

Chapter 74 Apologize

Leon glanced at Alyssa, his face darkened.

The surroundings were dark. Alyssa didn't notice Leon's face and continued, "I looked at the projects he's done in the past few years today, and they're all very good. He's really good and I'm a little jealous of him."

"..." Leon wanted to speak, but looking at Alyssa's adoring expression, he couldn't say anything. His face was not only dark, but cold.

"It's almost home. Have a good meal. I'll be back later."

Leon looked at Alyssa in shock.

She was not even home during the day!

How could she not return at night?

As the president of Hunter Group, he was not even as busy as she was.

She was even busier than he was.

He wanted to say something, but thinking about her argument with him yesterday, he suddenly couldn't say anything.

He was afraid she would get angry.

So, a few minutes later, he was left at the entrance of the villa.

A gust of wind blew over him and he felt an overwhelming sense of desolation.

Alyssa ordered takeout before she went back to the office.

She hadn't even arrived at the office yet, and the delivery had already arrived.

She had spent money before she started earning it.

Trent and Melany were both used to working overtime and didn't suspect what Alyssa said about working overtime.

Alyssa originally had the experience of studying until 2:00 or 3:00 in the morning as well.

But after two or three o'clock, she just couldn't hold on anymore.

She talked to Trent and Melany about getting some sleep and got their permission.

Alyssa took a short break. Sleeping on the table was not comfortable, but she fell asleep anyway.

An hour later, Alyssa woke up and started to work again.

The next day, Alyssa went to work as usual.

As soon as Hassan got to work, he saw Alyssa working with two dark circles under her eyes.

His eyes rested on her for a few seconds, then he withdrew his gaze.

Doing projects required patience, not ingenuity.

She needed patience. He had to be ruthless if he wanted to train her.

Alyssa wasn't in the mood to look at Hassan, and now she had to check the data again. Her head was about to explode after a busy night, but she still had to deal with the confusing numbers.

Anyone upset was grumpy. When she went to the pantry to pour water, Alyssa accidentally got hot water on her hand.

Her delicate white hand immediately burned red.

Looking at her red hand, her irritable heart calmed down. Thinking that she hadn't sent Leon today, she called him.

As a result, Leon didn't answer her call!

Why was this man so petty?

However, this was indeed her fault.

She didn't tell Leon yesterday that she couldn't take him to work this morning.

Leon didn't know she had worked late all night and was probably mad when he got up this morning.

She called Leon again, but he still didn't answer the phone.

It was hard to please this man when he was angry. She called him, but he wouldn't pick up.

What should she do?

In the past, she had little contact with Leon and did not know he was so petty. But this did not affect her feelings for Leon at all. She was even thinking about how to apologize to him.

She hadn't made it clear before, and she should indeed apologize. Since he didn't answer her phone, she would go find him. She knew the way to his office, and it wasn't too hard to see him.

Alyssa went to Hunter Group during her lunch break.

When she got to Hunter Group, she realized that Leon had been in a meeting.

She waited outside until her stomach growled, but Leon still hadn't come out. She learned from his secretary that he hadn't eaten lunch yet, so she planned to buy food first. After all the time they had spent together, no one knew what Leon liked to eat better than she did.

Alyssa came back from buying the meal just in time to see Leon in his office. She knocked on the door and stood in front of the office door waiting.

At the sound of Leon's voice, she opened the door. Leon could recognize his secretary's footsteps and wondered who came in at this time. As a result, he looked up and saw Alyssa and froze for a moment.

At first, Leon's face was not good, but after a few seconds, he regained his usual look.

Alyssa knew she was wrong, and when she saw Leon she immediately smiled and said, "I knew you hadn't eaten lunch yet, so I brought you lunch. Please don't be angry."

Leon didn't say anything. He looked at his papers and didn't even look at Alyssa.

Alyssa opened the lunch box and the prawns inside were revealed, accompanied by many light dishes.

To be precise, Leon wasn't a picky eater. He ate everything, just not a lot.

She bought a lot of dishes for Leon.

But the most eye-catching of those dishes was the prawns.

The smell of rice came out and Leon couldn't help but look at it.

She secretly saw Leon glance at the lunch box and knew Leon was hungry.

She knew he loved prawns. So, she put on the gloves and started peeling the prawns. Faintly aware of Leon's gaze, she said softly, "The prawns taste very good. Give it a try. And, you should eat more vegetables, it's good for your health. Look, I have peeled the prawns, so just eat."

Leon was even hungrier when he saw the peeled prawns. He went over and looked at Alyssa.

Alyssa immediately took a prawn and ate it. Her look of satisfaction made people want to take a bite too.

"Look, it's not poisonous!"

Leon frowned and simply brought the lunch box to him and ate it. Then Alyssa turned around and took an egg out of the bag, tapping it gently on his desk.

She gently peeled the egg and carefully removed the outer membrane, bringing the whole egg to the side of the lunch box.

She could see the exhaustion in his eyes and knew he was tired. She tried to make as little noise as possible and do as much as possible to avoid him getting annoyed with her.

Leon finished his meal and started to work again, so Alyssa simply left him alone and turned around to leave.

She always followed one rule. If Leon was really angry and decided not to talk to her, how could he still eat the food she sent him?

Obviously, Leon wasn't angry now!

Since he wasn't angry anymore, she should naturally get on with her business.

But she had just reached the door when Leon called out to her.

"Wait!"

Alyssa stopped and turned her head to Leon, "What else do you need?"

"Come pick me up from work tonight."

"Okay."

Alyssa happily agreed! He wasn't mad at her anymore!

She walked away happily but didn't see Leon looking at her back and curling his lips.

Of course, he could see that she was trying to please him.

But she probably didn't know that he was just too concerned about her.

At 5:30 p.m., Alyssa came to pick Leon up.

She had been actively working on the Summit Group stuff, so Hassan didn't force her to work late. They were almost ready in the early stages, so he no longer insisted on the principle of working overtime to produce efficiency.

She, Trent, and Melany all left work early today and prepared to do the rest of the work tomorrow.

Melany and Trent left the office with worried faces, but she was fearless. She felt that as long as the work moved forward at her speed, there would be no problem with the project.
