

Chapter 86 Buy Him A Cup Of Black Tea

Looking at Hassan's somewhat surprised look, Alyssa felt good about refusing him.

She really couldn't continue this.

She looked at Hassan with sincerity in her eyes, "I'm going to quit after Spring Festival. Mr. Wood, thank you for your appreciation. I know I haven't gained enough experience, but I have more important things to do now."

She had to prepare for various exams.

After the Spring Festival, she had to take many exams.

But she didn't have time to study before because she worked on the project.

Hassan wasn't in a hurry, "Alyssa, if you work with me on this project, I can give you twice the commission. I'm not in a hurry. I'll give you a day to think about it. You take this information back and read it first. After you think it over, we'll talk about the rest."

Hassan was a master negotiator.

Convincing a newcomer like Alyssa in the workplace was not a difficult task for him, especially after understanding her personality.

She wouldn't necessarily reject him after seeing the information.

Alyssa looked at Hassan's determined look and couldn't help but smile. She prepared to leave without even taking the information.

Hassan immediately said, "You were introduced by Ella. Ella is my cousin. Of course, I have to give Ella some respect."

"What do you mean?"

Alyssa frowned.

"Do you think you're good? You've done two projects at Citic and you're experienced?" Hassan said calmly, but there was a clear contempt in his tone.

"What do you mean?" Alyssa was upset and her face darkened.

"You know exactly what you're capable of. Do you want me to make it so clear, Miss Graham? You're the first person who quit because you are bad at your job I've ever met."

"Bullshit!" Alyssa looked at Hassan angrily, "Jones Group's project, right? I do it! What do you need me to do?"

Hearing Alyssa's words, Hassan laughed inwardly.

She was too young to stand his provocation.

Only a moment later, she promised him.

At this moment, he stopped talking and his face was calm.

Seeing that Leon was indifferent, Alyssa frowned, "Mr. Wood, I've agreed to take this project!"

"It's great! I've already gathered the information about the Jones Group. You better read it carefully."

Alyssa took the materials but didn't leave. Jones Group had developed well, with a large number of companies and diversified businesses, so there should not be any problems. Why would it need an asset management company?

Since she had taken the job, she should ask about it.

Seeing that Alyssa didn't leave, Hassan asked, "You have questions to ask, don't you, little rookie? If you have any questions, just ask me."

"I'll read the information first. I'm a little confused."

"Hurry up! Time is running out."

"I'll meet you in your office tomorrow."

"Okay."

Hassan loved Alyssa because she was so efficient in her work. She also had a delicate mind that made it a pleasure to work with her.

Alyssa went to pick Leon up from work in the evening. Seeing Leon's face very bad, she glanced at the papers he put in the back seat before, guessing that he might be unhappy because of work.

He was unhappy and she was unhappy too.

It was almost the end of the year and Leon might have a lot of work to do. However, his competent employees were all on annual leave, so he needed to do most of the work himself.

When she thought about it, she wanted to help him share his work.

But as soon as she thought about the Hunters' messy connections, she got cold feet.

She took an early turn at the front corner.

Leon was so busy that he didn't notice that she had strayed off the road home.

It was only after she stopped the car that Leon noticed she had driven onto another road.

"You're lost?" Leon looked up at Alyssa. It wasn't her first time driving. Besides, how could she get lost since she could get home with no problem every time?

"Give me a minute."

She unbuckled her seat belt and hurried off.

Leon was about to ask her what she was up to when his phone suddenly rang. He picked up the phone and said a few words before hanging up. When he looked up again, he saw that Alyssa had returned from a distance, holding two cups of black tea.

Alyssa brought one of the cups to Leon, "Come on, have a try! This tea is not too sweet and smells good."

Looking at Alyssa's sincere face, Leon took a sip.

The black tea tasted good, but not as good as the one she made.

"You seem to have a lot of work, and it just so happens that I also have a lot of work. We can work together later. Can you lend me half of your study?"

Actually, she was worried that he would be lonely working alone.

But because she knew how proud he was, she could only say so.

He watched Alyssa sipping her peach tea and looked at the other half of the documents in the car. Leon knew that what she said was true. But she had always worked in the bedroom in the past. It was surprising that she made such a request today. It was obvious that she wanted to work with him.

Leon's mood suddenly got better. No matter how much work there was, it didn't seem to matter to him.

With her by his side, the work didn't seem to be that annoying anymore.

Half an hour later, they returned to the villa and had dinner together.

In the study, they sat opposite each other.

Alyssa quietly read the materials that Hassan had already sorted out.

Since when, Jones Group had been split into two parts. One part worked in architecture, with its own architecture and design companies.

The other part included entertainment companies.

Jones Group's entertainment companies were divided into three, the first called Windsun Cultural, a cultural company that Jones Group acquired seven years ago. That company was made bigger by Jones Group little by little, so that the later ones, Tensun Culture and Winson Culture, became the main source of income for Jones Group.

Over the years, the construction industry in A City was almost monopolized by Hunter Group. Other companies could only do some small projects that Hunter Group wasn't interested in. The competition in the market was quite harmonious.

Jones Group, like those small companies, had long ago stopped focusing on the construction industry.

Some time ago, the design of Jones Group and Hunter Group cooperation was leaked out. For this, Jones Group even held a press conference and stated that it was their company's negligence that led to the leaking of the design due to an internal problem.

She didn't know how it was resolved later. But Leon couldn't be a pushover.

They must have given him a proper reason.

When she thought that Leon had something to do with this case, she couldn't help but glance at Leon.
