

Timeless 501

CHAPTER 501 SWEET WORDS

"You don't love me anymore!" Seeing that he couldn't explain why it was so for a while, Hathaway accused him angrily at once, lifted the blanket, and intended to get out of bed.

Leon grabbed her in the first place and was unable to think of the right words to comfort her, so he simply took her in his arms and kissed her.

Hathaway struggled symbolically and then gave up her resistance.

In reality, Hathaway knew that Leon couldn't stop loving her. That was just a statement she made in her anger.

It took some time to go from unloving to loving, and so did it take time to transition from loving to unloving. They had been deeply in love these days, and Hathaway didn't feel any estrangement or indifference from Leon, so she naturally didn't think that Leon stopped loving her.

She just wondered why he wanted to touch her but didn't do it, so she said that in anger.

After kissing for a while, Leon cupped her face and said helplessly, "Who else can I love if I don't love you?"

Hathaway snorted, "Who knows? There are young and beautiful girls waiting for you to love."

Leon replied to her seriously, "In my eyes, you are young and pretty enough. No one else in this world will arouse my passion."

Hathaway pouted, "Sweet words!"

Then she continued to ask, "Don't think you can muddle through by saying sweet words. You haven't told me why you treated me in this way."

Leon, "..."

He couldn't explain it to her now.

If he said that he could no longer be unrestrained in bed because he had done something to the condom and caused her to be possibly pregnant, he was afraid that he would be kicked out to the street by her now.

But if he didn't explain, Hathaway would have doubts about it.

In the end, after weighing the pros and cons quickly, Leon leaned down to kiss Hathaway's pursed red lips because of her anger with deep affection.

Since he was in a dilemma, he would choose the lesser of two evils.

It should be okay if he gently did something intimate to her.

On the night before Leon returned to China, Hathaway ended up not having the strength to question him. Moreover, as she sent him to the airport early the next morning and was in a difficult position to part with him, she forgot to question him.

Only when Hathaway sat in the classroom and prepared for class did she realize that she forgot to question him about his initial abnormal behavior last night.

She had to admit that Leon was too cunning.

At this point, Hathaway's mind was filled with Leon, and she even suddenly felt empty inside.

She missed him so much.

This led to the first time she was distracted since she had been in class for so many days.

What was even more embarrassing was that she was named by the teacher. Teacher Marlon who gave them the lesson was known to be very strict. Even though she knew that Hathaway was Cynthia's daughter and bowled over by Leon's manners at the sight of him, she treated Hathaway without mercy, gave her a serious glare, and then spoke to the students in the classroom, "Men and love aren't the most important things in your lives, OK? Nothing is more important than trying to make yourselves better!"

Hathaway blushed at Marlon's words.

But she had to admit that Marlon's assertion was correct. In today's society, one person didn't have to rely on other people to survive but could stand out by virtue of ability and talent.

In reality, these words were not only for women but also for men.

No matter who you were, it was most important to make yourself stronger and better.

Hathaway couldn't sit still because she missed Leon, but after being named and criticized by Teacher Marlon, she finally calmed down and continued to listen carefully.

Hathaway didn't find it hard to spend time at school during the day. But when she returned to her rented apartment and was no longer faced with delicious food, warm lights, and Leon's affectionate kiss, she realized the feeling of loneliness and solitariness.

After throwing her documents onto the sofa, Hathaway threw herself on the sofa and didn't want to move at all.

Previously, Leon had prepared the meal when she came back, so she only needed to wash her hands and sit down to eat.

After the meal, Leon cleaned up the dishes and went to the kitchen to wash them, while she nestled on the sofa browsing her cell phone for a while and then began to review what she had learned during the day.

Whenever she revised her lesson, Leon had finished cleaning and moved close to hug or kiss her. This bothered her every time.

But now...

Hathaway let out a long sigh.

It was true that people couldn't be spoiled. When she was studying in England, her life was almost the same as now, and she could cook by herself at that time. Now, because of Leon's pampering, she not only didn't want to move but also missed and relied on him so much that she was on the verge of tears.

However, Hathaway suppressed her emotions and didn't want to look like a loser.

When she took a deep breath and got up to cook for herself, Leon's phone call came.

Looking at the familiar name on the phone screen, Hathaway's eyes were red with tears.

Hathaway was surprised by her own sentimentality and spinelessness. In a flurry, she wiped her tears and picked up the phone. Only when the phone was connected did she realize that he shouldn't get off the plane now because it would take more than ten hours to fly back from Milan.

So she hurriedly asked, "Where are you now? How can you call me?"

Leon's low and magnetic voice rang out, "I went straight to the United States for business. Anyway, you aren't around me, so I might as well come out on a business trip."

Hathaway felt warm at his words and couldn't help but whisper, "I miss you..."

She missed him to the point of aching. Since they got back together, they hadn't been separated like this. This taste was too tormented.

Leon's mood wasn't better than hers, otherwise, he wouldn't directly come out on a business trip.

He didn't want to go home. If he went back, he would be the only one in the empty house and felt like he was back to his former lonely life that no one cared and loved him, so he simply went on a business trip and paralyzed himself with work.

Leon heard Hathaway's sobbing and felt surprised and distressed, "Are you crying?"

In Leon's eyes, Hathaway had always been a strong and tough girl who didn't cry much.

But now that Hathaway shed tears because of missing him, he was soft-hearted and wanted to buy a ticket to return to her immediately.

Hearing this question, Hathaway was a little embarrassed but whispered an answer, "Yes.."

Although she cried because of missing him, it wasn't a shame that she shed tears for her beloved man, right?

On the other end of the phone, Leon sighed and said, "I'll buy a plane ticket to see you after I'm done with my work here."

He married her to spoil, love, and care for her wholeheartedly instead of letting her drop tears. Since she wanted to cry because of missing him, he would certainly hurry to coax and satisfy her to see him.

Hathaway was taken back by his words and said with a laugh, "No, you're exaggerating!"

She missed him a lot, but he didn't have to fly back again and should hurry back to China after finishing his work. The company must have a lot to keep him busy, and she wasn't an unreasonable girl.

Leon replied to her warmly, "I did it for my own sake, too. I need to relieve my lovesickness."

He had been suppressing his emotions but instantly ignored everything at the sound of her sobbing.

Hathaway was helpless and had to choose to end the topic, "All right. Get busy with your work, and I'll go make something to eat."

Leon stopped her and asked, "Do you have any physical discomfort today?"

He remembered that she had severe morning sickness at the beginning of her last pregnancy, so Leon was afraid that she would have a hard time this time and tried to ask tentatively in advance.

Hathaway said with confusion, "No, I'm fine."

She ate, drank, and slept normally without suffering from the climate.

At this point, Hathaway complained angrily, "It's all your fault that I was named and criticized by the teacher today."

Then she told him about how she was lectured because she missed him and was distracted, while Leon laughed out loud after hearing it.

Hathaway grunted deliberately, "You have to make it up to me."

"Okay, even if you want the stars in the sky, I will pick them off for you," Leon said in a doting voice.

Hathaway sighed, "Don't put your doting mind on me but your future daughter."

Hathaway's words made Leon's heart jump several times. Once again, an intuition came up in his mind that she might be pregnant.

In reality, Hathaway had no idea about the possibility of pregnancy and suddenly said this just because she felt that Leon's tone was doting as if he treated her as his daughter. Hence, she asked him to put away his thoughts and put them on their future daughter.

Wives were for loving, while daughters were for spoiling.

Hathaway had two loving fathers, so she had a deep understanding of men's minds.

She was sure that if they had a daughter, Leon would be crazier about her daughter than Carl was about her. When the time came, he could find a way to take off the stars if his daughter wanted.

They didn't say anything more. After hanging up the phone, Hathaway went to cook and didn't want to continue talking about it or they would only miss each other more.

At the other end of the phone, Leon held his phone and pondered with a frown. He didn't dare to ask Hathaway to buy pregnancy test strips in order not to expose himself. Hathaway's period had been delayed for several days, but she didn't notice it because she was so focused on her studies, and Leon didn't remind her on purpose.

He wanted to wait a while longer and then reminded her when the matter was certain. At least, he could pretend to be innocent...

For her pregnancy, Leon didn't selfishly leave her to suffer alone in a foreign country. In the decision to get her pregnant, he started to arrange his work plan for this period, otherwise, how could he go directly to Milan to stay with her for a week?

He adjusted his work for these three months and even longer in the future to a leisurely state. He always couldn't finish making money, but companionship was essential.

CHAPTER 502 HATHAWAY IS LAZY AND SLEEPY.

Although it was a bit hard to live without Leon around, Hathaway could only endure it and devoted most of her time to her busy study every day.

There were about fifteen students from different countries all over the world studying together. As time went by and they became familiar with each other, these students often held parties, but Hathaway never attended.

Leon didn't explicitly forbid her to participate in such activities, but she didn't want to participate out of instinct. In the past, she enjoyed crowds. When it came to such occasions, she had always been the most active one and was good at livening up the party atmosphere.

But now she wasn't interested in these because she didn't want to make it difficult for Leon.

She knew he was prone to jealousy, so she simply didn't go to the party to avoid creating conflicts between them.

One week after they separated, the weather in Milan turned cloudy and cold.

As soon as class ended that day, Hathaway wrapped her coat tightly and rushed to her apartment. When she arrived at the apartment building, a taxi stopped there. Hathaway thought it was a passerby and side-stepped the car perfectly.

As a result, she looked up and saw the travel-stained man getting out of the car, with a hint of exhaustion and undisguised longing on his face.

Hathaway stopped in her tracks and gaped at the handsome man walking towards her. Mixed feelings sprang up in her chest so that she didn't know what she to say, "You—"

Last time Leon said he would come back after dealing with his work in the United States, and Hathaway thought that he was just paying lip service, but she didn't expect him to show up here. At this moment, Hathaway was surprised and distressed that he ran back and forth.

Leon came over to take the flabbergasted girl into his arms, reached out to stroke her hair, and then hugged her tighter.

His restlessness and unhappiness over the past few days were all grounded as he took Hathaway steadily into his arms.

Now Leon found that he couldn't live without Hathaway around.

After coming back to her senses, Hathaway wrapped her arms tightly around Leon's waist and felt warm when the familiar smell from him ran into her nose.

The weather was bad, and the cold wind was blowing. Hathaway looked up at Leon in front of her and suggested, "Let's hurry home. It's too cold."

When they returned to the apartment and were in the foyer, they hugged each other again and kissed passionately.

They had never been separated for so long since they were reconciled. It was the first time they tasted the feeling of longing and each secretly vowed that they would never separate again after this.

It wasn't until they were out of breath that they let each other go. Hathaway nestled in Leon's arms with blush and asked, "Will it be okay if you don't go back to China? What about your work?"

"I'll go back after a good look at you." Leon lingeringly stroked the girl's delicate cheeks with his hands and couldn't help but bow to kiss her after saying these words.

What should he do? He always felt that he couldn't kiss her enough and his woman was the most beautiful and lovely in the world.

Finally, Hathaway pushed him away with a blush, "You must be tired after a long flight. You go take a bath, and I'll make some food."

This was husband and wife, right? Hathaway only thought about and felt distressed for Leon's rush and exhaustion.

"Okay," Leon answered and went to the bathroom, while Hathaway hurried to the kitchen to cook.

Because she didn't know that Leon would come, Hathaway didn't have enough ingredients at home. Before this, Hathaway wanted to go to the supermarket several times to buy some ingredients, but she didn't like to move. Besides, she had a poor appetite recently, so she made do with it.

Hathaway made a simple pasta, and they each had one plate. Of course, Leon a large plate of pasta, while she only had a little.

Hathaway had a light appetite lately and didn't want to eat fish, meat, seafood, and so on. Every day she just wanted to eat some vegetables or noodles.

Leon came out of the shower and frowned slightly at the sight of the pasta on the table. Then he walked to the refrigerator on his long legs and was surprised to find that there were hardly any nutritious ingredients in it.

Leon wasn't dissatisfied with the pasta prepared by Hathaway. He could eat anything, but he was worried that Hathaway would have a poor diet.

Even if she wasn't pregnant, he couldn't let her eat non-nutritious food every day, not to mention that she might be pregnant now.

Leon sat down at the table and stared at Hathaway across the table with a serious look, "Do you eat the non-nutritious food every day?"

Because of her poor appetite, Hathaway almost shoved the pasta into her mouth one by one, "I recently lost my appetite and didn't want to go to the supermarket, so that's it."

Before Leon could say anything, she started to say in a coquettish tone, "Hey, can you not lecture me as soon as you arrive here?"

Leon laughed at her words, "All right. I'll stop lecturing you."

Then he continued, "We'll go to the supermarket later to buy more ingredients."

Hathaway replied lazily, "Go there by yourself. I want to stay at home. I'm too lazy to move."

If she wanted to move, she would have gone shopping long ago.

Leon paused with his fork and gave her a deep look for a while. Then he lowered his head to eat while asking her casually, "How did you suddenly become so lazy?"

To be honest, Leon was more sure that Hathaway got pregnant. Wasn't there was a saying that pregnant women were lazy?

Hathaway sucked up her last pasta and sighed helplessly, "I don't know what's wrong with me. Maybe it's getting cold."

It seemed that she had been lazy since Leon left, or perhaps she didn't need to be diligent because Leon did everything for her when he was around her. Anyway, she didn't move as much as she could. Except for studying could barely arouse her interests, she didn't want to do anything else.

Leon glanced at the knife and fork she put down, "Don't you eat anymore?"

Hathaway got up, walked over to wrap her arms around his neck, and said softly with half on top of him, "I'm full..."

"Are you full with only a few spaghetti?" Leon said helplessly and didn't know if her poor appetite was due to pregnancy.

Because Hathaway was half on top of him coquettishly and soft, Leon's heart softened. He let her sit on his lap with his arms around her waist, put his hand on her belly instinctively, but he hurried to move it away quietly and said in a gentle and doting voice, "I'll go out to buy some other ingredients to cook for you?"

Hathaway leaned against Leon's warm and broad bosom and even was coaxed by him in a soft voice. At this point, she only felt warm and drowsy and then rested comfortably in his arms after a yawn, "Good. These days, I have been thinking that I lost my appetite was probably because I can't eat my own cooking. It tastes bad. "

Leon chuckled "Don't belittle your cooking skills. I think this pasta tastes delicious."

Frankly speaking, Hathaway's cooking skill wasn't bad, and at least Leon thought that whatever she cooked was delicious. The reason why she couldn't eat was probably that she had no appetite.

"Take your time to eat first. When you finish it, you can go to the supermarket by yourself. I'll take a rest for a while." Hathaway said this as she got up to get off Leon and went to the bedroom.

Leon had been staring at her back until she entered the bedroom before retracting his profound gaze. Then he ate seriously with his head down, tried to hurry to the supermarket to buy something else to improve her life, and couldn't help but smile.

He would stop by to buy a pregnancy tester later. It was estimated that her pregnancy was about right.

When Leon finished his meal, Hathaway had fallen asleep in the bedroom. Leon pulled the blanket up for her and kissed her tenderly on the cheek. All of a sudden, he never felt so full in his heart as he did at this moment, and it was all she gave him.

Perhaps because Leon gave her a hard kiss, Hathaway woke up to barely open her eyes to look at him and muttered drowsily, "I'm sorry..."

With that, she fell asleep again.

Leon came all the way to see her, and she should take care of him, but she was too sleepy to get up.

Seeing this, Leon chuckled and got out of the bedroom.

He breezed to the nearby supermarket to purchase a bunch of ingredients suitable for pregnant women and finally stopped by a pharmacy.

After buying a pregnancy tester, he walked around and bought a few nutritional supplements that pregnant women must take.

He had consulted with the obstetrician about this when he prepared to get Hathaway pregnant. This time, he must make sure that there was nothing wrong with Hathaway's pregnancy.

He wanted her to get pregnant, so he had to take this responsibility and make sure she was emotionally and physically well, as well as their baby was safe and sound.

On the way back, Leon called Warren and told him to postpone his return trip, while Warren was about to cry on the other end, "Mr. Davis, if you don't come back, the board members will give me a hard time!"

During this time, Warren was very busy because many large projects couldn't be moved forward without Leon's involvement. The board members only cared about money and profit, so they rushed to him and asked when Leon would come back every day. Warren was annoyed to death by them.

The board members didn't dare to call Leon, so Warren became cannon fodder.

Now hearing that Leon postponed his return date, Warren wanted to cry.

Leon knew Warren's plight and instructed him directly, "If they come to you again, you just tell them to call me."

The board members were blinded by money.

He should have created a lot of benefits for them over the years, shouldn't he? Those benefits were enough for them to live a good and prosperous life in the second half of their lives. He just stayed with his wife during this period, but the board members kept pushing. If they pissed him off, he would rest and stay with Hathaway during her entire pregnancy!

Perhaps after his baby was born, he would only focus on his wife and child with less attention to the company. By then, they should cry out loud.

CHAPTER 503 HATHAWAY IS PREGNANT.

When Leon returned to the apartment, Hathaway was still asleep. He gently put away the ingredients he bought and then went into the kitchen.

Leon cooked four dishes and one soup for Hathaway. There were two meat dishes and two vegetarian dishes, including fish, meat, green vegetables, and soybean products. The amount of food wasn't large to avoid waste in case she couldn't eat them all, but the nutrition must be sufficient for her. This nutritional mix was the result of his deliberate consultation with the chef hired at home, and it could be said that he was extremely attentive.

Now Leon only thought about his wife and child without the willingness to care about anything else.

He originally wanted to come to see her and then return to China to deal with his company's accumulated matters during this period, but he changed his schedule and told Warren that he wouldn't go back after seeing that she didn't have a good diet.

Because of the shadow of losing a child and Hathaway's previous rejection of having a child, Leon wouldn't allow Hathaway and their child to have any accidents this time. Therefore, it was understandable that he left the company alone. In reality, he didn't stop managing it but wasn't personally involved in the affairs in South City. Besides, he often hosted daily video or phone meetings and handled company affairs.

When the dinner was ready, he went to wake up Hathaway. The girl was sleeping soundly and deeply, so he leaned over and kissed her awake.

Hathaway awoke from her sleep and smelled the fragrance of food. It aroused her appetite and she suddenly wanted to eat something.

She wrapped her arms around Leon's neck and asked in a husky voice, "What did you cook for me?"

Leon gave her the dish names one by one, and Hathaway opened her eyes wide in surprise without sleepiness, "Is it such a hearty meal?"

Four dishes and one soup?

Was she going to eat it alone?

Even if she ate with Leon, it would be enough.

"The amount of food isn't large." Leon was satisfied to see her joyful eyes and continued, "Do you get up to wash and eat?"

"Yes." Hathaway was touched by his elaborate dinner and felt distressed for him, so she couldn't continue to lie in bed and got up immediately.

However, as soon as she lifted the quilt, Leon hugged her.

Hathaway asked him amusedly, "What are you doing?"

Leon carried her to the bathroom on his long legs, "I'll carry you."

Hathaway felt that he made her look pretentious, "I can walk by myself..."

While speaking, she was carried to the bathroom. Hathaway didn't understand why Leon suddenly treated her in this way and just took it as he wanted to care for her after a week of separation.

Hathaway finished washing and went to the dining room. Looking at the sumptuous food on the table, she had an appetite for the first time in a long time.

She ate a bowl of rice and a lot of vegetables, but she barely picked up any meat dishes and forced herself to take a few bites at Leon's urging.

"No, I can't eat anymore. If I continue, I'll vomit." Hathaway looked at the piece of meat that Leon had put into her bowl with a woebegone expression and waved her hand repeatedly to resist.

Hathaway ate too much tonight and was now feeling sick to her stomach.

Leon saw her resistance and didn't force her anymore.

He got up to clean up the dishes and went to the kitchen. After walking back, Leon went to the sofa with the pregnancy tester he bought, sat in front of Hathaway, and handed the pregnancy tester to Hathaway.

Hathaway was holding the documents she brought back and wanted to study, but she was tired.

When she looked up and saw what Leon handed to her, she froze there with her eyes wide open.

A while later.

"Ah..." Hathaway jumped off the sofa with her hand covering her face and started to scream. Her fierce action startled Leon.

Then he threw the pregnancy tester aside hurriedly and got up to embrace her to prevent her from making big movements.

Hathaway broke down in his arms, "Oh no!"

"I forgot about my period during this time. Now that I think about it, it's been delayed for ten days, I—" Hathaway said in shock.

As soon as she saw the pregnancy tester in Leon's hand, she suddenly realized that her period hadn't come this month. It was clear what this meant.

She was pregnant!

No wonder she had no appetite recently and fell asleep as soon as she lay down on the bed. After all, she had been pregnant once. At this point, all the symptoms matched up with her last pregnancy, so Hathaway broke down.

She was in training, how could she be pregnant?

"Hathaway." Leon was calmer than Hathaway because he was the culprit after all.

While firmly hugging Hathaway who was out of control, he soothed her in a low and nice voice, "I'm here for everything."

Even if he stayed here for three months and left the company alone, he would let her finish her training successfully.

Hathaway calmed down a bit in his arms, but she was still a little frantic, "Don't say that. My training is important, and I'm pregnant, so I can't handle it, okay?"

She couldn't control some irresistible factors from her body, such as vomiting and sleepiness.

Leon lifted her face and said seriously, "I didn't say that casually. I won't return to China and stay here to take care of you. Besides, I will be responsible for your diet and send you to class every day. If you have no spirit and rest at home, I will take notes for you in class and then come back to tell you about it, okay?"

Hathaway opened her mouth but found that she couldn't say a word.

Since Leon had made a commitment to this point, what else could she say? It would be too pretentious if she said anything else.

Hathaway sighed helplessly, "Didn't you buy a pregnancy tester? Let me take a test first."

Even though she could confirm that she was pregnant, she still left it to chance, but the result wasn't what Hathaway expected.

In the bathroom, Hathaway looked at the two bright red bars and didn't know how to react.

Although she had healed herself from the shadow of having a child before this and wanted to give birth to children for Leon, she didn't expect it to be now. At least, it should let her finish her three-month training, but now...

Suddenly, she thought of Leon's lack of restraint in bed some time ago and couldn't help but get angry.

He did it on purpose, right?

Hathaway huffed out of the bathroom and threw the pregnancy test directly onto the culprit, "Leon!"

"What's wrong?" Leon asked innocently as he took the pregnancy tester.

Hathaway snorted, "You did it on purpose, right?"

"What did I do on purpose?" Leon pretended to be innocent, but after seeing the two bright red bars, he couldn't hide his joyful smile.

Hathaway punched him in anger. He gave a bright smile, did he dare to pretend to be innocent?

Leon let her punch himself. And for the first time in his life, President Davis laughed foolishly for the first time in his life.

Hathaway punched him for a while, but she smiled at his expression, pushed him away sullenly, and then stepped aside to ignore him.

Hathaway's pregnancy was certain. Leon carefully put the pregnancy tester away and walked over to coax his wife, "Don't be angry. It's all my fault. Keep punching me or scolding me."

Hathaway felt so tired, beating him and scolding him couldn't solve any problems.

"Take a leave from the teacher tomorrow morning, I'll take you to the hospital for a full examination." This was what Leon wanted to do now to make sure that she and their baby were safe and sound.

Although Hathaway broke down, she was inexplicably happy when the pregnancy was confirmed.

She was in love with Leon, so it was impossible for her not to look forward to their child even if it was hard for her at this time.

At this moment, when she heard Leon say to go for an examination, she nodded, "Okay..."

"Hathaway." Leon saw that she didn't reject the matter and was slightly relieved. Then he picked up her hand to rub it on his lips and said in a loving and affectionate voice, "I'm happy."

After that, he emphasized once more, "I'm happy."

Leon stabbed her hand with his stubble. Hathaway felt that her chest was slightly itchy, so she came over to embrace him and whispered in his ear, "I am also happy..."

Leon let out a low sigh, took her into his arms, and held her tightly.

It wasn't easy for them to get to this point, and they once lost one child. No one knew the importance of this pregnancy to them.

Only they knew the pain and mixed feelings of each other best.

At night when they were going to sleep, Hathaway finally nestled herself in Leon's arms after tossing and turning and asked apprehensively, "Leon, do you think our child...?"

She didn't say the next words, but Leon knew what she was going to say.

In the darkness, his pupils constricted slightly, and he embraced her tightly to soothe, "Don't think too much. I will always be with you."

If someone dared to hurt Hathaway and the baby in her belly, he would send that person to hell with his own hands.

When she was pregnant last time, their relationship was unstable, and he didn't have the chance to take care of her because they didn't live together. This time he believed that she and their child would be fine with him by her side the whole time.

She shouldn't have another accident, should she? They had lost a child, and God wouldn't be so cruel to them.

Finally, Hathaway fell asleep peacefully in his arms under his coaxing, while Leon wasn't sleepy.

Frankly speaking, Leon's psychological pressure was far greater than Hathaway's. He originally thought that he was strong enough to cope with everything, but now he started to feel uneasy in the face of her occasional apprehensions.

He cared too much about Hathaway and her being worried about the baby, so this caused him to have a sleepless night.

Seemingly, it wasn't her but him who should go to see a psychiatrist.

In the early morning, Leon forced himself to sleep for a while. Not long after, he got up quietly to prepare their breakfast.

Hathaway's appetite was poor, so he decided to prepare more kinds of food so that she could choose her favorite.

CHAPTER 504 LEON ACCOMPANIES HATHAWAY WHOLEHEARTEDLY.

After preparing their breakfast, Leon made a cup of strong coffee to refresh himself.

He hadn't slept well last night, but he would have to take Hathaway to the hospital later for her maternity checkup and take care of her all day.

Leon thought it was good for Hathaway to find out she was pregnant abroad. No one knew them here and paid undue attention to them, so Hathaway could nourish the fetus in peace.

In South City, he and Hathaway were now the target of the reporters and media. If they were photographed going to the hospital for a maternity checkup, Hathaway's pregnancy would be exposed and outsiders' gossips would be a disturbance to them. Most importantly, there were so many people with bad intentions in South City that they couldn't guard against them.

This was the best thing that Hathaway quietly got pregnant and nourish the fetus abroad.

Even more, Leon thought that Hathaway simply stayed abroad until the child was born.

On the one hand, no one disturbed her abroad. On the other hand, Milan had a strong fashion atmosphere, so even after the training was over, Hathaway could continue to stay here and learn something else. Anyway, she didn't have much work at the moment. Although she was nominally Ashley's stylist, Ashley wasn't so popular that she had to attend events all day long. Hence, Hathaway wouldn't be too busy.

Besides, her only partner, Jessica, was waiting for the birth of her child just like her. Leon thought it would be better for them to discuss and stop working and wait for their baby to learn more about it to enrich themselves.

After giving birth to a child and getting well, the two of them can go to work with more vigor.

The more Leon thought about it, the more he thought his plan was feasible, and planned to propose it to Hathaway after her maternity checkup.

Hathaway didn't have too many nausea and vomiting symptoms this pregnancy except for her poor appetite and drowsiness, and she didn't know if she hadn't reached the time of vomiting yet. Hathaway prayed that it was better not to vomit, the last few days of vomiting almost killed her.

At breakfast, Hathaway ate well and felt that she was in a much better state after Leon's arrival.

She didn't have the heart to tell Leon that she had no appetite if he didn't come, but she did, which was not forcing people to stay with her.

The test results were normal, Hathaway and the baby in her belly were healthy and safe, both of them were relieved.

As for Hathaway's lack of appetite and drowsiness, they were normal symptoms of pregnancy. The doctor said to try to take in more nutrients, and if you can't eat, there is no need to force yourself to eat, as the mother's body stores enough nutrients for the fetus' growth and development at this stage.

If you have to force a pregnant woman to eat, it is a kind of torture for the pregnant woman, and naturally not good for the child.

After returning home, the two discussed the matter and decided to tell both sides of the family, so that they can also be happy together.

Leon called Merlin first, and Merlin's tone was very excited and joyful, saying over and over, "Good, great!"

Then he instructed Leon, "Take good care of Hathaway. This time ... don't let her get hurt again."

Merlin still remembered that how Hathaway lost her child last time, he was also heartbroken at that time, it was Davis's child after all, but he couldn't express any emotion due to his status.

Leon lightly responded, father and son then ended the call.

When she called Hale, Hathaway also participated, Hathaway felt much more comfortable talking to Hale than to Merlin.

Hale was so happy to hear the news of Hathaway's pregnancy. At his age, he was half-dead in the ground, but to hear the news of his grandson or granddaughter at this time, he felt that he could live for another eight to ten years.

Leon used the speakerphone, Hathaway came over and teased Hale, "Grandpa, I remember that you said that I would not be allowed to enter the Davis if I had a daughter, in case I have a daughter this time, will you let your grandson repudiate me?"

Hale was so angry with her that he had a heart attack, "Stinky girl, you are very vindictive."

Then he grunted, "If I could persuade him to repudiate you, do you think you'd still be Mrs. Davis now?"

If Leon had obediently listened to him, Mrs. Davis would be someone else.

Before Hathaway appeared, Hale had always thought that his grandson was extremely obedient to him and would never go west when he told him to go east.

After Hathaway appeared, Hale deeply knew what it was like to have his face slapped.

His grandson, whom he thought he could manage, screwed with him at every turn.

Thanks to Hathaway's blessing, he got to know his grandson again.

Hathaway was amused by Hale's words, she was not holding a grudge against him for his patriarchal words and knew that Hale was not patriarchal. He deliberately said such words because he was so cunning that she and Adeline did not want to offend him.

Leon took over, "I'll stay with Hathaway to raise her baby in Milan. If there are important matters in the company, I'll ask Warren to go to you."

Hale, "..."

Hale was furious, "I'm an old man, how dare you take me out to deal with the company's affairs? Your wife is pregnant, do you want to leave the company to me?"

Leon replied calmly, "That can not be helped, who let your son can not handle it?"

The company's main business is to provide a wide range of services and services to the public.

Hale was once again speechless and dropped a word angrily, "I don't care! Whoever you like!"

Then he hung up the phone directly.

Leon called Warren and instructed him to go to Hale.

After hanging up the phone, Hathaway asked him with some confusion, "Didn't grandpa get angry and say he didn't care? Do you still let Warren go to him?"

Leon knew his grandfather's nature very well, "Grandpa always says what he wants, so it doesn't matter if he says he doesn't care."

Hathaway spread her hands, what was this?

Hale was a straight man. He wouldn't even compromise and gave in.

After Hathaway told Carl and Cynthia that she was pregnant, Cynthia's first reaction was to say, "I'll go over and take care of you, right? You're alone in a foreign country, and it must be hard for you during your pregnancy."

Hathaway was touched, "No need. Leon is here."

When Hathaway said this, her tone was full of sweetness. Fortunately, Leon was by her side at this critical time. Otherwise, she wouldn't be in a good mood after learning about her pregnancy.

Cynthia was surprised, "Didn't Leon go to the United States? Has he gone back again?"

Carl and Cynthia had traveled around several European countries after they left Milan and just returned to South City.

Cynthia was worried about Hathaway living abroad, so she had frequent contact with Hathaway and naturally knew that Leon went to the United States on a business trip. She thought that Leon would go back to South City directly from the United States, but now she heard that Leon returned to Hathaway's place.

Hathaway responded sweetly, "Well. He originally wanted to come to see me and go back home, but I got pregnant, and then he said he wouldn't go back first."

Cynthia was even more shocked, "Is he not coming back? But is it OK for his company?"

Leon had followed Hathaway to Milan for training, so was it ok for him not to manage his company for half a month?

Cynthia had always been considerate of others and suggested, "Or I will go to take care of you and let Leon go back to his company first. With your father and me by your side, he will be relieved."

Hathaway saw that Cynthia had genuine consideration for them, so she discussed with Leon in a whisper and replied to Cynthia soon, "Mom, Leon said that he would stay with me for a few days. When he has to go back to China, he will ask you to come over."

Cynthia saw that Leon insisted on accompanying her daughter and didn't say anything more.

Leon was a sensible and mature man, so he must know exactly what he was doing and weighed the pros and cons before making such a decision.

After that, Cynthia gave Hathaway some advice on pregnancy and hung up the phone.

Cynthia was in a happy mood and said to Carl beside her, "It's good that Hathaway is pregnant."

But Carl snorted, "What's so good about? She has a child at a young age. Her marriage with Leon has just begun..."

At this point, he stopped speaking and swallowed back the words on his lips under Cynthia's stare at him.

Carl wasn't in favor of his daughter having a child at the age of 24. If she later... couldn't continue to live with Leon and make a divorce, it would be a big damage to the child.

Of course, he didn't dare to say these negative words to Cynthia to hit her happy mood.

So he said, "I am happy that Hathaway is pregnant, but she's pregnant during her training. Isn't that just looking for trouble?"

Without asking, Carl judged by his intuition as a man that Hathaway's pregnancy at this juncture must be because Leon had done something secretly.

He didn't believe that Leon, a mature man in his thirties, would get Hathaway pregnant accidentally. Was Leon so impatient to have a child?

Bad guy!

Leon played tricks on his daughter. It was strange if he was in a good mood.

But Cynthia defended Leon, "What do you mean by saying that? Didn't Leon leave his job to take care of Hathaway? I think Leon is sincere enough. How many young men nowadays can do what he did?"

Carl was speechless.

CHAPTER 505 LEON AND HATHAWAY MISS EACH OTHER.

Carl was profoundly aware of a problem, that was, he seemed to be unable to speak badly of Leon with Cynthia in the future because he was always frustrated in the end.

Every time he complained about Leon, Cynthia would always speak for Leon, which hurt his self-esteem too much. Even if Leon was a junior, he was upset that Cynthia defended Leon. In Carl's opinion, Cynthia should defend him all the time!

Cynthia didn't want to pay attention to his unhappy mood and said joyfully after talking back to him, "I should start designing maternity clothes for Hathaway now and make sure she looks beautiful during pregnancy."

Then she continued, "No, I have to design clothes for my future grandson or granddaughter. At the thought of the newborn cute baby, I can't wait to design the most beautiful clothes in the world for them."

"Do you think Hathaway will have a boy or a girl?" The more Cynthia thought about it, the more excited she got. Even she couldn't wait for Hathaway to give birth to a baby right now.

Carl, "..."

He was in favor of her designing maternity clothes for their daughter and could understand her feelings, but what was it if she designed clothes for their grandson or granddaughter who would be born after ten months? The two sets of casual wears that she promised to compensate him some time ago hadn't been made!

After the two sets of casual wears were given to Leon and Albert, he accompanied her back to Hong Kong to deal with her work. Later on, she had a bunch of chores so that she hadn't done it for him until now.

Carl gave a light cough and protested in a discontented tone, "Hey, the two sets of casual wears you promised me..."

Before he finished his protest, Cynthia suddenly got up and said with a cheerful expression, "I just had a good inspiration for Hathaway's maternity clothes. I have to go and draw it."

After saying that, she went straight to the drawing-room that Carl designed for her at home.

Carl was ignored by her to the point of leaving home. What was the situation? How did he become the least important one in her heart?

If Hathaway's child was born later, would he have a place in this family?

His life was simply...

The love of middle-aged people was so hard.

Cynthia was full of inspiration to design maternity clothes for Hathaway. On the other side, Hathaway spoke to Leon after hanging up the phone, "You can stay here for one more week at most and then go back. If you feel uneasy about me being here alone, you can ask my parents to come over, and they are willing to do so. However, you should go back to China to have a look."

Hathaway truly didn't want to be judged by the board of directors of the Davis Group as a dangerous beauty, nor did she feel that Leon had to be by her side 24 hours a day during her pregnancy.

But Leon didn't agree with her. After embracing her with a sigh, he looked at her solemnly and seriously and said, "Hathaway, you are the most important in my heart. The company doesn't matter."

Money could be earned later, but he would never forgive himself if anything happened to her.

Hathaway didn't expect him to tell her so frankly and directly that the company wasn't as important as her. Nowadays, many people valued money and power more than their own lives, but he said she was the most important.

In an instant, her eyes reddened with emotion, and she teased him in tears and laughter, "Leon, I don't know what to say to you. You are shrewd yet sometimes stupid..."

After saying that, Hathaway buried herself into his arms.

She was so lucky to meet such a man who was wholeheartedly devoted to her.

Leon chuckled with his arms around her and was clear that she was moved.

Leon stayed in Milan for one more week and finally went back to China.

Carl and Cynthia came to pick up his shift to take care of Hathaway. Leon met with them at the airport and expressed his gratitude to them.

After Leon boarded the plane and left, Carl said to his wife and daughter, "It's the first time I've seen him being so sincere in front of me."

Cynthia gave him a discontented look, "When did Leon not treat you with respect? He's almost looking up to you."

Leon defended himself, "I don't feel his sincerity, okay? I always feel that he is pretending to be respectful to me, but in reality, he despises me severely in his heart. His subtext must be that if it weren't for your daughter, could I put up with your difficulties?"

Cynthia laughed, "I think that is nothing even if he thinks this way. After all, he did it all for your daughter. What's wrong with him respecting you only for your daughter's sake? Do you want him to respect and worship you because of your ability and talent?"

Carl grunted, "I am at least an influential man in South City, so what's wrong with him worshipping me for my sake?"

Hearing Carl's words, Cynthia, who was always elegant, almost rolled her eyes at him, while Hathaway snickered and deliberately stimulated Carl, "Dad and mom, why do I feel like you are starting to quarrel?"

Speaking of this, Carl said angrily, "If it weren't for Leon, could we have quarreled?"

It could be said that his every quarrel with Cynthia was because of Leon.

In front of Hathaway, Cynthia didn't want to argue with Carl anymore and took the initiative to change the topic, "Hathaway, I brought maternity clothes specially made for you. See if you like it when you get home later."

Hathaway was surprised, "Did you make the maternity clothes specifically for me?"

Immediately, she took Cynthia's arm happily and said sweetly, "I know it must be perfect without looking."

The light pink dress that Cynthia designed for her last time made her steal the show.

After she wore it, the light pink dresses were now popular among the celebrities and rich girls in South City.

However, no matter how those followed the trend, their dresses weren't able to surpass hers, and no one could surpass the elegance of her in a light pink dress that night.

Cynthia's design was uneasy to be surpassed. Moreover, she was surrounded by the joy and happiness of Leon's proposal that night, so she couldn't be imitated by outsiders.

Therefore, Hathaway knew that the maternity clothes Cynthia designed for her must be perfect without looking. Although it was called maternity clothes, they wouldn't look like maternity clothes according to Cynthia's aesthetics. After wearing those clothes, she would probably make others feel that she was less like a pregnant woman but more fashionable.

Once again, Carl was ignored and could only resign himself to pushing his and Cynthia's luggage behind to keep up with the two women.

After the three of them went back to the apartment, Cynthia and Hathaway were busy trying on clothes, while Carl did the housework without complaints. However, it was the ultimate happiness to him. In the future, he would live with Cynthia all the time but not with Cynthia and Hathaway as a family of three to live.

After all, Hathaway was married to Leon, and they would spend their days with their children later.

The next time was a stolen one for him and Cynthia, so they cherished it and would give their all to treat Hathaway during this rare time to make up for their missing years of fatherly love and maternal love for Hathaway.

When Hathaway was pregnant last time, the Taylor Group was in trouble, and she was calculated by Andrew and hurt by Abby, as well as had a difficult relationship with Leon. In comparison, Hathaway became a winner in life this time.

She became a couple with Leon and was pampered by him. Even her biological parents were here to take care of her and doted her as a princess. Besides, there weren't so many people with bad intentions to calculate and hurt her because she was abroad. How peaceful and quiet she was!

Hathaway even thought that she should have done good deeds in her past life to get such treatment now.

When Hathaway talked to Cynthia about this before, Cynthia replied to her softly, "Don't say that you should have done good deeds in your past life. It's because you are too wonderful that you've cultivated your current blessings."

Most of the time, the more Cynthia looked at her daughter, the more she felt she was wonderful.

Ten days later, Leon returned to Milan. Originally, he said he would go back after half a month, but he returned here once he finished his work in advance. On the day he arrived here, Leon slept for a whole day. Hathaway felt distressed for him and could see how busy and tired he was in China during this time. He didn't spare a minute of rest and could rest at ease when he came to her.

"He is so pretentious." Carl popped his head into their bedroom with a snicker and turned to the kitchen to prepare food for Leon.

Hathaway originally guarded in the front of the bedroom bed and was on the verge of tears because she was distressed for Leon. When she heard her father's words, she couldn't help but laugh.

No one knew a daughter better than her father. Hathaway also thought that Leon was too pretentious.

Couldn't he rest at home and then come back? He had to make himself look like this to get her distressed, right?

As soon as Leon woke up, he gave Hathaway a lingering and dense kiss. Hathaway also missed him, so they were soaked in deep kisses in the bedroom.

However, they just kissed and couldn't do anything else.

Leon, who was burning with desire, got up and went to the bathroom to take a shower. When his desire dissipated, he came out with a clear mind.

After lying down beside Hathaway, he reached out to gently cover Hathaway's belly and asked, "Did you have a hard time during this time?"

In reality, they had video calls every day during their separation. Except for the morning when she just got up, Hathaway didn't have the feeling of nausea and vomiting but just was lazy and sleepy.

But Leon was still worried and asked her again after they met.

Hathaway chuckled and replied to him, "I feel like I'm having a good girl. She doesn't torment me at all."

She vomited a lot during her last pregnancy, but she didn't feel much this time even after so long.

Leon said happily, "Well, it doesn't matter if it's a boy or a girl. As long as the baby doesn't torment you."

Whether it was a boy or a girl, he loved it because it was the child she gave birth to for him.

Now he had no extravagance but to hope that Hathaway could suffer less during her pregnancy. After the child was born, he could handle it and didn't need Hathaway to worry a little, whether it was easy or difficult to discipline.

CHAPTER 506 GIVING YOU A CHANCE TO EXPLAIN

Leon and Hathaway made out for a while in the bedroom. Carl prepared the meal when they came out.

Leon took one look at the food on the table and knew that Hathaway must have been well taken care of during this time. Carl was such a good cook. After sitting down at the table, Leon thanked Carl, "Thank you for what you did these days."

Leon really thanked Carl and Cynthia for doing so much for Hathaway. After all, Adeline passed away. Even if Adeline was alive and got along well with Hathaway, she would not take as much care of Hathaway.

Carl grudgingly grunted. He wouldn't be so nice to Leon if Hathaway didn't have to work hard to get here.

Carl returned to the kitchen and took out two bowls of soup for Hathaway and Cynthia, which he made for building up their health. Carl thought that Hathaway and Cynthia were both thin, so he tried to build up Hathaway's health while also replenish Cynthia's energy.

While Cynthia immediately finished a bowl of soup, Hathaway held her face in her hands and pulled a long face, "Daddy, I'll get fat if I drink any more!"

Hathaway noticed her cheeks began to fill out. Carl and Cynthia cooked so much for her.

Cynthia was in charge of making the menu while Carl cooked. Hathaway felt like she had been fattened up.

Carl urged Hathaway to drink the soup, "Why are you a pregnant woman so fussy about your weight? Is it possible that Leon will hate you when you're heavier?"

Leon, who just enjoyed a bite of delicious food, was suddenly called out and immediately said, "Of course I won't."

Leon said, "Besides, with a fitness expert like father-in-law, even if you gain weight, he will guide you to slim down soon. So you can eat if you want."

These were fine words. Leon indirectly complimented Carl on how well he kept himself in shape, so he couldn't find fault with him anymore.

Besides, Hathaway also suddenly realized that her father was the best fitness trainer. After gulping a few mouthfuls of soup, Hathaway hurriedly asked Carl, "Dad, will you coach me in fitness after I give birth?"

"I'm not just coaching you to get fit, but also to get in shape." Although Hathaway was slim and slender, she didn't have an athletic figure. She was very thin, looking fragile. But the healthiest body shape was the one that comes out of exercise.

Carl was certainly willing to coach Hathaway, "Of course not."

Carl was an avid sportsman and believed that sports could change a person's temperament and posture. He welcomed Hathaway's willingness to join him.

Carl came up with an idea and said to Cynthia, "While you're renovating your studio, make sure you have a special area for your workout, with some basic equipment. I'll train you."

Carl talked about Hathaway, Jasmine, and Ashley. Anyway, they were on the same floor. If Cynthia moved her studio there, Carl would be with Cynthia all day. Carl could teach them how to get fit and also teach them some simple self-defense techniques. After all, they were girls, and learning some self-defense was beneficial.

Cynthia thought this was a good idea, and agreed, "Good, I'll include the small gym when I draw the decoration drawings."

"Great!" Hathaway also agreed.

Except for Hathaway and Jasmine's small studio, the rests were Cynthia's studio. So Cynthia could separate a room for a gym. They could drink coffee together, exercise and talk. It was exciting just to think about it.

The atmosphere was so perfect that Leon yearned for it, "I'd love to work there too."

Leon was most envious of Carl, who could spend time with Cynthia.

Hathaway teased Leon with a smile, "No, no. Don't go. You're worthy of a better office than our old office building."

The Davis Group was located in one of the most expensive and prime locations in South City.

Hathaway looked at Leon with one hand on her cheek and a smile, tilting her head. She looked calm, due to her instinct as a mother, with delicate eyebrows.

Leon couldn't help leaning over to give Hathaway a kiss on her rosy lips.

Hathaway blinked, "..."

Carl, "..."

Leon was so bold in front of Carl.

But Carl couldn't say anything to protest. Leon and Hathaway were married and now had a baby. Leon doted on Hathaway was the way he loved her. What was the point of Carl's protest?

No one knew the heartbreak of an old father, especially when Carl saw his precious daughter being kissed by Leon.

Cynthia raises her hand and helps Carl to his feet, "Take your time. I'll go down for a walk with your dad."

They left Hathaway and Leon alone, who were understandably close to each other after a little separation.

Carl and Cynthia were still cuddling up to each other all day even in their old age, let alone Leon.

After Carl and Leon left, Leon continued to eat, while Hathaway looked down at her phone. Leon was about to say something to Hathaway who suddenly looked aloof.

He asked in confusion, "What's wrong?"

Hathaway gritted her teeth and huffed as she handed her phone to him to show him a photo she just received, "I'll give you a chance to explain."

Leon looked carefully at that photo and his face darkened.

But the next second Leon smiled because of Hathaway's words. She said she would give him a chance to explain, indicating that she believed him. Now that she knew it, she still wanted an explanation.

The photo showed Leon and Aggie sitting across from each other having a coffee at the airport, with the caption: "Hathaway was studying abroad while President Davis was meeting with a cool female doctor."

Leon squinted at the words. It was time for the media agency and the journalist who made them up to end their careers.

Leon looked at Hathaway and found that she was not angry about the photo. He put down the dishes in his hands and said seriously, "I'll explain."

Hathaway was pregnant. If her emotions were to be affected and it would affect the baby in her belly, Leon vowed to destroy the malicious rumor mongers.

"I'm stressed because you're pregnant. I have been unable to sleep almost every night since I returned home." When Leon told Hathaway how he truly felt, Hathaway's eyes widened.

Hathaway didn't know this at all. They would make a video call almost every day She only knew that he was busy dealing with the business, but she didn't know that he couldn't sleep at night, not to mention that he was under great mental stress because of her pregnancy.

"Hathaway, I was also freaked out when you lost the baby. After you got pregnant again, I thought I'd get over it. It turns out that I really overrate myself. I get into all sorts of panics when I settle down..."

Leon didn't expect that he would be so useless. He tried to get Hathaway pregnant, but now he was the first person to have a breakdown.

Fortunately, he returned home, otherwise, he would make Hathaway anxious with him.

Leon continued to explain, "So I wanted to see a psychiatrist to deal with my stress, but I was too busy. I left for Milan on the day Aggie also went out of town on business. We just happened to meet at the airport cafe. So there's this picture you see."

After Leon finished explaining, Hathaway didn't still bother to get to the bottom of it, only to take pity on him.

In fact, she believed him from the beginning, otherwise, she would not calmly give him the opportunity to explain.

"How can you be so silly? There's nothing to be upset about. I'm not that anxious." Hathaway didn't know why she was as agitated as Leon before she got pregnant, but she calmed down after her pregnancy. Although Hathaway sometimes came up with some negative thoughts, she was quickly adjusted by herself.

As a result, Leon couldn't bear it anymore.

Leon reached over from the table and took her hand, "I'm fine. I'm fine after seeing you."

Then Leon pressed her hand to his handsome face and sighed, "So don't kick me out again. I can't sleep at all without you around."

After coming to Milan, he slept in Hathaway's bed and slept through the day smelling her scent on the covers.

Without her, he really did lose sleep.

Hathaway pulled back her hand, "I'm doing this for your own good. You can't just leave the company for me. I don't want to be accused of that."

Leon smiled, "I asked my grandfather to run the company temporarily last time. Don't worry. Grandfather is very capable. He grooms me to take over."

Just before Leon returned home last time, Old Mr. Davis personally landed a project for the Davis Group.

The person in charge of the project had been instructed by Jason to withhold approval to spite Davis Group, but Old Mr. Davis walked straight to their office on crutches.

The man did not expect Old Mr. Davis to deal with it personally and was shocked.

Old Mr. Davis slammed his walking stick on the floor and asked seriously, "Why didn't this project go to Davis group? What's wrong with Davis group?"

"If you can't explain, I have a reason to suspect that it's rigged and you are deliberately making things difficult. I will visit your superior to ask for an explanation."

Old Mr. Davis said and turned to leave. The man in charge was scared, hastily pulled Old Mr. Davis back and approved the project.

CHAPTER 507 I BELIEVE YOU

Leon heard about it from Warren. Warren couldn't help laughing as he reported to Leon.

Jason didn't expect Old Mr. Davis to deal with it easily and directly. Jason probably didn't expect that Leon asked Old Mr. Davis to take charge of Davis group in order to spend time with Hathaway during her pregnancy.

If Leon were in charge of this, he would be trying to bribe someone to get it solved under the table. But Old Mr. Davis was too Old to bother to beat around the bush, so Old Mr. Davis got his way.

Warren went there with Old Mr. Davis. The director was so shocked and embarrassed by Old Mr. Davis that Warren wanted to laugh every time he thought about it.

Old Mr. Davis took advantage of their seniority, which was a shameless thing that most Old men couldn't do.

Leon laughed. He could imagine the scene perfectly.

Leon then told Hathaway about what Old Mr. Davis did. Hathaway laughed until tears came to her eyes.

"Jason didn't think Old Mr. Davis and you didn't play the rules," Hathaway said, smiling as she leaned over the table.

The person in charge apparently did not dare to offend Jason for fear that Jason would make things hard for him, so he had to take Jason's instruction. However, the person in charge was more afraid that Old Mr. Davis would come directly to his boss, so he had to make a compromise with Old Mr. Davis.

First of all, Jason didn't expect Leon to ignore the company's affairs. Just because he didn't expect Leon to indulge like this, he was so surprised by Old Mr. Davis's trick.

Leon glanced at Hathaway's smiling face and picked up his chopsticks to eat again.

"Bella is pregnant, and she's really upset with the Robinsons about it." Leon talked to Hathaway over dinner about the Wilsons and the Robinsons.

Hathaway wondered, "Why does Bella fall out with the Robinsons when she is pregnant? Shouldn't they be joyfully organizing the wedding?"

Hathaway had been in Milan all this time and studying hard every day. She didn't know about the gossip in South City. She didn't bother to know about that, so she was unaware of Bella's pregnancy.

Leon sneered, "Bella didn't want the baby, but the Robinsons wanted her to keep the baby. So there was a fight."

Leon heard about this from Nick. Bella didn't want the baby and went to the hospital to have an abortion. Of course, she didn't go to Nick's hospital, those famous third-class hospitals or major hospitals, but Nick was a doctor. He accidentally knew that Bella made an appointment for the abortion.

Nick looked suave, but only Leon knew how evil Nick could be.

Nick purposely got Mrs. Robinson to know that Bella was pregnant and about to have an abortion. Charles was over 30 years old and Mrs. Robinson longed for grandchildren. Charles's woman got pregnant last time and was about to give birth, but she miscarried. Mrs. Robinson was heartbroken. Now she knew that Bella was pregnant, she wouldn't allow Bella to abort the baby.

So Mrs. Robinson went to the Wilsons and made a terrible scene. So Bella couldn't keep her pregnancy a secret.

Bella and Charles were about to get married. Mr. And Mrs. Wilson couldn't understand why she didn't want the baby. Bella kicked up a fuss in front of her parents and Mrs. Robinson that she just didn't want the baby. Mrs. Robinson was so angry that she had someone put Bella under surveillance. In other words, she had people stationed outside the Wilson's all day, and they kept up with her whenever she went out, preventing Bella from making any attempt to abort the child.

That was what Leon called a big fight.

Nick intentionally told Mrs. Robinson that Bella was pregnant in order to bond Bella and Charles together. If Mrs. Robinson saved the baby, Bella would be tied to Charles for the rest of her life. So Bella wouldn't be able to pester Leon, and Charles couldn't hound Ashley anymore.

Why not kill two birds with one stone?

Hathaway didn't know what to say after listening to Leon. Bella was such a drama queen. Bella was pregnant, and the news about her marriage to Charles was released. What else did she ask for?

The next second Hathaway thought of something and looked at Leon in anger.

Bella did this because she still missed Leon.

That was why Bella didn't want to have Charles's child. If they didn't have children, they could divorce at any time. But once they had children, it would be not so easy to make a clean break with each other.

It was clear that Bella didn't want to be with Charles forever.

Hathaway was pregnant and knew clearly what women thought. If a woman didn't want to be with that man forever, she really wouldn't be willing to give birth to his children.

Leon felt Hathaway's eyes and knew what Hathaway was thinking.

Bella still missed Leon, which made him feel disgusted and angry. Someone even intentionally spread rumors about him and Aggie, and Jason must be behind it. Leon felt that he could not sit by and watch anymore. Since Jason openly provoked Leon, he should stop giving Jason breaks. He thought he had to call Josie later.

Seeing Hathaway's threatening look, Leon declared his love for her calmly, "Well, I can't stop others from having a feeling for me, but I can guarantee that you are the only one in my heart."

Bella still had a crush on Leon. What could he do?

Leon and Hathaway were married and going to have a baby, and Bella married Charles. But Bella was so bitchy. Leon couldn't do anything to her.

Hathaway smiled, "Well, well, I believe you."

Hathaway trusted him from the very beginning, and her trust made Leon feel that he must be more cautious in dealing with relations between the two sexes. He would try his best to reduce the contact with women, even keep his clients at a distance, and should not betray her trust in him.

Leon sometimes thought he was the luckiest man to have married such a sensible girl.

Hathaway added, "Now is the time for you to figure out how to deal with this. After all, Dr. Winn has been involved in such a scandal for no reason."

Hathaway said that she was a little envious. "After all, Dr. Winn is also a young, single, and beautiful girl. We can't discredit her."

Hathaway took another look at Aggie who was dressed in a black suit, cool and slim and had the charming aura of the doctor all over, even if she was a psychiatrist.

Leon said, "I'll call Aggie later and ask her what she wants to do."

Then he looked at Hathaway awkwardly, "You call her, and when you're done, I'll delete her number."

Leon was so sincere but Hathaway was laughing at Leon's attitude, "You don't have to be so scared. I'm not the kind of person who doesn't know right from wrong."

Hathaway thought it was impolite to delete Aggie's phone number. Besides, Hathaway also knew about this Aggie before, the beautiful female doctor who loved Nick and worked in Nick's Hospital. Hathaway also checked out Aggie on HD Hospital's website and told Ashley she had such a strong rival.

However, a word never got out that Aggie had a crush on Nick. Hathaway asked Leon curiously but Leon only says Aggie gave up on Nick when she heard he had a fiancée. Aggie regarded Nick as an ordinary colleague and the boss of the hospital and started to keep a distance from Nick on various occasions.

Hathaway heard that and felt that Aggie was big-hearted since she put it down and move on.

When Aggie knew that Nick had a crush on someone, she kept a distance from him instead of persistently pestering him, which was not only a respect for Nick but also for herself.

Therefore, when Hathaway saw that Aggie drank coffee with Leon, she instinctively thought that Aggie was not an immoral woman. Aggie even kept Nick at a distance. So how could she possibly hit on Leon who was married? Hathaway trusted Leon as well as Aggie's character.

So Hathaway didn't mind if Leon kept Aggie's phone number. Even if Leon had evil thoughts about her, Aggie would have stayed away from him.

Thinking about it, Hathaway suddenly wanted to call Aggie who was so magnanimous and bright. Hathaway wanted to get acquainted with her.

She held out his hand to Leon, smiled, and said, "Give me your phone. I'll call Dr. Winn."

Leon glanced at her, "I thought you're not going to call her."

Leon said as he handed Hathaway his phone.

Hathaway smiled at him, "I want to call her now."

Hathaway was going to make friends with Aggie, so naturally, she would make a call personally.

To be honest, there were very few ladies in South City that Hathaway liked. Now there was Aggie, Hathaway naturally wanted to make contact with her.

Hathaway did not have many female friends in South City. On the one hand, she had been studying in the UK and did not hang out with the gentlewomen in South City. On the other hand, she thought that she had nothing in common with them. Even if she did, she disdained to make friends with them.

Leon didn't say anything more but resumed eating.

Next to him, Hathaway called Aggie, whose voice, like her last name, was cold and distant. "Hello, President Davis," Aggie said.

As soon as Hathaway heard Aggie's voice, she smiled. Aggie's tone was cold, showing that Aggie had no affection for Leon.

"Mrs. Davis? "Aggie asked as soon as she heard Hathaway's laugh.

Hathaway replied, "It's me."

Aggie's tone was self-deprecating, "Are you calling to make a punitive expedition against me?"

To be continued

CHAPTER 508 NAMING HER CHILD

Hathaway laughed more sweetly, "Dr. Winn, you don't seem to be afraid of me blaming you."

Aggie said calmly, "Although I only had a brief conversation with President Davis, I could see how much President Davis loves you. I also believe that the woman who is loved by President Davis will not fail to make a distinction between right and wrong. So I have something to be afraid of."

Hathaway laughed again, "You're such a great psychiatrist and see through us."

Aggie had a logical mind and she also praised Hathaway and Leon for how much they loved each other. Dr. Winn was so sensible.

Hathaway then added, "Dr. Winn, this incident has affected your reputation, so we want to ask how you want to respond."

Aggie's attitude was simple, "It's okay if you don't mind. I have nothing to deal with. My reputation doesn't matter."

Hathaway was surprised. "But it's about your future marriage. This kind of scandal will have a bad effect. If...."

Hathaway was too embarrassed to continue. Even if those insiders knew that Aggie and Leon were framed. But outsiders might not think so. It had no impact on Leon. But after all, Aggie was unmarried. What if someone refused to marry her because of this?

Aggie understood what Hathaway was trying to say and immediately said, "I'm not afraid no one will marry me. It's not like I need a man to live."

Hathaway, "..."

She admired and appreciated Aggie's spontaneity. Women did not have to rely on men to live, especially women like Aggie who were highly educated, highly intelligent, and emotionally intelligent.

Aggie didn't mind. But Hathaway and Leon couldn't ruin her reputation. They still have to find a way to redeem Aggie's and Leon's honor.

But before Hathaway could say anything else, Aggie said, "Mrs. Davis, I know you guys mean well. If you really want to make a statement, I have a suggestion."

Hathaway wondered, "What suggestion?"

Aggie said calmly, "Just tell the truth about what happened. You're pregnant, and President Davis is anxious and has insomnia, so he turns to me who is a psychiatrist. But I don't know if you'd like to disclose your pregnancy right now."

Aggie knew she was reported to have an affair with Leon when she got off the plane on a business trip. She might have wanted to tell the truth in the first place, but considering Hathaway and Leon might not want to tell anyone about the pregnancy at this point. After all, some people considered it bad luck for pregnancy to become public before the third month.

Hathaway held her phone and thought about it, and quickly replied to Aggie, "I think that's a good suggestion. My pregnancy can be made public. We focus on the big picture."

Now Leon and Aggie's reputations were in tatters. Hathaway would have to make her pregnancy public. Hathaway and Leon wanted to keep it a secret because she wanted to spend time with her baby quietly.

Hearing her words, Aggie thought Hathaway was cheerful and said immediately, "In that case, I'll make a statement and send it to you later. I think it will be better if I send it as a psychiatrist."

Hathaway agreed, ended the call with Aggie, and then told Leon what she and Aggie agreed to do.

Leon laughed, "You guys are so good. I think PR consultant in Davis Group could lose their jobs."

Leon thought that the plan they discussed would work.

Hathaway chuckled softly, "It was Dr. Winn's idea."

Hathaway finished and then praised Aggie, "I think Dr. Winn's personality really matches her surname, cold and calm."

"So cool..." Hathaway quipped again.

Leon looked at that expression on her face and frowned.

Kindly reminded her, "Aggie is a woman!"

Leon could also understand that women appreciated good men. But Aggie was a woman. Why did Hathaway admire her?

Hathaway asked him in confusion, "What's wrong?"

Leon was furious. He had enough male rivals, but now there was a female rival.

Hathaway didn't care. She could appreciate all the good people regardless of gender.

She was completely unaware that Leon was jealous. Hathaway couldn't pay more attention to other people, whether they were male or female. Leon thought in Hathaway's eyes he should be the best.

It didn't take long for Aggie to friend Hathaway on WeChat and then send over the statement. Hathaway read it and felt there was no problem and handed the phone to Leon, who held back his rejection of Aggie and took a look at it, then said, "It's not bad. "

Hathaway grunted, "What? I think it is perfect."

Leon gave her another scowling look, which Hathaway didn't notice. She sent Aggie a reply asking her to release it.

Then Hathaway said, "Dr. Winn, I'll take you to dinner when I'm back in South City. I'd love to have you as a friend."

Aggie replied, "It's my pleasure to be your friend."

Aggie acquiesced to accept Hathaway's invitation, and Hathaway laughed happily.

Leon glanced at her, "What are you happy about?"

Hathaway told the truth, "I'm happy that I managed to get a date with Dr. Winn."

Leon, "..."

Leon couldn't stand it.

Hathaway saw his face darkened, puzzled, and asked, "What's wrong?"

Leon did not say anything. Hathaway came closer to see that he was upset, and suddenly covered her mouth and laughed, "Leon, you're not even jealous of women, are you?"

Leon grunted and looked sideways. Hathaway didn't know what to say.

Hathaway took a look at Leon, thinking of all the hard work he did to get to see her from afar. She was softhearted and pulled Leon's arm, "It's all my fault. It's all my fault. I will not be like that from now on, okay?"

Hathaway was now very good at coaxing Leon who was such a jealous and angry man.

Leon stared back at her and said through clenched teeth, "It is the last time!"

Hathaway hurriedly nodded, "Okay, okay, it's the last time."

Hathaway took Leon's hand and gently placed it on her abdomen, smiling and teasing him, "I suggest that you should smile more and stop pulling a long face. Otherwise, the baby will be afraid of you after birth because she feels in my belly that you're such a fierce father."

Leon laughed at her, "That's irrational."

But Leon still put his hand on her belly. Hathaway nestled in his arms and Leon was no longer angry.

Hathaway always tricked him who could only yield himself to her.

Leon looked gentle and softly asked her, "Have you thought of the name of our child?"

Hathaway shook her head. "We don't even know if it's a boy or a girl. It's still early to give the baby a name."

Hathaway remembered when Paul asked her to change her last name, Carl told her that she didn't need to change back to Feyrer and that she could add Feyrer to the names of her children when she got married. So she told Leon about that.

After hearing this, Leon appreciated Carl's generosity, "So there's only one word in our baby's name that we can decide, right?"

The baby's last name was Davis, and they had to put the Feyrer in the middle, otherwise, it will be a horrible name, especially for a girl.

It sounded great to name the baby like that, so Hathaway agreed and nodded, "Since there's only one word we can pick for the baby, we should both be more serious."

Leon also nodded, "Yeah."

With that, he came out with a word suddenly and read it silently before telling Hathaway, "What do you think of Gina?"

"Gina?" Hathaway pronounced this name and thought it sounded good.

"Hmm." Leon explained in a low voice, "Gina means beautiful jade, and our child is a priceless treasure."

Hathaway liked this name and her heart melted after she heard Leon's explanation, "Then let's call her Gina. I like this name too."

She also liked the meaning of the name.

Leon smiled, "Alright, then it's settled."

Hathaway then added, "But it is for a girl, not for a boy. What if we have a boy?"

Leon then said, "I'll choose a word more suitable for boys with the symbolism of fine jade."

Hathaway was discontented, "Why did you think of a daughter's name all of a sudden and now you can't think of a boy's name either?"

Leon, "..."

Leon wondered why the name Gina just popped into his head. It was only for girls. But now when Hathaway asked him to think of the boy's name, and his mind went blank.

Hathaway continued to snort, "I can see you're starting to favor girls over boys!"

Leon was so depressed that he hurriedly comforted Hathaway in his arms, "Whether it's a boy or a girl, I will still love our child and treat them equally."

Although Leon said so, he still felt he would love his daughter a bit more.

His heart melted at the thought of having a daughter who would be as lovely as Hathaway was when she was young.

CHAPTER 509 THORNY ROSE

In order to show that he really had no preference for girls, Leon then took out his phone to look it up, and then eagerly said to Hathaway, "Let's call the son with 'Elmer', which means treasure."

Hathaway came over and took a look at the explanation in his phone, smiling "It sounds nice."

Gina and Elmer.

Both names were nice and graceful with good meanings. Hathaway loved them.

Seeing that she finally smiled, Leon ate at ease again.

About ten minutes later, Aggie released a statement on her personal Weibo account.

I'm Aggie, a psychiatrist at HD Hospital. I would like to clarify the fact regarding the recent Internet rumors about my relationship with President Davis.

Mrs. Davis just got pregnant some time ago, and President Davis was overly worried about her and their baby, which led to insomnia, so Director Jackson referred me to do psychological counseling for President Davis.

Because President Davis was busy with his company's business and trying to be with Mrs. Davis sooner, we had to meet at the airport café.

That's all I have to say. Finally, I'd like to introduce myself: I graduated from Stanford University with a degree in psychology and was a disciple of Professor Nguyen, the most famous psychology professor at HD Hospital, specializing in emotional guidance and communication. Those who are troubled by such problems can come to me.

More interestingly, a schedule of her visits to HD Hospital was attached below.

After this statement was released, it instantly became viral on the internet.

First of all, Aggie's cold tone instantly won the hearts of some netizens.

She was not angry, nor nervous, nor aggrieved without complaining, but simply and calmly recount the whole thing clearly and logically. Outsiders could understand what happened at a glance.

Secondly, people had an extremely good opinion of Aggie's intelligence and high EQ shown in this statement.

She said it was Professor Macadam who introduced her to Leon, which disassociated her from Leon. People in South City knew that Nick and Leon were buddies and that Nick's wife Ashley and Leon's wife Hathaway were sisters. How could Nick introduce a woman to hit on Leon?

This did not make sense, so it was natural to conclude that Aggie really did psychological counseling for Leon.

That was where Aggie was smart. She also had high emotional intelligence because she revealed Leon's affection for Hathaway in the statement. Leon was so worried about Hathaway who was pregnant that he had to see a therapist because of insomnia at the airport, in order to meet with Hathaway sooner. It severely satirized people who rumored that Leon divorced Hathaway.

They didn't divorce or cheat. On the contrary, Hathaway was pregnant and they were closer to each other.

In the first half of this statement, the facts were explained indifferently. At last, Aggie's introduction of herself and her schedule made people laugh. The cool psychologist was also very cute. Dr. Winn made a better impression because of her resume.

The number of Aggie's followers increased rapidly, and fans flocked to read Aggie's previous posts to know more about her daily life. But many of them were disappointed. Aggie seldom logged in to this account and post anything. It had been more than a year since her last post, which was about a public benefit activity held by HD Hospital, and she dutifully helped promote it as a doctor.

There were few other posts, all about psychology.

Fans who couldn't find anything funny on her account could comment below the post that Aggie just sent to praise Aggie:

You're so cool.

You're such a cool and cute psychiatrist.

Dr. Winn, I'm disappointed in love and in desperate need of counseling.

Do you have a boyfriend?

In short, Aggie, with her unique personal charm, made the statement totally credible.

Aggie's popularity as a psychiatrist even overshadowed Hathaway's pregnancy.

Hathaway, in Milan, was reading the comments on her phone happily while eating fruit. Hathaway couldn't have been happier to be overshadowed by Aggie because it would have made her pregnancy less known.

Jason might have miscalculated again. Last time Jason didn't expect that Old Mr. Davis solved the project of Davis Group by taking advantage of his seniority. This time, Jason didn't think that Aggie who was rumored by him for having affair with Leon was such a smart woman. The bimbo eruption was resolved by Aggie easily.

Hathaway happily said to Leon next to her, "Did Jason go for wool and come home shorn?"

Leon smiled, "His bad end is still to come."

With that Leon took the phone and got up to call Josie.

Leon's tone is light, "Ms. Cox, have you finished yet?"

Even if Leon did not say what it was, Josie knew it by heart.

Leon asked Josie to take advantage of her relationship with Jason to sleep with Jason and to accuse

Jason of sexual assault with evidence, which would ruin Jason's reputation and bring him down the altar.

Josie froze and asked, "Do you really have to go that far?"

Leon chuckled, but the laugh was a bit cold and sarcastic, "Ms. Cox, when we first decided to work together, you promised to ruin Jason's reputation forever."

Josie was silent.

Leon continued, "It's been a while since you went back to South City to get closer to Jason, right? But you haven't done what we agreed to do at first. Have you never had the chance? Or can't you do it?"

Josie continued to be silent, but Leon had the answer he wanted.

Josie loved Jason as much as she hated him.

She couldn't destroy Jason herself, and she couldn't bear to.

Josie probably gritted her teeth when she remembered those memories.

Otherwise, Josie wouldn't have agreed to work with Leon in the first place. But when it came to getting Josie to do that, she must hesitate.

Leon did not blame Josie. He was also in love and knew how she felt and her helplessness.

So after calming down, he spoke again, "Ms. Cox, you just finish the first half of our agreement and gain the evidence. I temporarily choose not to publish it and you also do not need to charge him. Let's see which Jason will choose."

"If Jason voluntarily withdraws from this war with me, I will destroy the evidence and not let Jason lose his reputation. But if he continues to be my enemy then I will not be merciful." Leon finally answered, "As you know my wife is pregnant and I don't want any accidents."

When it came to Hathaway, Leon put it much harsher, "Of course, Ms. Cox can also go back and refuse to cooperate with me. I will have other ways to deal with Jason."

Josie was completely silent. Leon was calmly waiting for her answer.

After a while, Josie replied resolutely, "I continue to cooperate with you, and you do not need to consider my feelings. When it's done, you just go public with the evidence, and I'll quickly file charges."

Then she said indifferently, "What he did to me was enough for me to destroy him, and I'm sorry that I was out of my mind and softhearted."

Josie hung up after saying this. Leon pinched his phone and smiled indifferently.

Before the fight even started Leon could be sure he had won.

Whether Jason cared about Josie, he won.

If Jason cared about Josie, he would come to Leon to stop the fight for Josie's sake.

If Jason didn't care about Josie, then Leon would make it public and Jason would lose his reputation.

The day after Leon came to Milan to stay with Hathaway, Carl and Cynthia packed their bags and said goodbye. They did not want to disturb Leon and Hathaway and only said that when Leon needed to return home, he could call them to come over. Cynthia also went back to Hong Kong to deal with the company's business.

In South City, Aggie's trending topic was removed the next day, because she asked for Nick's help.

It was enough to be trending for one day. Aggie believed her explanation was enough to convince outsiders that there was no affair between her and Leon. She couldn't help it if someone had to find fault with her. She really did her best.

Aggie went to Nick's office to ask Nick to help her remove the trending topic, and Nick teased her, "I've only heard of people who pay for being the trending topic, but not for removing it."

Someone paid for removing it because it was bad. But Aggie's post was positive and gave her and HD Hospital indirect publicity. Although HD Hospital was now so famous in South City that it didn't need any publicity at all, Nick thought being trending on the Internet was good.

After Aggie knew that Nick was in love with someone, she went to Nick frankly for the first time. When Nick teased her, Aggie said inattentively, "I won't pay you and you just take it as my reward for publicizing hospital yesterday."

With that, she turned around and left. Nick was speechless. She was so meticulous about money.

In all fairness, Aggie was a nice girl, but not the one who made his heart flutter.

So in fact, Nick wished that Aggie, the cold doctor, could marry a good man. But a girl like Aggie was not easy to pursue. Nick wondered who could be that outstanding to be with her.

CHAPTER 510 CARL'S WOMAN

After Aggie's trending topic was removed, people were focused on Hathaway's pregnancy. Hathaway and Leon were celebrities in South City, and her pregnancy caused quite a stir.

Hathaway wrote only four words on Weibo at this time: I'm in South City.

And a photo of herself and Leon was attached. In the photo, a maple leaf fell on Leon's shoulder, with Hathaway helping him to take off it while Leon looking at her tenderly.

It was beautiful and romantic.

Hathaway wore a long camel woolen coat, while Leon wore his usual black coat, looking even more intimate on the lonelier streets of Milan in late autumn.

Cynthia took this photo for them. Carl and Cynthia were returning from a walk that night when Leon took Hathaway out for a walk after dinner. Cynthia was so impressed by Hathaway and Leon as they walked away, that she took out her mobile phone and secretly took a photo of them.

Neither of them knew Cynthia was taking the photo. Because it was a snapshot, the pose of Hathaway and Leon seemed very natural.

Cynthia later sent Hathaway the photo, and Hathaway loved it so much that she used it as a screensaver on her phone.

As a fashion trendsetter, Cynthia also perfected her photography skills. Many years ago, when Cynthia started her career, she could not afford to hire a professional photographer to take pictures of clothes. She studied photography and took pictures herself. With a keen natural gift for photographic composition, her pictorial pictures were more perfect than those of professional photographers sometimes, at least in the style she wanted.

Not only was Cynthia herself photographed, but most of the time she was also the model.

Now the models were proud to be on Cynthia's show. However, when Cynthia's brand was not famous, in many cases she could not even hire models. Famous models did not want to shoot her brand, and unknown models did not have the temperament to capture the charm of her clothes, so she had to model herself.

This was how Cynthia developed her photography skills. Although she did not have to take pictures herself later. She was also fond of photography. Wherever she went, she would take a photo. She won awards from travel magazines for photos she took during her travel, but that was nothing compared to her achievements in the clothing industry. So few people knew about it.

If what Cynthia photographed wasn't a good shot, why would Hathaway use this photo as a screensaver, or posted it openly?

Hathaway was not the kind of person who loved PDA, but she had to show it off this time because they were in the public eye and hotly debated.

Hathaway's post caused a stir on Weibo as people came to watch her and Leon's love.

'I'm in South City' even set off a new way to show affection.

It was simple and domineering.

Of course, there were those who praised and admired them in the comments while there were also anti-fans who scolded them.

Some of them said: They staged the photo, ok? Who took photos of them when there were only Hathaway and Leon in Milan? Didn't they get someone to take photos for them? And the composition and scene are so beautiful that only a professional photographer could have taken them!

Many people immediately chimed in others:

That's right. The composition looks like an image in a movie.

As a professional photographer, I also think this photo was taken by a professional, but I didn't dare to say so for fear of being scolded.

Suddenly, Hathaway's photo kicked up a very public stink.

After Hathaway posted that photo, she took a nap. Leon picked her up from school in the morning after class. They had lunch and Hathaway was so sleepy that she fell asleep after sending a post on Weibo.

Leon came over and took her phone out of her hand and carried her to bed so she could sleep more comfortably.

Leon knew Hathaway sent a post on Weibo, but he never had an account and didn't follow what was going on on Weibo. He got back to work when Hathaway took a lunch break.

It was only when Warren called to ask what to do about Weibo that Leon found out Hathaway had been abused. Leon found netizens really annoying. Did it have anything to do with whether they were happy or not?

There was a saying that Badlands begot cunning people.

To put it in perspective, those who lived an unhappy life would curse others, because quality people would only focus on their own business.

A person like Leon, who was busy with his daily work, had no time to pay attention to other people's affairs.

He didn't care about what others said, but when it came to Hathaway, he directly instructed, "Pay internet trolls to fight."

The people who called Hathaway names ranged from keyboard savages who found fault with everyone, to people who hired keyboard men to smear her. But whether it was intentional or not, in Leon's view, it was intolerable.

Leon always believed that once the money was spent, he would win the spat.

Warren did what he was told but before he could make it, the shoe was on the other foot when Cynthia's studio posted on Weibo.

Cynthia didn't have a Weibo account, neither did Carl, so Cynthia used the studio's Weibo account to speak.

However, the post was sent in the tone of the studio, and the content was as follows:

Mrs. Feyrer said that she took the photo for President Davis and Mrs. Davis. It was a snapshot.

Because President Davis temporarily returned home to handle his work, Mrs. and Mr. Feyrer went to Milan to take care of their daughter, and only left after President Davis came back.

In addition to being a designer, Mrs. Feyrer was also a famous photographer.

Attach a photo of Cynthia's award-winning photography, as well as some random photos she took during her travels. Each photo was beautiful. Cynthia lived up to her reputation as a professional photographer.

Also attached was a ticket for Cynthia and Carl's arrival and departure in Milan, which indirectly proved that they were indeed in Milan at that time.

The trolls quieted down after Cynthia's statement came out. Because they suddenly realized an important fact that Hathaway was the daughter of Carl who was famous in South City. The thought of Carl sent shivers down many people's backs. When they thought they called Hathaway's name just now, they all remained silent.

Hathaway was so low-key that she hardly ever showed off Carl and Cynthia, nor did she often interact with them. So everyone forgot that she was Carl's and Cynthia's own daughter.

Cynthia herself clarified it and defended Hathaway, reminding people that Hathaway was not only Leon's wife, Paul's daughter but also Carl's and Cynthia's daughter.

They shouldn't offend Hathaway.

No one dared say anything for a moment.

Warren called Leon again to explain the turn of what happened.

Leon was calm, "Mrs. Feyrer is her mother so she defends her, and I, her husband, of course, will protect her in my own way. My plan remains the same. Contact those who spread false rumors and forward comments, more than 500 of which are forwarded, and tell them to wait for the lawyer's letter. Besides, you can make it difficult for them in your own way."

Leon told people not to trash Hathaway online in his way.

Long ago, some of the most influential people in South City had disparaged Hathaway in front of Leon, and he sued them.

Their reputations were ruined by the lawsuits, and Leon made it difficult for them.

Now Leon would take the same approach to let them know what freedom of speech was, which didn't mean you could say whatever you want.

Warren thought that Cynthia cleared it up and that anti-fans stopped blackening Hathaway's name so Leon would let it go. But it indirectly showed Leon's defense of Hathaway. Leon wouldn't let Hathaway hurt and feel wronged.

Hathaway had no idea what happened while she slept. After she woke up, she drank some water and ate some food before she was sent to school by Leon to resume her lessons.

No one was allowed to look at the phone during class, and if Marlon saw her play on the phone, she would be reprimanded. The course was tense and interesting, and no one had time to look at their phones. So by the time Hathaway knew she was being scolded online, it was dark.

Hathaway was always big-hearted and reading the comments on Weibo happily.

After Cynthia clarified it, comments were all about being envious of her:

Wow, Hathaway is so happy. She has Mom, Dad, and her husband with her.

I'm really envious of Hathaway, who is a winner of life.

I wonder what it's like to be Carl's daughter.

I wonder what it's like to be Carl's woman.

Everyone was envious of Hathaway until someone commented:

Yeah, yeah, being Carl's woman must be very happy.

I heard that Carl had a crush on Mrs. Feyrer when he was young. He finally married her.

I want to know the story of Carl and Mrs. Feyrer.

A friend of my father knows Carl. I heard that Carl dotes on Mrs. Feyrer and does PDA every day, just like young people.

Wow, I really want to find a man to spoil me.

After that, all comments were about Carl's love story with Cynthia, and no one said anything about Hathaway.

Other people commented below Cynthia's studio Weibo page asking for a picture of Cynthia and Carl.