelia was pregnant right now. She might have already fallen asleep.

Moreover, Emelia might be shocked if Nina told her that Cameron was upstairs taking a shower in her house. Considering that sudden mood change was bad for pregnant women, Nina gave up the idea of calling Emelia.

Nina threw herself into the couch and closed her eyes, trying to calm herself down.

But all she could think of was her kissing Cameron just now. Her heart beat even faster.

Nina patted her face, forcing herself to stop thinking about it.

"Nina Sanchez, get a grip! Remember what he had done to you?" she thought.

She had handled all the kiss scenes with those handsome actors calmly. What was so special about Cameron? It was just one kiss. Why was her heart racing?

Nina couldn't help but recalled the day when they first met. They were both young back then.

He was not as sturdy as he was right now and she was always happy and joyful.

They were with each other every day in that summer after they graduated from high school.

She didn't feel bad for giving herself to him.

At that time, he was her everything. She thought he was her harbor. Therefore, she gave him all she had.

When Cameron's mother slapped the cheque right in her face, she suddenly realized that she didn't live in a fairytale and lovers didn't always get to live happily ever after.

His parents wanted him to go abroad, but he said he would stay for Nina. His parents grew anxious because his reckless decision would ruin his future.

Nina also knew that. When she took the cheque and broke up with Cameron, her heart shattered into million pieces.

She loved him. That was why she did it. She wanted what was best for him.

"You like it here?" Cameron's voice pulled her back from her memories.

Nina opened her eyes to see Cameron standing in front of her with only a bath towel tied around his waist.

She had never seen his body after that summer. Now that he was standing there half-naked, Nina had to admit that she was a little aroused.

She was about to stand up from the couch to get her mind off things when Cameron pounced on her.

Next thing she knew, their bodies intertwined.

However, she still had grievance in her heart after all. When they were about to reach the climax, she pushed people away a bit and said with a smile: "Mr. Dauster, it has been so many years and you are still a bad kisser."

Seeing his expression stiffen, she beamed. "I've kissed so many men over the years. What's the saying, practice makes perfect?"

She could tell Cameron was burning up.

Although she kissed those actors for work reasons, this piece of information was still enough to make Cameron go crazy. But she didn't know that her saying that to an energetic man was simply a mistake.

Cameron didn't let Nina sleep for the whole night.

There He Is Again, My Ex-Husband - Chapter 523

French Leave

When Nina woke up in the morning, she thought she would miss her flight. She checked the time and found it was still early.

The man beside her had his arms around her waist, sound asleep.

Nina didn't know how could he sleep last night. She couldn't fall asleep because her heart was a mess and didn't know how to face him.

If he had come back just a few years earlier, she would open her arms and get back with him all over again.

But now...

Now, it was too late. Her faith in him had died down, and her feelings for him had faded.

Funny how he came back just when she decided to move on.

She lay there quietly, listening to his heartbeat. Then she decided to take French leave. She had a flight to catch anyway, which was a perfect excuse for leaving without saying goodbye.

This time, she would stay in a heavily-guarded military base with the crew for the filming, close to being isolated from the outside world for around three months.

Nina was glad that she agreed to take the role because she still had three months to sort herself out before confronting Cameron. The other reason why she wanted to leave without telling him was that she wanted him to have a taste of his own poison. She wanted to see how would he suffer after she disappeared from his world.

Nina lifted the comforter and tried to get out of the bed. However, the second her feet touched the ground, the pain from her lower body hit her. She fell back into the bed.

Look at what Cameron had done! He did her over and over again last night. Now, it pained her to walk!

However, Nina was tough enough to power through it. She walked out of the bedroom, washed up, and grabbed her suitcase before she left.

The first thing she did when she got in a taxi heading to the airport was call Sherlyn.

Sherlyn was still sleeping. After being woken up by Nina's call, she asked in a drowsy voice, "What are you doing calling me this early?"

Nina's flight was in the afternoon. They had planned it out yesterday. They would have lunch together and then Sherlyn would drive Nina to the airport. Nina was never an early bird. That was why Sherlyn was surprised to get her call at this time.

Nina said solemnly, "Sherlyn, I need your help on two things. It's urgent." "What's wrong?" Sherlyn had never seen Nina being so serious in her entire friendship with Nina.

"I can't tell you right now." Nina had no time to explain it to Sherlyn. "First, change my flight. I have to catch the earliest flight to leave Riverside City. I am already on my way to the airport."

"What?" Sherlyn was at a loss of words.

"Second, when will the dating show make the official announcement? I want them to make it right now and say I'll be in it." Nina added.

Although she and Cameron just had sex last night, it didn't mean anything. She wanted Cameron to know that she was going to be in a dating show and make him jealous.

He had left her waiting for so long. She couldn't be coaxed that easily.

He had never explained anything about his disappearance. If she forgave him just like that, how would that make her look?

Also, she didn't know what she was to him.

Did he still love her? Still blaming her? Or was he just looking for a good lay?

It was not completely impossible. As one of the top actresses in the showbiz, Nina had a pretty face and nice body.

She looked stunning and dazzling in every photo. Her womanly curve was simply heaven-sent.

She also thought of another more dramatic possibility, that is, the reason why Cameron came back to her was to trifle with her feelings to get back at her for leaving him. The second he realized that she was falling for him all over again, he would dump her.

But no matter what game he was playing, Nina wouldn't fall for it.

"What happened to you last night? Why did you change your mind?" Sherlyn was shocked by Nina's words.

They had just communicated with the dating show's crew last night. The crew meant to wait and make the announcement till the last minute to leave enough suspense.

All these years in the showbiz, Nina had never been in a serious relationship. Love scandals about her were always clarified as soon as possible.

Some people said that she already had a secret sugar daddy, others believed that she couldn't fall in love with a man because she was a lesbian. Nina was a controversial public figure. People would want to watch her on the show. That was why the crew decided to save the announcement of her participation for the last.

Nina's sudden change of heart really gave Sherlyn a headache. Nina pleaded, "My sweet angel Sherlyn. Please make it work! My happiness depends on this." Sherlyn was left even more confused. "Your happiness?"

"Don't ask. Just use your magical communication skills to help me get this done. Love you." Nina could be such a sweet talker.

Sherlyn was egged on by her words and got to the business the second she hung up the phone.

Nina heaved a sigh of relief. She believed that Sherlyn was competent enough to handle this.

It was still early when she got to the airport. Sherlyn was really efficient. She had already changed the flight for her.

After Nina boarded the plane, Nina received a message from Sherlyn when she was waiting for the plane to take off. "All done. The announcement will be out after you land."

Nina messaged Sherlyn numerous kiss and heart emojis, and then she turned off her phone in satisfaction.

There He Is Again, My Ex-Husband - Chapter 524 She Was As Tough As Ever

Cameron hadn't got a good night's sleep like this for a long time. He had dreamed a girl was calling out his name with a charming smile while he was touching her soft body.

Combined with the jet lag, he slept until noon.

When he woke up, he was stunned at the sight of the exquisite white chandelier hanging from the ceiling, which was obviously the women's style. He could tell it was not the incandescent lamp in his apartment. Because he had counted the lines on the lamp cap countless times on those sleepless nights.

Surely, he was not in his apartment.

Cameron took a few minutes to realize that he had returned to his home country and spent one night with the girl who always appeared in his dream. That was why he was at her house.

Recalling what happened last night, Cameron held his forehead and couldn't help but laugh.

She was still as tough as ever and would only become meek after an intense sex.

However, Cameron felt a little strange at this moment.

He turned around only to find that the girl had long since disappeared.

He immediately sat up and frowned. "Nina?"

His voice was as deep and pleasant as the sound of a cello.

There was no response in the empty room. A bad feeling swept Cameron.

He got up in the towel and went downstairs to look for Nina while constantly thinking about how to start the conversation with her.

There wasn't a single person in the huge villa. Cameron finally saw his two suitcases lying on the floor in the doorway.

He remembered that he had put them near the wall when he came in last night.

Obviously, someone had kicked them over.

Thinking of the image that Nina was pissed off, he couldn't stop grinning.

She was a sassy and straightforward person, and this was something she definitely would do.

Then, he saw a large piece of white paper stuck on one of the suitcases. He walked over and picked it up, finding it was a note that Nina had left for him.

The message was written by a thick black marker, and it said, "Mr. Dauster, it was just a one-night stand between adults. If you want compensation, please contact my agent, Sherlyn Lansdale. Just tell her how much you want."

“PS: Please leave my house immediately after you wake up. Close the door and better leave at night to avoid being caught on camera by the paparazzi.”

Cameron tore up the note and threw it into the trash can, pretending never to see it. She could do anything she wanted, but he still had his own purpose.

Cameron opened his suitcase, took out a change of clothes, went upstairs, and took a shower to refresh himself. He made two assumptions about Nina’s leaving before he woke up.

Firstly, she couldn’t face what happened last night, so she chose to escape. Secondly, she hated him, so she tried to get back at him in this way.

But she definitely still had him in her heart, for whatever purpose.

Otherwise, with her disposition, she wouldn’t have let him touch her last night, not even a single finger.

After taking a shower, his phone rang.

It was from Lucien Fowler, his partner and also the apparent person in charge of Camcien Lifetech.

Lucien asked over the phone, “Will you come to the office today?”

Lucien knew that Cameron had returned from abroad.

He and Cameron knew each other during their studies abroad. But he had returned a few years ago. Compared with doing research, he was better at socializing. Cameron took the opportunity to start this biological company with him.

Hence, they could work together and concentrate on their respective fields. Lucien was responsible for the daily management and operation of the company, while Cameron was responsible for the research and development behind the scenes.

With perfect cooperation, Camcien Lifetech has quickly become a new star in the commercial circle of Riverside City over the past few years. Cameron’s several leading research achievements even brought Camcien Lifetech to the forefront of the biological industry.

“Yes.” Cameron replied, “Pick me up in 20 minutes.”

“Okay.” Lucien laughed and uttered, “I’ve already prepared an office for you. Welcome back.”

“Thank you.” Cameron simply replied. He had excellent partners at Tymers Entertainment and Camcien Lifetech, which guaranteed him the possibility to concentrate more on his studies and research during these years abroad.

Having finished talking to Lucien, Cameron went downstairs to the kitchen and skillfully prepared breakfast for himself.

As for his suitcases, Cameron thought for a moment and decided to take them away temporarily.

He had planned to live here, but hadn’t expected that Nina would directly leave. Now he didn’t have a key and could only wait till she returned.

Twenty minutes later, Lucien saw Cameron walking out of the villas with two suitcases. He took off his sunglasses and looked around. Then he asked in confusion, “Whose house did you stay at last night?”

Lucien knew where Cameron lived, for he had helped with buying and decorating Cameron’s house, so he could tell that this house neither belonged to Cameron’s or Cameron’s parents.

Cameron simply said, “A friend’s house.”

Cameron hadn’t spoken with Lucien about his story with Nina for two reasons. First, Lucien was very active in the business circle and could meet Nina on many occasions.

Cameron was afraid that Lucien would spill the beans to Nina if he knew.

Secondly, Cameron didn’t know how to explain how he had been tangling with Nina for so many years. Therefore, he had never talked about it with Lucien. Since he had returned from abroad now, he decided to tell Lucien the whole story, but not now while they were standing on the street.

Lucien walked around Cameron several times, looking him up and down for a long time, then he leaned closer to him, sniffed, and said meaningfully, "I can smell the fragrance of women all over you. You must have stayed in a woman's house last night."

"No sooner had you returned from abroad than you spent a night with a woman! It overturned your cool and unapproachable image in my heart!" Lucien was really a bit sharp-tongued.

Cameron wanted to kick him away. The shampoo and shower gel he used were all Nina's, so he was full of women's fragrances.

On the other hand, Lucien leaned so close to him and sniffed, causing the security guards at the gate to keep looking at them curiously, as if they were a couple.

"Stay away from me." At the thought of this, Cameron pushed Lucien to the side, then put one of his suitcases into the trunk.

There He Is Again, My Ex-Husband - Chapter 525 The Most Beautiful, Wildest and Gorgeous Flower

Lucien helped Cameron with another suitcase, but he didn't stop talking. "I heard that many celebrities live here because of the strict security in this villa area. Did you meet any celebrities on the way out?"

Cameron didn't answer.

If he said that the woman he was with last night was a famous A-list actress in the entertainment industry, he didn't know if it would make Lucien's jaw drop.

So, Cameron ignored Lucien's question and got in the car. Lucien had long known Cameron was less talkative for many years, so he didn't mind Cameron not answering.

After Lucien got into the car, he continued while driving, "By the way, I've prepared a surprise for you."

"What surprise?" Cameron wasn't interested in it at all. The so-called surprise was probably not a good surprise as he knew Lucien.

Lucien said mysteriously, "You'll see." As soon as he finished speaking, Lucien suddenly was aware of something and added, "Maybe... It might not be a surprise."

Lucien didn't expect that Cameron was seeing someone, which made his arrangement quite awkward. However, it was all set.

He couldn't change it for the moment and could only proceed with it as planned.

When they arrived at Camcien Lifetech, located in Haytan Tower, Lucien excitedly took Cameron to an office. "Come! Look at the office I've prepared for you. It's designed according to your noble and cold temperament. Moreover, you're the only person on this floor. It's absolutely quiet."

Cameron was indeed very satisfied with this office. Lucien knew his preferences very well, so he sincerely replied, "Thank you.
It's not bad."

Lucien continued, "There is only an office room, a laboratory room, and a large multimedia conference room on this floor. But we rarely use it. You don't have to worry about disturbing you."

"Alright." What Cameron needed the most was silence.

Lucien suddenly leaned closer to him and observed mysteriously, "By the way, I had lowered the rent of the upper floor for your friend Viggo as you said. And do you know whom Viggo introduced it to?"

Cameron raised his eyebrows and pretended knowing nothing. "To whom?"

"Nina Sanchez!" Lucien shouted excitedly and almost jumped up when mentioning the name, startling Cameron.

"Do you know Nina Sanchez?" Without waiting for an answer, Lucien thought that Cameron didn't know Nina and began to explain to him. "You might not know much about the stars in the domestic entertainment industry these years. Nina Sanchez is one of the most popular actresses now."

“Her face and her figure were amazing! You know what people say?” Lucien’s face was full of desire. “She has the face of an Angel and a hot body!”

As Lucien finished speaking excitedly, he suddenly felt Cameron’s cold gaze. He asked, puzzling. “What’s wrong?” “Nothing,” Cameron said lightly.

Any man wouldn’t be happy if he knew other men coveted his woman.

However, Lucien knew Cameron too well. The more he spoke in such a tone, the more he felt unhappy.

Lucien thought about what he had just said and suddenly slapped his forehead. He remarked with certainty, “I know. You must think that I was exaggerating about Nina Sanchez. You don’t believe that there is such a perfect woman in the world, right?”

Cameron was speechless.

Was Lucien a fool?

What was going through his mind? Cameron seriously doubted how Lucien had made it to the same university as he did.

Lucien didn’t notice Cameron’s weird expression. He took out his phone and searched many beautiful photos of Nina. “Come, let me show you. She is Nina Sanchez.”

Lucien defended his words as he slid his thumb across the photos. “See? I’m not exaggerating. She is really a peerless beauty, isn’t she? I’ve seen her a few times at some events. She’s even more beautiful in person.”

Cameron took a deep breath, thinking that if Lucien dared to show such a covetous look in front of him again, he would punch Lucien in the face.

Fortunately, Lucien put away his phone the next second, then said in a gloomy tone, “A shame about such a beautiful woman.” Cameron raised an eyebrow. “What do you mean?”

Lucien said mysteriously, “The beauty doesn’t have even one boyfriend these years. It’s said that she doesn’t like men, but women!”

Taking a deep breath, Cameron was almost shocked to death by Lucien's remarks.

Lucien thought Cameron was just surprised to hear that, so he moved closer to Cameron and asked, "Do you think so?" "Yeah, it's quite a pity." Then Cameron changed the topic. "Didn't you say that you've prepared a surprise for me?"

He really didn't want to hear Lucien talking nonsense. Not only did he know Nina, but he was also very familiar with everything about her, such as the number of moles on her body and even the detailed location of each mole.

He was even more sure that Nina definitely didn't like women. Otherwise, how could she have sex with him last night? Cameron's question immediately brought Lucien back to earth.

"Wait a moment." He took out his phone, walked to the side, and made a call.

In a few minutes, the elevator doors opened, and a young, fashionably dressed girl came out, carrying a document bag.

"Cameron, Lucien." As she reached them, the girl greeted them as though they had been friends for years. Then, her watery eyes fell on Cameron, alighted with joy.

"Melanie?" A frown flitted across Cameron's face. "Why are you here?"

Melanie Blanchard was the daughter of a tutor of Cameron and Lucien when studying abroad. Hence, both of them naturally knew her.

In recent years, Cameron had switched to another tutor for further studies, but he still had kept in contact with Melanie and that tutor.

Lucien explained. "You know what? When Melanie heard you were coming back, she deliberately followed suit. So, I hired her and arranged her as your assistant."

Hearing this, Cameron knew what was going on and couldn't help but frown as he asked Lucien, "Is this your so-called surprise?"

Cameron had long known that Melanie liked him. There were countless Chinese or foreign girls who admired him all these years, but he wasn't interested in anyone.

He had already picked the most beautiful, wild, and gorgeous flower in the world. There had been no place for the other flowers in his heart.

After switching to another tutor, Cameron deliberately reduced his contact with Melanie to avoid their paths crossing, but he didn't expect Lucien to hire her as his assistant.

Cameron was utterly lost for words.

There He Is Again, My Ex-Husband - Chapter 526 Already Have Someone in My Heart

"I don't need an assistant." Without considering anyone's feelings, Cameron coldly refused.

Melanie's eyes were moist as though she was about to cry.

She was also a person who had never suffered any failure or setbacks since she was born. But now Cameron rejected her in person, and she felt so humiliated.

Lucien quickly tried to smooth things over and dragged Cameron to the side. "What are you doing?" Melanie came all the way to see...

Before Lucien could finish, Cameron interrupted coldly, "When you picked me up just now, you should know that I spent the night at a woman's house."

Cameron didn't lower his voice deliberately so that Melanie could hear him.

As expected, Melanie was shocked in disbelief.

Seeing Melanie's expression, Lucien almost jumped out of his shoes. He tugged at Cameron's sleeve and asked in a low voice, "I know it. So what? It means nothing!"

Lucien had indeed guessed it. However, Cameron didn't introduce the woman to him but waited alone at the entrance with suitcases. The woman didn't even show up. In his view, Cameron didn't take that woman seriously.

Perhaps it was just a one-night stand, which wouldn't affect him helping Melanie pursue Cameron.

Melanie was the youngest daughter of their tutor. In Lucien's eyes, Melanie was young, beautiful, and gentle. She was suitable for a cold fish like Cameron, who looked utterly emotionless. Most importantly, Melanie loved Cameron deeply. Weren't they a perfect match?

Cameron couldn't bother to speak with Lucien. He pulled Lucien's hand away and walked toward Melanie. "Melanie, your parents are both living abroad. Riverside City won't be your home."

In other words, she shouldn't have left her parents and come to Riverside City for him.

When Melanie heard what Cameron had just said, tears were streaming down her cheeks.

Seeing the young girl crying in front of the two men, Lucien couldn't bear to watch and hurriedly gave Melanie a tissue to wipe her tears.

Cameron didn't care at all and coldly continued, "Besides, I've already made it clear that I don't have loving feelings for you. If you insist on pursuing me, it will never work."

Cameron had made his attitude clear abroad when noticing Melanie's had an affection for him. It was just that Melanie hadn't given up all these years.

Cameron thought for a moment and added, "I already have someone I love, and I'll marry her in the future." As soon as Cameron finished speaking, both Melanie and Lucien were stunned.

Lucien glared at Cameron as if he had seen a stranger. He had known Cameron for years but never heard Cameron mention someone he liked.

All these years, Cameron hadn't shown any interest in women. For a time, Lucien thought that he liked men.

Otherwise, he wouldn't have helped Melanie actively because he thought that perhaps Cameron was too dull to know his own heart.

Melanie felt the same way as Lucien.

Cameron had been single all these years, making Melanie believe that there was no loved person in Cameron's heart. And she had stayed with Cameron for years because of her father, so she surely thought that she had the advantage of being his girlfriend.

But who would have expected that Cameron could spend the night with a woman and even claim that he loved that woman? Melanie felt that her entire world had collapsed, so she ran away crying.

Lucien was shocked with his mouth and even forgot to comfort Melanie.

Cameron glared at Lucien in disgust. "Don't mess around with my personal affair again."

Only then did Lucien come back to his senses. "You already have someone you like?" he murmured in disbelief. "You mean the woman who spent the night with you last night?"

"Who else would I be talking about?" Cameron looked at Lucien in disdain.

He wouldn't go to a woman's house as soon as he landed if he didn't like her. Could it be that he was such an easy man? Lucien stomped his foot. "But you never said it."

Cameron snorted, "That doesn't mean I don't have one."

"Then why didn't you introduce her to me today?" asked Lucien, putting his hands on his waist. "And why didn't she show up?" The question stuck with Cameron. He didn't want to keep it a secret, but Nina had run away, and he could do nothing about it. When seeing Cameron stiffened for a moment, Lucien came closer and asked, "Why so silent?"

Before Cameron could say anything, Lucien said with certainty, "I know. You don't have a girlfriend, right? You just lied to Melanie to make her give up!"

Cameron was speechless again.

Was Lucien soft in the head?

He raised his hand on his forehead and took a deep breath. Then he gritted his teeth and scolded, "Have you watched too many cheeky soap operas? What the hell is going on with your mind!"

"So, do you really have a girlfriend? Who is she?" Lucien stared at him and asked. "Manage to let Melanie leave the company first. I'll tell you later." Cameron pointed in the direction that Melanie had left.

Lucien was extremely depressed. "It's impossible to send her away. I've promised our tutor to take care of Melanie here. I can only dismiss her as your assistant for now."

Lucien had even promised to be the matchmaker for Melanie and Cameron. If he sent Melanie back now, how could he face their tutor in the future?

"Up to you." Cameron didn't insist on forcing Melanie to leave Riverside City, as long as Melanie would not be his assistant and stayed away from him. As for the rest, it was not his concern. After all, he wasn't the one who promised to take care of Melanie.

Cameron's phone rang at that moment. He pulled out the phone and instantly stopped breathing as he looked at the screen.

It was a message sent by the news app. "Nina Sanchez has announced herself to join a dating reality show, "the headline read.

He clicked on the details page and saw Nina's photo.

Cameron knew that Nina had intended to join a love reality show before. And Nina was still the actress of Tymers at that time.

Hence, he had directly rejected her proposal.

After that, Nina hadn't mentioned it again. Cameron thought Nina had given up the idea.

He hadn't expected that she would announce joining this show immediately after leaving Tymers, especially the day after they had sex. Did she do it on purpose?

Although no one knew about his relationship with Nina, he felt humiliated.

No! He even felt like Nina was cheating on him!

There He Is Again, My Ex-Husband - Chapter 527 I'll Give You Two Options

Cameron stared at Nina's radiant smile on the screen and squeezed his phone hard.

She still knew how to antagonize him.

"What's wrong? You don't look well." Lucien came over and looked down at Cameron's phone.

Cameron quickly put his phone away and gave Lucien a stern look. "Go and find Melanie at once!"

After all, Melanie was their tutor's favorite daughter, and he still couldn't let anything happen to her.

Lucien instantly lost interest in checking Cameron's phone and left to look for Melanie.

Lucien didn't expect all things to turn out to be a joke. Now he was the most embarrassed one to be caught in the middle.

Honestly, he did it out of kindness.

After Lucien left, Cameron walked into his office. There was a floor-to-ceiling window with a view of the broad sea. As he was staring at the sea and pondering what to do, he got a call from Viggo.

"Have you seen the news? Nina will join a love variety show," asked Viggo. Cameron gritted his teeth. "I saw it." Viggo was confused. "Didn't you go to see her last night? What's wrong with you two?"

Viggo and Nina lived in the same villa area. Last night, Viggo called to tell the security guard that Cameron was his friend and let Cameron enter.

That was why Viggo also knew about last night. Hence, he hurriedly called to ask Cameron what was going on when he saw the news.

“What do you think if a woman left you alone at the house?” Cameron spoke with his teeth gritted.

Viggo laughed. “You mean she pretends nothing happened?”

Cameron sneered to express his anger.

“Then what do you plan to do?” Viggo sincerely wanted to offer help. “Do you want me to persuade her?”

Viggo was a veteran actor and had cooperated with Nina for years. So he thought Nina would probably listen to his words.

“No need. I’ll talk to her myself,” refused Cameron.

Viggo replied, “Alright. But do let me know if there’s anything I can help you with.”

Then Viggo asked again, “By the way, when will you officially be back to the company?”

Cameron was one of the partners of Tymers Entertainment. Since Cameron had returned, he surely needed to run the company with Viggo together.

Cameron was silent for a moment before he answered, “Viggo, my future focus might still be on biological research. After all, it’s my field of expertise.”

“I understand.” Viggo knew what Cameron meant. Cameron planned not to join the management team at present.

Cameron added, “I trust your management ability. I’d like to work behind the scenes for now. Let’s talk about it when I need to be present in the future.”

“Okay.” Viggo supported Cameron’s decision unconditionally. “A genius like you should specialize in the fields of your expertise.

After all, it’s the greatest benefit of humankind.”

People said that the Twenty-first century was a century of biological science. Any equipment or product developed by a biological company would make a big difference in human life. Hence, Viggo supported that Cameron should focus on biological research as well.

“Thank you.”

Then they ended the call.

Cameron pondered for a while before calling Nina.

Nina answered the call no sooner than a second, but she asked coldly, “Hello, who is it?”

“Are you serious about recording the love variety show?” asked Cameron. He chose not to say his name, for he believed she could recognize his voice.

Nina replied as if that was how it ought to be, “Of course I’m. I’ve already signed the contract. And I can’t afford to pay a huge penalty.”

“Very good,” Cameron said through gritted teeth.

Although his tone was calm, Nina could tell that he was pissed off.

Nina asked, deliberately sounding a little discontented, “Mr. Dauster, why did you sound so weird? Is there something bothering you?”

“What do you think is bothering me?” Cameron asked rhetorically.

Nina replied heartlessly, “Do you think you have the right to meddle in my personal life just because we slept together last night? Come on. We are both adults. However, I do admit that our relationship is a little different from others.”

Cameron thought she would say something nice, so he didn't interrupt her. "After all, you're my ex. Even though I had sex with you, I'll never rekindle things with you." Cameron's fingers tightened around his phone, and he decided not to talk nonsense with her. Or he would be going to explode.

He directly cut in, "I'll give you two options. First one, I'll pay the penalty, and you'll give up recording this show. Second one, I'll be on the show and be your date."

Cameron knew that the theme of a love variety show was about dates. If he went to be her date on this show, they would be dating like a real couple.

That way, Nina wouldn't be seeing other men, and Cameron could spend more time with her. It was a win-win.

Cameron also knew that the female guests would change the male guests, but he would never let it happen to him.

He didn't care how other male guests would exchange, but he would be Nina's only date.

Cameron's utterances made Nina have to make the passive choice.

She sneered, "Cameron, congratulations! You finally turned from a naive teenager into a shrewd boss after all these years of studying abroad."

Nina really knew how to make caustic remarks. Cameron said in a rage, "Call me when you make your decision."

Then, he hung up the phone.

There He Is Again, My Ex-Husband - Chapter 528 A Quarrel

After the call, Nina was so mad that she almost threw her phone away.

She had already arrived at the shooting site, surrounded by all the staff. If it weren't for minding her image, she would have called back and scolded Cameron.

Nina walked up and down furiously. Sylvie, Nina's assistant, asked worriedly, "Nina, what's wrong?" Nina said with her teeth gritted, "I'm extremely angry and will explode at any time. You better stay away from me." Sylvie dramatically jumped to the side. "Didn't we just arrive here? Who provoked you?"

Nina put her hands on her waist and sighed. No one had provoked her here, but someone had in Riverside City, thousands of miles away.

After taking another deep breath, Nina took her phone and got into her RV. She asked the driver to get out of the car first and then called Cameron again. The call was answered in a second.

Nina said, smiling, "I'm quite looking forward to being your date on the show."

She would never cancel the contract. It was not the matter of money. Even if Cameron didn't pay the penalty, she could also afford it on her own.

When she decided to participate in this show, she didn't know that Cameron would come back. She just wanted to forget Cameron and give herself a chance to start over again. And she hadn't changed her mind until Cameron had returned. On the contrary, she had been even more determined to join this show.

"Are you sure?" asked Cameron.

Nina's expression instantly changed. "That's something I'm supposed to be asking you. Are you sure you want to be on the show? Aren't you afraid that your parents will be mad at you?"

Nina knew that Cameron came from a scholarly family. How could his parents tolerate their excellent son appearing on a reality show and even with the woman they dislike?

The so-called scholarly family wasn't much superior to others, but they tended to act like they were nobler than others. That was why Cameron's parents didn't like Nina, for she was a public figure but not an advanced talent.

Cameron simply replied, "This is my business, not theirs." Nina sneered, "Bullshit!"

She was too aggravated to mind her words. Anyway, Cameron had long known her true personality, so she didn't need to restrain herself.

Nina added, "They are your parents. It's a doomed relationship that you could never ignore. If you participate in this show, wait for your entire family to criticize you!"

Nina almost roared. Cameron was silent on the phone for a while. Just as Nina thought he was about to change his mind, he suddenly uttered, "Are you so concerned about my situation?"

Nina's fury was ignited once again. She sneered, "Why should I care about an ex-boyfriend who had left for years without a word?"

Before Cameron could say anything, Nina continued, "You're overthinking it. I just don't want your mother to disturb my life again.

Cameron, I don't want to experience the humiliation I had suffered again!" Somehow, Nina just shouted out these words.

It was the most resentful and painful memory she had buried deep in her heart.

Initially, she hadn't planned to say these words to Cameron. After all, so many years had passed. But when she knew Cameron's plan, the first image that came to her mind was Cameron's mother, Colleen Donovan. If Colleen saw this show, Nina would be humiliated by her again. Probably she would throw a check at Nina's face again.

Cameron didn't say anything for a long time. It was obvious that Nina's words were unexpected.

There was a long silence between them before Cameron opened his mouth. His voice was tinged with a trace of bitterness. "I apologize for what my mother did to you."

"Then, let us not disturb each other in the future," Nina directly hung up the phone. She slowly leaned against the seat, her eyes turning red.

She had waited for so many years, but now she decided to give up. A big part of the reason was Cameron's mother.

A few days ago, when she accompanied Emelia to try on the wedding dress, that Patricia came to pick on them, which reminded her of Colleen.

Despair filled her heart, for she felt exhausted dealing with such a mother-in-law.

She had been working hard enough every day. If she still had to face a mother-in-law who disliked her when getting home, she might as well make a clean break with Cameron. Then she could live a happier life.

A few years earlier, Nina had been confident in waiting for Cameron to return.

She had even said impulsively that she would pursue him again if Cameron no longer loved her.

But as time passed, she slowly felt tired. Perhaps when people reached a certain age, their passion would fade, and they only wanted to live a quiet life.

Nina stayed in the RV for a timeless time. Suddenly, Sylvie knocked on the door. "Nina, the filming is going to start."

Nina quickly collected all her emotions. She shook her short hair, then opened the door and threw herself into her work.

Cameron was still sitting alone in his office, not moving for a long time.

Today's conversation was out of his expectations.

All these years, he knew that Nina didn't have any love affairs and knew that she still hadn't gotten over him. Hence, he was confident that she would continue to love him wholeheartedly like before as long as he returned.

He had no thought in his head except to be reunited with Nina. But he forgot to consider her situation.

He was indeed too naive and selfish.

When he calmed down, he called Viggo.

"I hope the program team can cancel Nina's contract. Please help me to negotiate with them. I'll pay for it no matter how much it will cost."

He could temporarily give up joining the show so that he wouldn't cause unnecessary trouble for her, but he couldn't stand to watch her dating other men.

As for his parents, he would figure out what to do.

Viggo quickly called back, "The Director said no. But it's understanding in terms of Nina's current popularity." Viggo analyzed it in his professional view. "This show only gained a little attention before, but today, Nina's appearance on this show gained a huge attention. Nina's joining is beneficial to the program's ratings and will help them boost the popularity of the second season. It's impossible to change Nina."

There He Is Again, My Ex-Husband - Chapter 529 The Sense of Crisis

"I see." After a moment of silence, Cameron replied.

Viggo asked curiously, "Didn't you have a talk with her?" Cameron was very frustrated.

That was not a talk but a quarrel.

Viggo thought for a moment and uttered, "In my opinion, just let it go. Maybe in the end, she will find out that you are the best one."

Cameron snorted. "Easy for you to say. Can you watch a woman you love dating another man?"

Viggo was lost for words for a second. Then he continued, "It's a show. There are so many staff standing around them. There will be no physical intimacy except for chatting and dining. Moreover, Nina doesn't know the male guest at all. Do you think she's the kind of person who would fall in love with someone she just met?"

Cameron admitted that Viggo's words brought him a little comfort.

However, he still felt a little uncomfortable. At the thought of her having dinner and chatting with another man, Cameron was hard to take it well.

But then he thought, compared with those kiss scenes in Nina's plays, it was not a big deal.

At this thought, Cameron felt much better when he heard Viggo suddenly speaking, "I'm afraid that I have bad news for you. I just received a message from the Director that Douglas will also join this show. And he had been successfully selected as Nina's date."

Cameron didn't say anything.

"Do you still remember Douglas Cleveland?" Viggo immediately added, "That rich playboy who had pursued Nina a few years ago. You had managed to get him out of the country. But he came back recently and pursued Nina again. I heard that he wanted Nina to marry him. Maybe he wants to get married around this age as soon as possible."

Cameron's heart fell again. How could he not remember Douglas Cleveland? He remembered each man who had pursued Nina all these years.

Hence, Cameron felt even more depressed.

He had just given up participating in this show but was told this bad news.

If it were any other man, he would have been able to remain calm, but it was Douglas.

This man had pursued Nina crazily a few years ago that he had no choice but to manage to move him out of the country.

He had thought that Douglas had already forgotten Nina while immersing in the colorful life abroad.

"What do you think about me joining this show?" Cameron gritted his teeth and asked.

Cameron changed his mind again. Because Douglas stimulated him, and he couldn't care about much.

If his parents knew it, he wouldn't allow them to disturb Nina's life.

"What?" Viggo thought he had misheard.

"Don't you hate to expose in the public eye most?" In the past few years of working with Cameron, Viggo knew Cameron very well.

Whether for Tymers or Camcien, Cameron had never presented in public activities or events.

It wasn't just because he had been studying abroad, but still, he didn't want Nina to know his identity in the two companies. He was more willing to stay behind the scenes to control everything.

Cameron didn't explain but said with determination, "Get me in. I don't care how."

Viggo smiled. "Leave it to me if you decide to. With my reputation in the entertainment industry for so many years, getting you in won't be a problem."

Cameron thought that a love reality show needed more male guests to choose from.

Besides, He guessed that Douglas must get the chance through friends and might spent some money. Why couldn't he do the same thing?

An accomplished man like Cameron, who was way better than Douglas, would definitely get the priority to be Nina's date.

"Thank you," Cameron added, "Just let me know if you have any questions. It doesn't matter how much money it will cost." "Okay." Viggo hung up and quickly got down to contact the Director.

On the other hand, when Lucien found Melanie, she was crying alone on the rooftop.

Lucien handed her a packet of tissues and apologized earnestly, "I'm sorry. I didn't know Cameron would suddenly have a girlfriend. He never mentioned it these years."

Hearing this, Melanie cried even more.

Lucien was standing helplessly, and he didn't know how to comfort her. He could only look up at the sky with his hands in his pockets, praying that Melanie would stop crying.

Noticing that Lucien no longer comforted her, Melanie had to stop crying. She turned around and asked with red eyes, "Did he never say anything about it? You also have no idea who that woman is?"

Lucien shook his head sincerely. "I don't know. To be honest, I'm hearing about it for the first time today. If I had known it earlier, I wouldn't have chosen to be the matchmaker for you two. It must hurt you, doesn't it?"

Melanie started crying again. "It broke my heart. The moment I saw Cameron, his elegant and quiet presence attracted me deeply. So, I tried to meet him by all means, but he just focused on his studies and ignored me. Dad told me to wait patiently. Because Cameron was an intelligent and proud man, so he might not be interested in seeing anyone for the time being.

However, he participated in dangerous biological research with a new tutor when he graduated early. Since then, I have hardly seen him at all. And Dad also didn't allow me to see him for my safety. Now, I followed him to his country but found that he loved someone else. Lucien, tell me, what am I to him?" Melanie cried heartbrokenly. "It was me who met Cameron first. I've known you two since you studied abroad. Why didn't he choose me?"

Melanie complained, "Had he liked that woman before he went abroad? But all these years, they didn't have any contact, and the feelings must fade. Besides, he was still a teenager then. How could a teenager know what love is? He just wanted to spend time with girls when he was bored!"

There He Is Again, My Ex-Husband - Chapter 530 The Woman Upstairs

"I don't believe what he said! He must be lying to me!" Melanie stubbornly comforted herself.

Lucien thought for a moment and said, "Melanie, you should understand that there's no first-come-first-serve in a relationship.

Even if you are the first one to meet him, he still doesn't like you. No matter whom he fell in love with, he doesn't need to apologize to you."

Melanie was pissed off by Lucien's words.

Lucien continued, "Second, teenagers are indeed not as mature as adults. But that doesn't mean they don't know what love is.

Actually, there are always many people marrying the people whom they met in their youth, right?"

Hearing what Lucien said, Melanie was in a blue mood again.
“Lucien, which side are you on, Cameron or me?” cried Melanie.

“Of course, I’m on your side. So, I really don’t want you to immerse yourself in the wrong thought. Otherwise, you will be the one who gets hurt in the end.”

Lucien was trying to persuade Melanie to give up. Melanie shouted in a rage, “Go away!”

Lucien said resignedly, “Alright, I’ll leave immediately. But you’d better be back at the office soon. We need to discuss your future work arrangements.”

Since Cameron refused Melanie to be his assistant, he had to rearrange her position. Melanie turned away in anger. Lucien sighed and left.

In his opinion, since Cameron loved someone else, it was best for Melanie not to stay in Camcien anymore. Leaving Riverside City and returning to her home was the best choice.

Although Lucien didn’t know who that woman was, he knew Cameron must take her seriously. Or Cameron wouldn’t have admitted it in front of them. There was no point in staying here for Melanie.

But who was that woman?

Lucien was really curious.

After coming down from the rooftop, Lucien hurried to Cameron’s office and sat down opposite Cameron. “Alright, you can tell me your story now.”

Cameron was in a bad mood right now. He gave a glance at Lucien. “When did I say I would tell you?” Lucien was speechless.

He complained, “I’ve told you everything about my love affairs. But you never told me yours! It’s unfair!”

Cameron replied, “Your love affairs were countless. And I don’t know what’s true and what’s not true. But I just have one. I’m not going to tell you easily.”

Lucien angrily dragged his chair forward. "Are you saying it or not? You know what? I'm not leaving until you tell me."

However, Lucien didn't wait for Cameron's story but bad news. "I'm afraid that you need to cancel your travel plan. I have an important thing to do, so I can't stay in the office all day."

Lucien had long planned to leave Cameron to manage the company over some time as soon as he returned. Even if Cameron didn't like socializing, Lucien had decided to travel around the world.

Just now, Viggo had informed Cameron that he was successfully chosen to be Nina's date. So when Cameron was out for recording, Lucien still needed to deal with the business in the company.

Lucien jumped to his feet. "Why? What are you going to do? Since we formed this company in partnership, I've been running it for the past few years. I worked hard with little rest. Finally, you came back, and I had a chance to rest. And now you tell me to cancel the travel plan? I've bought all the tickets and booked all the hotels. Isn't it a waste of time and money? Damn you!" Lucien was boiling with rage and didn't mind him using bad words.

Cameron glanced at him. "Mind your words."

In Cameron's opinion, it was not appropriate to say bad words in the office, especially as the company's boss.

"I don't care. I'm going on vacation! I'm going to start my global travel!" Lucien was not in the mood to mind his words but just wanted to express outrage.

He had been looking forward to this around-the-world journey for a long time. How could he not be angry?

Cameron explained, looking apologetic. "I really have something important to do."

Lucien snorted. "What's more important than running a company?"

Cameron answered. "To pursue my girlfriend."

Lucien shrugged. "It does little to affect your work in the office during the day. Or no boss could be dating someone in this world." Cameron added honestly, "I'm going to record a show."

Lucien almost choked on his saliva.

"What did you say? Record a show?" Lucien couldn't believe what he heard. "Don't you hate to be seen in the media? If you are on a show, everyone will see your face. Are you okay with that?"

"Well," Cameron replied with one word.

He would definitely feel uncomfortable. But he had no choice.

Lucien was both angry and anxious. "What kind of woman are you pursuing? You even challenge yourself to do something you hate to do most?"

Cameron pointed to the ceiling. Lucien was puzzled. "Why are you pointing to the ceiling?"

Lucien was so confused but completely didn't think of Nina. After all, it was difficult to associate a gorgeous woman like Nina with a cold man like Cameron.

When Cameron was about to explain, he heard Lucien suddenly remark, "You mean she is the superstar in the field of biology and hard to get?"

Cameron couldn't help but roll his eyes.

But he thought for a moment and admitted what Lucien said was not completely wrong. Hence, he nodded and replied, "It's okay if you put it this way."

Nina had won all the acting awards and had been proven to be the most talented young actress in the entertainment circle. She was more than a superstar but a top star.

Cameron didn't want to talk in riddles anymore, so he added, "The woman upstairs."

“Upstairs?” Lucien didn’t understand at first. When he furrowed his brows and pondered for a few seconds, he was shocked with an open mouth.

He even dramatically stepped back and fell onto the sofa, acting like he couldn’t breathe. “Are you saying that the woman in your heart is Nina Sanchez?”

Cameron nodded. Lucien closed his eyes and pretended to faint.

Cameron said in disgust, “It would be a great pity if you weren’t an actor.”