

Chapter 100 Dumplings

They visited many people together today.

From the time they got married until now, except for sleeping together at night, they were the closest today.

Although they were tired, the way they looked at each other had changed significantly.

The dumplings were ready. Alyssa and Leon sat on the left.

Audrey, George, and Emily sat on the right.

Kevin still sat in the main seat.

The delicious dumplings were served.

They were still steaming.

It looked very appetizing.

"Come on, hurry up and eat! Dumplings are only good when they are hot. Hurry up!" Seeing that the children didn't move, Kevin simply started to eat first.

After Kevin ate the dumplings, the others started to eat.

Alyssa was a little hungry after a long day, so she ate faster.

Looking at Alyssa, Audrey mocked, "Miss Graham, how long has it been since you've eaten dumplings? You can't be so abused that you can't even eat, right? Leon, you're not so petty, are you? Even if you don't like Miss Graham, you can't starve her! It would be bad if word got out!"

Alyssa looked up at Audrey expressionlessly, "Mrs. Hunter, do you think the dumplings are not good today?"

When she heard Alyssa's words, Audrey's face turned gloomy.

"I eat so fast because the dumplings are delicious today. It's New Year's Eve and everyone is very happy. The dumplings are so yummy, it doesn't matter if I eat them fast, right? Mrs. Hunter, what do you think?"

Alyssa had studied.

She had worked, too.

She had dealt with a lot of big shots in the business world, at least.

Audrey didn't have to try to get to her from the food.

She didn't want to spoil the mood on New Year's Eve. But if Audrey continued to be like this, she would certainly not be kind to her!

"Leon, how can your wife talk to me like that? I am the elder. Isn't it a bit too much for her to be so rude?"

Audrey glanced at Alyssa, and finally at Leon.

Leon kept his head down and didn't seem to have anything to say. She knew Leon had always looked down on her, but she didn't care.

It would be better for him to treat her with great disrespect. Then she would have a reason to lecture Leon. But she was really afraid of him being silent like this.

She had George, and Kevin couldn't do anything to her.

Today, she just didn't want them to have a great time. If she was in a bad mood, they couldn't have a happy New Year!

But Leon didn't even care about her.

He just served Alyssa a dumpling.

Because of this dumpling, all the people at the table looked at Leon.

Especially Kevin.

As far as he could remember, this was the first time Leon served food to someone.

Alyssa happily took a bite, "Thank you, honey."

Alyssa's voice was very sweet.

Leon was so happy.

He naturally didn't care about the irrelevant people.

Kevin watched Leon and Alyssa's interaction and knew that their relationship had improved by leaps and bounds long ago.

Audrey's face was grim as she turned her mouth down in anger.

No matter how delicious the dumplings were, she couldn't eat them anymore.

Emily's face was not good either. The last time she came was a month ago. At that time, Leon and Alyssa hadn't interacted much. A month had passed, and their relationship was obviously much better.

She liked Leon and knew the look and feeling of liking someone. At this point, Leon and Alyssa were sitting together. It was obvious that they had feelings for each other.

She clutched her chopsticks tightly and didn't dare to show any impatience, fearing that what Kevin had said last time might come true. If she was really sent far away, it would be difficult for her to even come back, let alone snatch Leon from Alyssa.

For now, it was best for her to keep a low profile. Lately, she had been pleasing grandpa, just hoping that he would keep her at the Hunters.

As long as she could stay here, she could see Leon, and there was hope for her!

With this in mind, she could only keep her head down and not say anything.

George was also surprised. He and Leon's relationship was not as bad as it was rumored to be. They played together when they were young, but when they grew up, they just ignored each other and worked on their own things.

Leon was his half-brother, so there was a gap between them. But George knew Leon's temperament. He did seldom see him in love with any woman.

There seemed to be a fire leaping in Leon's eyes as he looked at Alyssa.

He had a vague feeling that it was love.

He just hadn't experienced it and didn't know what it felt like yet.

George turned his head to grandpa and found that he had also seen this scene.

Grandpa had a smile on his old face.

He could see that grandpa was also very happy.

He turned his head to look at Alyssa and found that Alyssa was happily eating her dumplings, not angry at all.

He was very surprised by her generosity.

How could other girls continue to sit and eat at this time?

George couldn't help but take one more look at Alyssa.

He happened to see Alyssa drinking from a duck water cup.

She was an adult and she still drank from a straw cup! What a spoiled woman.

He lowered his head with a somewhat sullen face. Suddenly he felt that the dumplings were tasteless. But when he watched Alyssa eat the dumplings, he felt like she was eating something incredibly delicious.

He took a bite of the dumpling and found it not that tasty. He looked at Alyssa again and she still enjoyed it.

Alyssa felt that someone was looking at her. When she looked up, she saw George staring at her.

She glanced at George, who hastily withdrew his gaze.

Alyssa lowered her head just in time to see Leon give her a dumpling, "Have some more."

Alyssa was so happy to see the dumplings that she didn't have time to read George's eyes.

After eating the dumpling, she suddenly didn't feel so tired anymore. Alyssa noticed that Leon didn't eat many dumplings. There was a plate of shrimp in front of her. She peeled a shrimp and brought it to Leon's mouth. Leon finished the shrimp and continued to serve Alyssa dumplings.

When she saw the dumplings in her bowl, Alyssa glanced at Leon happily. They usually ate together, and Leon knew her appetite.

She really didn't have enough.

Leon gave her dumplings, so she naturally had to eat them quickly.
