

Timeless Love 30

CHAPTER 30 TRUE LOVE COULD CONQUER ALL.

Finally ending the topic of the hickey on her neck, Hathaway thought that Leon's torture could finally be over. When she was relieved to be ready to have a cup of tea to calm her nerves, she heard Leon say, "Why did you choose Barry as your assistant?"

Hathaway literally wanted to cry.

He was interrogating her endlessly, and he didn't want her to have dinner.

She was about to say something when the man across her warned her again in an icy tone, "Tell me the truth."

Hathaway tried to say something but stopped. She originally wanted to perfunctorily say that she could control Barry because he was a rookie in the workplace so she chose him. But by saying so, he clearly saw through her attempt to be perfunctory...

So Hathaway had to tell the truth, "Because he is good-looking."

She told the truth and he couldn't think she was superficial.

She chose Barry in the first place because his performance and temperament stood out among the crowd of interviewees. She foresaw at that time that it would be hard for her to be the president of Taylor Group, so of course, she had to choose a pleasing assistant so that she would be in a good mood every day.

The other reason was that she valued the skill of a black belt in Taekwondo on Barry's resume, which amounted to hiring both an assistant and a bodyguard. That was why she decided to hire Barry on the spot, which almost drove the senior management mad.

Of course, it was only after she hired Barry that she found out that he had so many good qualities, such as being motivated, hardworking, careful, and smart, and so on. She felt that she had unintentionally picked up a treasure.

After Hathaway finished speaking, Leon unabashedly expressed his contempt, "This is the first time I've heard of someone choosing an assistant based on such criteria: not the working ability but the appearance."

Hathaway heard his sarcasm and smiled to save her dignity, "I don't take the usual route."

Leon glanced at her and lit a cigarette before squinting his eyes to give her good advice, "I think it's better for you to choose a woman as your assistant so that no other feelings unrelated to work will arise and interfere with your work."

So when he took over as the president of Davis Group, he replaced the original president's special assistant with Warren, keeping those elder and well-behaved women in the secretarial office. The other young female secretaries had all been fired. He was sick of those women scheming against him and using their work to get close to him.

Hathaway blinked, very disapproving of Leon, "Two people of the same gender can also love each other, and it's fatal to fall in love over time."

Hathaway's words were simply treasonous to Leon because he couldn't imagine why a man would fall in love with another man at all, and he didn't understand what Hathaway actually was thinking about.

He was so angry at her for staring at her that he couldn't say anything, but she looked so innocent that Leon took a hard puff on his cigarette, and then put out the cigarette in the ashtray heavily, and he got up and went out.

If he didn't go out he was afraid he'd be dead of anger, and Hathaway spread her hands helplessly.

Had she said something wrong?

It was natural that men love women, and it was also logical that men love men.

True love could conquer all, couldn't it?

The dinner for four people was really not very harmonious.

No one talked to Leon. Barry didn't dare to talk to him; Nick chatted with Hathaway from time to time to get information about Ashley from Hathaway. It caused Leon to frequently give him cold looks and despise his cunning.

Because Hathaway was chatting with Nick, naturally she had no time to talk to Leon, and she still had to have her dinner.

So after a meal, Hathaway didn't speak to Leon.

Hathaway didn't want to talk to Leon, because he always taunted her. No one wanted to be lectured by him, so she preferred to talk to Nick about Ashley.

Hathaway was smart, so she noticed something after talking to Nick. She suddenly asked Nick, "Doctor Jackson, are you so concerned about my sister because you are secretly in love with her?"

Nick didn't directly answer her, but he smiled and asked her a question, "Can I?"

Hathaway nodded, "Sure."

Then she said, "Why didn't you tell her earlier when you had a crush on her, causing her to be seriously hurt by a bad man."

Nick didn't say anything yet, and Hathaway said thoughtfully, "It's good to be hurt so that she can be smarter."

After Hathaway said that, Leon who was sitting opposite her looked at her thoughtfully, as if he didn't think that someone like her would say such profound and emotional words.

Nick continued to smile gently, "Indeed, being hurt is not a bad thing."

Nick never positively admitted his feelings for Ashley, and Hathaway didn't continue to delve into it. Although she was curious, she could tell that Nick didn't want to say anything more. And she wasn't the kind of person who didn't have a sense of other people. There was no need to investigate the matter, especially feelings.

After dinner, Nick asked Leon, "How do we get home?"

Nick and Leon came in separate cars, and Barry drove Hathaway's car together with her. Nick asked this, in fact, in order to ask who would give Hathaway a ride home.

Leon responded calmly, "She's going to my place at night."

Nick was slightly surprised, and then felt a little embarrassed, "Well, the doctor said..."

He could only remind them. As a doctor, he really thought of many things.

Hathaway coughed awkwardly, "Dr. Jackson, you're thinking too much..."

Hathaway wanted to save her reputation. Nick reminded her many times as if she and Leon were horny. In fact, she wasn't interested in that kind of thing at all!

Barry didn't know about Hathaway's injury that night with Leon, and asked with a puzzled expression, "Did you guys simply chat all night? "

Didn't men spend the night with women to get laid?

Was he too impure, or were they having problems?

Hathaway, "..."

She gave her car keys to Barry and said a little angrily, "You should drive my car and leave first."

After Barry left, Nick also took a meaningful look at Leon and said, "So you're such a person."

A person who was addicted to beauty.

Leon was being stared at by Nick, and he wanted to kick him out and bit his teeth to explain, "We have other things."

Nick expressed his disbelief, but he didn't linger and turned around and walked over towards his car, leaving behind embarrassed Hathaway and expressionless Leon.

Eventually, Leon took the lead and headed to his car and Hathaway followed.
