

Chapter 73 Three Days

Alyssa looked at Hassan and said, "I can do this project, but how much are you going to pay me? I know there is a commission for doing projects in your company. I think you should give me some money, shouldn't you?"

"I can give you the salary and commission of a formal employee, are you satisfied?"

"Not bad!"

Alyssa thought this was acceptable.

"From now on, you will officially take over this project. Trent and Melany are in the same team as you. You will solve all the problems of the project, okay?"

"Okay."

Alyssa nodded.

Hassan was satisfied with Alyssa's attitude and handed the information in front of him to Alyssa, "These documents may help you. You can go back and study them."

"Okay."

Alyssa nodded and walked out with the documents.

She stepped aside to look at the documents. These documents were all projects that Hassan had worked on himself over the years.

There were many solutions to these projects, such as litigation recovery, asset restructuring, debt to equity, diversification sale, asset replacement, leasing, and bankruptcy liquidation. Hassan was very capable of working on so many projects.

She looked at these examples and pondered them over and over again. She felt that Summit Group's project was more suitable for the debt to equity swap form.

Those shareholders already had their own plans anyway, and there should be changes after Summit Group underwent asset restructuring.

She was ready to talk to Vincent.

Summit Group wanted to rise from the dead, and Vincent must have his own ideas.

At 3:30 p.m., she called Vincent and made an appointment to meet with him.

Alyssa quickly found Trent and Melany and told them that she wanted to meet with Vincent.

They were surprised to hear Alyssa's words. Before they could react, Alyssa had already turned around and left.

Melany and Trent looked at each other and hurried to follow her.

3:30.

Summit Group.

Alyssa said her intentions and then looked up at Vincent. She noticed the hesitation in Vincent's eyes, so she handed him the documents in her hands.

"Equity restructuring can bring new environmental changes to your company. I can't say for sure that the outcome will be positive, but it will certainly bring some new changes. Whether these changes are good or bad, you must give it a shot. Also, as I just told you about the current situation, the best way to go now is to convert debt to equity. Although Summit Group has no debt, I knew that Summit has been losing money when I checked Susan before."

Vincent didn't expect such a little girl could check so well.

"Debt-to-equity swap is troublesome to operate. Do you have absolute certainty that you can carry the project forward?"

"In three days, I will have the whole program done."

"You?"

"It's not me, it's Citic."

Alyssa now represented Citic.

Besides, she was not competent enough and needed practice.

With Hassan, there was nothing that couldn't be handled.

As long as Summit Group agreed to her proposal, she would do it. If she didn't understand something, she would ask, and Hassan wouldn't be so mean as to not teach her about it.

Vincent eventually agreed with Alyssa. He had consulted other asset companies before. They all gave the same solution.

He took up shares of Summit Group and there would be no share dilution.

Citic was very experienced in doing such projects.

Vincent agreed, and Alyssa informed Mr. Baker that she would come back in three days.

When she returned, Alyssa informed Hassan of the result of Vincent's discussions with her.

"You can make the whole program in three days? Young lady, aren't you too confident?"

"A debt-to-equity case should usually have a whole set of models. Besides, Trent and Melany, and I should be able to solve the problem quickly by dividing up the work. We won't be unable to deliver the proposal because of the time. We've been following this project from the beginning and still know the situation very well."

"Good, but I must warn you that you may have to work overtime. After all, it's your first time doing such a big project. Don't be lazy, ask more questions and think more."

Hassan finished and was already packing his things to leave.

Alyssa asked, "It's not even the end of the day! You're leaving?"

"I have a client to meet. You work this out on your own. I won't help you."

Hassan said and left.

Alyssa watched Hassan walk away and twitched the corners of her mouth.

How could he do this!

He actually walked away?

Never mind, what she had read earlier was not for nothing.

Melany and Trent had been working at Citic for so long, so they must have something.

Alyssa walked out and talked to Trent and Melany about the current situation. They were going to get this project done together.

Melany looked at Alyssa with wide eyes, "Alyssa, are you kidding me? Such a big project is just going to be done by us! What if something goes wrong?"

"Something goes wrong?" Alyssa shook her head, "Melany, don't worry. Mr. Wood will be our checker, and Citic's reputation is still very important. Even if you and I don't care, Mr. Wood still does. Although he doesn't help us now, he will definitely guide us when the time comes. So let's do it boldly!"

Melany thought that Alyssa's words made some sense.

Seeing that Melany was almost convinced, Alyssa looked at Trent, "Trent, you are the most experienced. You still need to keep a tight rein on many things. Let's start dividing the work now."

Alyssa gave Melany the task of liquidation and restructuring of the asset, and Trent the task of confirming the shares of other Summit Group shareholders.

She handled everything from the shareholders' decision meeting to the registration process.

Yet these were just the tip of the iceberg.

After Summit Group's debt to equity swap, the non-performing assets could be converted into the shareholding system. After operating for a period of time, Summit would be able to cooperate with other companies after all of its assets were disposed of.

Summit Group could take advantage of this opportunity to adjust its internal structure.

However, the company could not be listed until the non-performing assets were disposed of.

The information she had checked before let her understand that Summit Group did not owe too much debt. In five years, after the debt was paid off, the company could be listed and grow slowly.

Six o'clock in the evening.

Alyssa excused herself to go out.

She said she was going to buy take-out for them, but she actually went to pick up Leon.

In the dark car, Alyssa yawned and waited in front of the red light.

Leon saw Alyssa's tired look and asked softly, "You're tired today?"

"Well, anyway, Susan's matter is solved. Hassan is really amazing. He solved Susan's matter easily."