

Chapter 78 He's Bound To Step In

She could change it or redo it, but why did he have to abandon her proposal?

Alyssa was upset. It was so hard to watch the proposal she had worked on for so long being put aside.

Hassan didn't have time to pay attention to Alyssa's psychological changes. He had a lot of work to do.

Seeing that Alyssa didn't leave, he looked up at Alyssa, "You still have something to do?"

"No."

She understood that her boss's mind was the most important thing. So, she decided to listen to Hassan and went out with the two proposals.

Melany and Trent saw Alyssa come out and hurriedly asked her about the result.

Alyssa shook her head and then nodded. She politely asked them to wait for a moment, then she went to her desk and took out the two proposals for comparison.

Sure enough, she had to admit that Hassan's proposal was flawless.

It was the kind of proposal Vincent needed.

She knew her problem, and she knew she had a lot to learn.

Eventually, she went to Summit Group with Hassan's proposal, along with Trent and Melany.

She led the debt-to-equity operation.

Vincent was very satisfied with Alyssa's proposal. He thought it was awesome for a young girl to have such skills.

After a private conversation, Vincent found out that Alyssa was only an intern at Citic. He was interested in inviting Alyssa to work at Summit Group.

Alyssa looked at Vincent's eager look, then looked down at the proposal and instantly understood Hassan's intention.

Mr. Wood wanted to tell her what she could do.

This was both his warning and caution.

He just wanted to tell her to be clear about her abilities.

Mr. Baker wanted her to go to the Baker Group because he valued her ability.

But the proposal wasn't actually made by her.

Regardless of whether or not her proposal would work, she would need a long period of experience.

Without surprise, Alyssa turned down Mr. Baker and told him that it wasn't her proposal, but Mr. Wood's.

Mr. Baker smiled, still did not change his mind, "I trust Citic. Mr. Wood's choice won't be bad. Mr. Wood value you, naturally, because of your ability. Even if you didn't do the proposal, you must also have the excellent ability."

After hearing Alyssa's explanation of the debt-to-equity proposal, he knew that Alyssa was a smart person.

This girl looked very insightful. How could Hassan put a useless person around him! This little girl was very smart. He really wanted to recruit her to his company.

But now was not the time.

Alyssa could see that Vincent was not complimenting her. The more she thought about it, the more she realized that Hassan was quite scheming.

But if he wasn't, how could he hold a stake in Citic when he was only in his twenties!

It would be nice to work with someone of Hassan's ability.

Alyssa left Summit Group and began working with Trent and Melany on what to do next.

After Alyssa finished her work, it was getting late.

She rushed to bring Leon his lunch.

Hunter Group office.

Alyssa poured a cup of hot water for Leon.

Leon took a sip of hot water after eating, looked at Alyssa, and said, "Citic took over the Summit Group's debt-to-equity project. Hassan did the proposal? You represented Hassan?"

She didn't expect that Leon already knew about it. It seemed that many people knew about it.

She thought for a moment and said, "You're so smart."

"You're just out of school. Even if you are experienced, you can't make a solution that Summit Group will be satisfied with, and Hassan is bound to step in if he wants to finish the project. But the data you collected earlier is still quite important. It was thanks to the data you collected that Hassan was able to make a solution in such a short period of time."

"You sound like you saw these things."

Alyssa was really surprised, but after thinking about it for a while, she didn't feel surprised at all. Leon was thoughtful and shrewd.

He had followed his grandfather in his early years to operate the company.

His ability was naturally not bad.

Leon probably already knew about these things long ago.

Alyssa lowered her head and said, "It was Mr. Wood who did the proposal. His proposal is really good. I might need some more experience, so I'm going to work hard with Mr. Wood."

Leon looked up at Alyssa and asked, "Aren't you going to study for the exam?"

"That's one thing, but I should also work hard. I can still use these things in the future."

Leon put down the water glass and said, "Wouldn't you consider coming to Hunter Group and doing a financial audit or something like that? You can choose any position you want."

Alyssa shook her head, "Hunter Group is too messy, with various forces involved. What would the other shareholders of the company think if I worked for Hunter Group? Besides, Audrey doesn't seem to like me. I guess it's because she wants to steal the power from Hunter Group. If I do come to work here, what she does in secret will become blatant. I don't want to get into trouble, and I don't want to get you into trouble."

Leon didn't expect Alyssa to be so blunt. He glanced at Alyssa and nodded, "So you plan to continue working at Citic?"

"Yes."

"Okay, call me if you need anything. I'll take care of it."

Alyssa smiled softly as a warm feeling slipped through her heart.

She was already happy that Leon had said that.

Instead of asking her not to work, Leon had asked for her opinion.

She felt Leon respected her enough, and that made her feel happy.

He didn't seem nervous.

Nor did he worry that she would run off at any moment.

The lunch break was almost over and she was ready to go back. She was just standing up when Leon took her hand. She glanced at Leon and asked softly, "What's up?"

"Come pick me up tonight."

"I'll pick you up every night. Don't worry."

Alyssa turned around and left.

Leon watched Alyssa's back as she left. He turned his head, saw her duck water cup, and hurriedly ran out with it.

Alyssa was just about to enter the elevator when she saw Leon running out with the cup. He couldn't hand her the cup in time, so he had to get into the elevator too.

Alyssa froze!

Leon shoved the duck cup into Alyssa's hand.

Seeing the duck cup, Alyssa realized she had left the cup behind. She looked at Leon and smiled, "I forgot the water cup."

He looked at her holding the duck cup carefully and thought she was very cute.

The elevator slowly went down. When it reached the first floor, Alyssa smiled and said, "You should go up now! I'm sorry for taking your time."

"Now that you know you're taking up my time, how are you going to make it up to me?"

Alyssa frowned. She only said that out of courtesy. He actually asked her for compensation.
