

Chapter 96 Return Home

"No, I'm fine. I can stand up. I have something to tell you."

Alyssa had calmed down long ago. She had just woken up and wanted to tell Leon what she had heard in that dangerous building.

Seeing Leon sitting on the side, she told him exactly what she had heard.

She finished, but Leon didn't say anything.

She was slightly disappointed to see that he was composed. She asked softly, "You don't believe me?"

Leon glanced at Alyssa, "They don't know you're Mrs. Hunter, right?"

"It seems so. Ella was the one who introduced me to this job. When I met Hassan, he didn't ask about my family. He just considered me as Ella's best friend. So in his opinion, I was probably just a part-time worker. However, maybe he inquired about my background. But he's so busy every day. He shouldn't have time for that."

Alyssa was confident. Even if Hassan knew about it, it didn't matter to her. Hassan kept her mostly because he was satisfied with her ability to work.

After all, she had lived one more time than the others, and her ability to read people should not be too bad.

"So it means that up to now, they only think of you as an investigator for Citic?"

"Yes, so you'd better not make any moves. Keep everything according to the original plan. I haven't figured it out yet. I haven't revealed my identity before. Why would they want to kidnap me?"

Alyssa thought the whole thing wasn't quite normal. How exactly had she been found out?

She quickly thought of Ada.

She hurriedly started looking for her phone. After looking around with nothing, she looked at Leon pitifully, "Honey, I have to call Mr. Wood. Can you help me find my phone?"

How could he possibly be willing to find a phone for her! She was injured and should be at rest now.

But looking at Alyssa's begging face, he nodded anyway.

He took Alyssa's phone out of his coat pocket and Alyssa quickly called Hassan.

"Mr. Wood, there's a problem with Ada. My identity has been revealed. I can't go to Jones Group tomorrow. I'll meet you at the office."

"Okay, I'll see you at the office tomorrow."

At Hassan's words, Alyssa froze. He didn't seem to care that her identity had been exposed.

She had a vague feeling that Hassan seemed to know something already. She wanted to say something else, only to hear the phone being hung up.

Alyssa looked at the phone in disbelief.

That was the end of it?

She didn't say what she wanted to say, and he didn't ask what he should have asked.

Seeing Alyssa sitting dumbfounded, Leon said, "You haven't figured out the way Hassan treats you, have you?"

"Yes." Alyssa nodded heavily, "He should have asked how my identity got exposed, shouldn't he? Or maybe he should have asked how I got into danger or something? He seems to know something already. I don't know what exactly Hassan was thinking."

"Silly girl, you're being used."

"Hassan used me?" Alyssa instantly understood, "No wonder he wanted me to go to Jones Group. Hassan is so shrewd. He probably already knew who was suspicious and who needed to be investigated in Jones Group. So he sent me there just to buy more time. He's too smart."

"Aren't you angry?"

Alyssa's expression didn't look angry at all.

Her reaction surprised him!

On the one hand, he didn't expect her to be awakened by his words so quickly.

On the other hand, he thought she should be angry, but she was not.

"No, instead of getting angry, I should censor myself. I'm still too weak."

Alyssa was not only not angry, but also had such an awareness, which made Leon even more surprised.

Looking at Leon staring at her, Alyssa said, "Honey, thank you. If it weren't for you, I'm sure I wouldn't have escaped so easily. Will I affect your plan?"

"No."

"Why?"

He really couldn't bear Alyssa to be so nervous. Moreover, hearing Alyssa call him honey just now, he felt his heart surge up.

He then carefully analyzed it to Alyssa, "As you said, Hassan has probably gotten a hold of Derick's situation. He probably still has some of his secrets, so Derick is likely desperate to deal with Hassan right now!"

Alyssa thought for a moment and then nodded. She thought Leon had a good point.

In that case, she had nothing to worry about. She lay down.

Leon hurriedly stopped her.

Alyssa, however, simply relaxed, lay back at ease, and closed her eyes.

Leon looked at Alyssa and then at his empty hands.

He couldn't help but smile. This girl was nothing like he thought she would be. Before he could get close to her, he heard Alyssa's voice, "It's okay. Then I'll take a nap. I'm really painful and tired."

She felt like she was going to die from the pain. Previously, she just tried her best to hang on. She felt like her bones all over her body were about to fall apart.

Looking at Alyssa's face, Leon twitched the corners of his mouth, "Then you just sleep!"

He stood up to leave, but Alyssa pulled him back.

He immediately stood still, "What's up?"

"Where are you going?"

"After this incident, my plans have changed a bit. I need to go back and talk to grandpa."

Alyssa was immediately in high spirits, "Then can you take me home too? I don't want to be here alone. Besides, I'm fine. I don't hurt at all."

She didn't want to be left here alone. The smell of disinfectant was everywhere here. She disliked it.

Besides, she had just escaped and was still a bit scared of this strange space. She just wanted to go back to her familiar place to rest now.

Hearing her words, Leon knew that Alyssa was really scared. She was a girl after all. What happened before couldn't have no effect on her.

Her whole body was covered with wounds. He also did not feel comfortable leaving her here alone.

So, he simply took her home.

Half an hour later.

Alyssa lay on her big bed.

It was better to be home. After all those things, Alyssa felt safer and safer with Leon. The air conditioning in the room was set a little higher and she felt warm all over.

She closed her eyes for a moment and fell asleep.

She felt very comfortable. Suddenly, she opened her eyes and found that it was dark around her and no one was there. She was a little scared.

Suddenly, there was a pair of hands pulling her out of the darkness. Before she could react, she was hit hard by those hands on the ground.

She fought back desperately at first. But after a while, she ran out of strength.

She felt pain all over her body. She wanted to run back, and when she turned around she saw that the villa across the street was actually the Grahams' villa. She saw her home and hurriedly ran in the direction of her home.
