

Triplets on SM 271

Chapter 271

11 wished I could see my niece and nephews... ) Brycen replied. After reading the message, Molly could not help but smile, 'He's such a big baby.'

Brycen was holding his cellphone, but he received no response from Molly. 'It appears that my request has been denied...' thought Brycen.

Brycen was depressed and unhappy. After a half-hour, he noticed the triplets unexpectedly entering the ward.

The triplets were extremely well-mannered. They trailed Molly and peered inside with caution. They wanted to go in but were afraid of what had happened the last time they were there.

It hurts Brycen to see them in that state. He opened his arms to greet the triplets and exclaimed joyfully, "Come on, Alex, Ben, and Claudia! Let me give you a big hug!"

Molly put on a serene expression. She realized Nathan was there after pushing the door open.

She didn't want to ruin her mood, so she turned a blind eye and brought the triplets in.

Nathan had not expected Molly to arrive, and he looked at her with mixed feelings.

Brycen, on the other hand, was the most content. He rubbed the triplets' heads and smiled as he hugged them one by one. He thought, 'They are my true family.'

The triplets had not seen Brycen in a long time, and they missed him terribly!

Ben smiled as he leaned next to Brycen and said, "Uncle Brycen, Great Grandpa showed us your picture comment! We missed you as well!" Claudia shook Brycen's large hand. "Claudia missed you too, Uncle Brycen!" she said softly, catching Brycen's attention. With a serious expression, Claudia blinked. She was afraid Brycen would not believe her. Alex gave a thoughtful nod before saying, "Well, we all miss Uncle Brycen dearly and are hoping for a speedy recovery for you. If we have time in the future, we will come to see you more often with Mommy."

When the triplets greeted him softly and lovingly, Brycen's heart warmed. He smiled and stroked the little faces of the triplets.

This was an inexplicably unpleasant scene for Nathan. In a biological sense, he was also the triplets' uncle. He was well aware, however, that he was not qualified to say that, so he could only envy Brycen.

Molly was annoyed and said, "Can't you behave better? Do you want your legs to recover or not?"

'Brycen was older than me, but when he saw the triplets, he acted like a child. He's moving so quickly; did he expect me to save him if his leg broke?' Molly pondered. Molly grumbled quietly in her heart, but she was not being calculated.

Brycen responded quickly after Molly reprimanded him, "Of course, I want my legs to heal. It's just that I don't want to keep my adorable nephews and niece waiting."

When they heard it, the triplets covered their mouths and sneered. They thought, "Seems like Uncle Brycen missed us a lot. We should pay him more visits in the future!"

Molly was utterly speechless. She pondered. 'Speaking of which, his current condition appears to be improving.'

Molly thought, 'It's been a while since the plaster was wrapped around Brycen's legs, as she looked at his body. 'I believe it is time to perform the second surgery on him. The nerve necrosis could then be treated and recovered from.'

Molly was deep in thought when she became aware of a line of gaze coming from her back on the left. She could not help but frown and feel uneasy. "What do you want?" she asked coldly, looking at the source of the gaze.

When Brycen saw this, he straightened his neck and spoke to Nathan. "Nathan, don't overstep the sense of propriety," he said, his tone no longer gentle with the triplets.

Chapter 272

Brycen's gaze was stern, and he did not want Nathan to bring up what had happened earlier, let alone embarrass Molly.

The triplets immediately quieted down and looked them in the eyes.

Molly was extremely sensitive. She noticed something odd and asked, "What?" in a deep voice, "These two are hiding something from me, which must be related to me.' Molly pondered.

When Molly turned to face Nathan, he inquired, "Why did you keep your profession as a doctor hidden?"

'Brycen May!'

Brycen's name was mentally yelled out by Molly as her face turned cold and her mouth corner straightened. She met Brycen's gaze with cold eyes. Brycen immediately shook his head to prove his innocence and explained, "I didn't say anything, not even a single word about it. He guessed it on his own."

Brycen was nervous, and he quickly came up with an answer. He was concerned that he would upset Molly. When he finally got his chance to get along with the triplets, he didn't want their relationship to be broken again. Brycen did not lie about it, according to Molly. She collected herself, turned around, and replied dismissively, "That's my business. I don't see how it has anything to do with you."

Molly did not believe Nathan or the entire May family could interfere with her. "Also, what if you knew about my profession?" she continued. "Don't count on me to save Lara!"

Nathan was well aware that Molly harbored prejudices. When he heard such a direct rejection, he felt a little uneasy. "But you are a doctor who treats illnesses and saves lives; can't you help her?" he frowned. "In any case, remember that it is your duty and ethical obligation as a doctor."

Molly became even more unhappy and angry due to Nathan's words. "The May family still has the face to emotionally blackmailing me," she thought. "Over the years, I have endured numerous scolding and reprimand from them. Where was he then, and why didn't he stand up for me as he did now?" Molly sighed and tried to keep her anger at bay. "Yes, it is my duty and ethical obligation to do so. But I'm only responsible for a few people, and I'll save them no matter what." Molly stated.

Molly came to a halt and looked Nathan in the eyes as if she was afraid he would think she was joking. "Some people are simply not worth my time!" she exclaimed emphatically.

Nathan was initially surprised by Molly's ruthlessness, so he became enraged and exclaimed, "Regardless, she gave birth to you!"

Molly chuckled. She looked at Nathan with contempt, her eyebrow raised as if she was deliberately provoking him. "So what?" she asked, pausing. "Am I supposed to be grateful to her and thank her for giving me life? Giving birth to me but not raising me is the same as abandoning me. Besides, didn't Lara say that the Mays considered me an outsider? Diana is her precious daughter, and now she accuses me of being ungrateful?"

Molly said these words flatly as if she didn't care. Her words cut Nathan's last hope like knives. "Even if I want to be grateful, that should only apply to my adoptive parents, not Lara," she went on. "I have absolutely no relationship with that woman."

With no words to express, Nathan had lost all his face. He had no rights, no position, and no reason to ask Molly for help in saving his mother. The triplets gripped Brycen tightly. They did not dare to sound, and their breathing was very slow. Such a scene should not be disturbed. The triplets kept a wary eye on Nathan, fearful that the Mays' eldest son would hurt their mother.

Chapter 273

A figure stood outside the door, hands and shoulders shaking uncontrollably. Everything Nathan and Molly said was audible to her.

Diana was that person. Her eyes shrank suddenly, and she was both shocked and enraged. She clutched her left wrist with her right hand, desperately trying not to let it tremble. Her right hand scarred a circle of red marks on her fair and delicate skin. She clearly did not treat herself lightly.

"How could Molly be Dr. Joye?! Isn't she just a country bumpkin? She didn't even have a good education back then. She'd only been out of the country for a few years, so she couldn't have obtained a professional medical diploma from a reputable institution. How could it be here! Diana pondered.

Diana peered through the transparent partition at Molly. Molly's stunning lace could be seen from behind her slender and fair figure. Diana realized that Molly was no longer the ugly duckling who had arrived in the city from the countryside years before.

For some reason, Diana thought, "Molly in the ward looked like the true daughter of the Mays. She was both elegant and generous. On the other hand, I was a phony dove's daughter living in a magpie's nest!

Diana was terrified by the sudden emergence of consciousness. She only took a step back with a hurried glance, wanting to turn around and leave. But she is not at peace!

Diana took a step back and stood outside the ward. She's already dazed. She was considering her options at the time. 'If Molly didn't care about the past and saved her mother, her mother would definitely change her opinion of Molly, and I would have no place in the May family anymore!

Diana became terrified. Her thoughts were racing Her eyes darkened abruptly. She lowered her head and stared at her toes, contemplating something

"I didn't want to completely cut myself off from the Mays, so I couldn't let Molly treat our mother! I need to make this a big deal.'

Molly had no idea what was going on outside the door. Diana gave Molly one last look before walking away quietly Nathan was so embarrassed by Molly in the room that he had nothing to say. He could no longer sit quietly and got up after a while. Nathan heard a sigh from inside the ward as soon as he left.

"Finally, he's leaving!" Brycen stated.

Nathan cursed Brycen in his heart before leaving

The triplets sighed, and they drew their mother aside for a seat. Alex massaged her legs, Ben sat on the patient's bed and pinched her shoulders, and Claudia was just being cute.

The triplets coaxed Molly together, "Mommy, don't be angry! He is a big fool. You need not care."

Brycen joined in on the enticement. "That's right, Molly! Nathan seemed reasonable initially, but I recently discovered he was stubborn and heartless. Let us not listen to him!"

Molly was not angry, but her heart was a little tired. She was correct the last time. 'I am definitely at odds with the Mays!'

Molly took the triplets home after staying for a while.

LT

There were a lot of uproars on the Internet and in the medical sector in the afternoon. Keywords like Molly, Joye, and the May family appeared frequently. Someone revealed Dr. Joye's secret identity to those in the doctor's close circle. Some claim to have heard Dr. Joye's conversion outside the city's VIP Ward 103.

Ward 103 was Brycen's, and Molly's identity was revealed entirely to the public.

Suddenly, there was a lot of debate on the Internet, and the comments came in like a flood. The legendary and mysterious Dr. Joye turned out to be the May family's daughter or the woman well-known throughout Northfolk for her scandal and embarrassment.

Chapter 274

Moth's mentity can no longer be kept hidden Tal, o que, hent the news at the same time. She was taken aback and could not believe it.' It can't im How could that wretch possibly be Dr. Joye?!" "Molly was just a wretch who wanted to cling to the wealthy and had a vicious mind,' Lara thought. 'How did she be the doctor who could help me!! Lara tightly squeezed the hospital bed frame with her hand. She stared at one corner, unable to believe Molly was a famous doctor! Diana sat back and quietly observed Lara. Diana was a little worried when she saw Lara's disbelief.

'I must never let mother abandon me, and I must never be separated from the Mays.' Diana pondered. Her eyes grew cold as if the status of the May family's daughter had already surpassed all others. Diana had succumbed to lust and become unscrupulous, failing to notice it. "Diana, guide me to Brycen's ward. I'd like to ask him in person if this is true!" Lara stated. Diana slicked her lashes slightly before putting on her usual innocent expression in front of Lara and responding obediently, "Okay."

Brycen noticed Diana and Lara and deduced their intentions. 'I didn't expect this matter to leak so thoroughly,' he thought. 'Most importantly, it came from my ward...'

Before he could think about it, Brycen heard his mother's question and had to admit, "It's true.

Diana held Lara and pretended to exhale a sigh of relief. Diana smiled, surprised, and said happily, "That's fantastic news, Mom. You are going to be saved." Lara's heart pounded as she heard Brycen's response and felt extremely uneasy. As if she had been forced to accept something she did not want to accept.

Lara snorted icily. "If Molly was willing to save me, she would have done so long ago. Why wait any longer? She might even hide her identity forever if it weren't for the sudden exposure of her identity now. That wretch just wants to see me die!"

Brycen did not even bother looking at Diana. He stated coldly, "Don't talk nonsense, Mom. Molly isn't the type of person who would do something like that. If it weren't for her, my legs would have been maimed. I believe you should consider why Molly treated you so poorly. Also, please refrain from morally blackmailing Molly in this manner."

'I wasn't close to Molly when I returned to Northfolk, but why would she treat my condition?' It's simply because she was kind-hearted, but this act of kindness will never apply to someone who hurts her, let alone someone who is her mother.'

Brycen thought that in his heart, but Lara perceived him as defending Molly and lectured her. Lara's eyes were filled with rage as she locked her gaze on Brycen.

Then Lara closed her eyes subconsciously as she felt a sharp pain in her heart. Her face became painful, and she gasped for air. Fortunately, Diana continued to support her, and she did not collapse.

"You shouldn't talk to our mother like that, Brycen. She's not in good shape now and shouldn't be upset."

Diana persuaded quickly. She gave Brycen a sidelong glance before turning to face Lara. Diana gently consoled Lara, saying, "It's all right, Mom. I'm here. There is nothing to worry about." When he saw that, Brycen converged and looked at her with concern.

Molly had finished preparing dinner and was about to ask the triplets downstairs for dinner when she received a phone call from Caitlyn.

Caitlyn told Molly everything she found on the Internet, what she heard from the hospital, and about Molly's identity being revealed over the phone.

Chapter 275

Molly's face was not looking good. 'How could it be so coincidental?' she wondered. 'Nathan didn't say much at the time, and we were all in the VIP ward. Could it be that the nurse overheard our conversations and then disseminated them?'

Molly did not believe any of it, and she was not particularly interested in the subject.

"You don't need to be concerned about anything; simply act as if you don't know. I have to leave; we'll talk again soon." Caitlyn explained. 'Since it's out of the light, let it be. It will be revealed in the future, if not now.' Molly pondered.

"Are you okay?" Sean was by Molly's side, and when he noticed her sad expression after she hung up the phone, he asked.

"On the hospital's intranet, someone revealed my identity as Dr. Joye. It is not a major issue." Molly responded quickly and succinctly. 'Because I know that once this secret is revealed, the May family will no longer be able to sit still.'

Molly had a feeling it was true. Walter did indeed call shortly after dinner.

Molly picked up the phone but remained silent. Walter remained silent for a time as well. He appears to recognize Molly as the person who answered the phone. "I heard you're Dr. Joye," Walter stated. The tone of his statement was not that of a question. Molly remained silent as Walter continued, "Come to the hospital now and arrange the operation for your mother." Walter's tone was commanding, and he was not polite at all. Molly's face turned cold at that moment. "Is Lara going to apologize to me?" she inquired of Walter.

When Walter learned that Molly wanted Lara to apologize to her at that time, he became enraged.

"Even if you don't consider her your mother, she is. She's already sick, and you expect her to apologize to you? Is this what you want as a daughter and a doctor?" Walter asked. Molly's grip on the phone tightened slightly, and she gave a cold smile when she heard Walter raise his tone.

"What's the big deal? Who do you think you are, expecting me to come and go whenever you want? Just because she's a patient and doesn't have to apologize?" Molly inquired.

If Molly had been sympathetic to the May family and Lara's situation the day before, all of her feelings would vanish after answering Walter's call.

"Don't call me again if it's not about apologizing to me," Molly stated. She hung up the phone without hesitation, ignoring Walter's subsequent clamor.

When he realized the phone had been disconnected, Walter became enraged.

"What a rebellious young lady!" Walter gripped his phone, shaking with rage, and finally cursed.

Both Lara and Diana were by his side. When he made the call earlier, Walter did not walk away from the two, so everyone overheard his conversation with Molly.

“Fortunately, I didn’t bring this ungrateful child back to raise her in the first place,” Lara sneered, placing her hand on her chest.

‘In such a time as this, that wretched Molly can still say such things. Even Brycen defended the wretch. What moral extortion? Does a daughter who doesn’t want her mother still have morals?’ Lara pondered. Diana stood by Lara’s side, listening to her scolding, and secretly feeling relieved. ‘All of my hard work has been rewarded, and my goal has been met. However, it is insufficient! Isn’t Molly a well-known doctor?’

‘Because she’s so proud of her identity, I’m going to ruin her reputation!’

‘It’s not over yet. The more commotion there is, the better! Exactly like Molly was kicked out of the May family back then!’<

Chapter 276

Molly did not want to be harassed by the May family on the phone any longer, so she simply hung up. She also disconnected the phone line at home.

The triplets were more important to her than herself. During her time abroad, she was alone for many days and nights. Every time she thought she could not take it anymore and wanted to give up, the triplets gave her the strength to keep going. Molly did not mind how Lara treated her. Still, she could not forgive her for attacking her children, pointing at them, and scolding them for being illegitimate without a father.

Such words could not be tolerated by Molly. The triplets had been noticing Molly’s depression all day. They did not dare to make too much noise because they knew their mother was upset. So the three of them had a private discussion about how to make their mother feel better.

“Why don’t we go to the movies with Mommy?” Ben suggested, and Alex gave him a disgusted look.

“Silly boy. Uncle Sean, like us, has our own theater. We can watch a movie whenever we want.” While holding his tablet and surfing the Internet, Alex said to Ben.

There were only a few places they could go if they wanted to go out and have fun. Alex’s fingers abruptly came to a halt on the screen.

“I have it!” Alex was ecstatic. Ben and Claudia came over to take a look.

“We can go to a musical performance. A well-known foreign orchestra tour. When we were abroad, Mommy mentioned it! Let’s go to the concert together.” Alex’s eyes and hands were quick, and he quickly booked the tickets for the orchestra tour’s finale tonight.

“Should we ask Daddy to accompany us?” Claudia inquired. While she was worried about Molly, she was also thinking about Sean.

Ben tapped Claudia on the head and said, “Claudia, of course, we have to ask Daddy to accompany us. How will Daddy and Mommy have a date if Daddy doesn’t go?” Claudia suddenly realized what she was saying and blurted out, "Then I'm going to call Daddy! Let's go, you two go tell Molly about it!" Claudia is the most active when it comes to matching up Sean and Molly.

Sean accepted Claudia's invitation without hesitation. On the other hand, Molly did not need Alex or Ben to persuade her.

Molly had purchased tickets for this concert abroad twice. One was canceled due to internal concert issues, and the other due to her work. As a result, she missed the concert both times.

Molly became obsessed with the orchestra's performance as a result of this. She agreed without hesitation when the triplets expressed an interest in attending the concert.

"We've also invited Uncle Sean to join us because he's not working today, Mommy. Is that okay with you?" Ben inquired cautiously of Molly.

Molly knew the triplets adored Sean, so she knew what they were thinking.

"If Uncle Sean is fine with it, I am, too."

Alex and Ben were relieved and quietly gave each other thumbs up in secret. "Done!"

The concert was held in the gymnasium of a downtown university. There were many people there because it was the concert's finale. Being at a concert was not like watching a movie. Food is not permitted to be brought in. The triplets followed Molly and Sean into the hall, showing their tickets. As the lights went out, the actors on stage were especially striking. The sound of musical instruments drew people's emotions into the atmosphere. The music flowed beautifully, and everyone was utterly immersed in it.

The performance lasted one hour. As the actors bowed at the end, thunderous applause rang out in the hall, dispelling Molly's bad mood. She joined the audience in applauding the performers.

Chapter 277

Molly and others left with the rest of the audience after the concert. It was unexpectedly raining outside the venue. They did not notice it was raining until they went outside. Many of them were stranded without umbrellas.

"There are umbrellas in the car, Ms. May. You'll all have to wait a while. I'll go get the umbrellas from the car, and I'll bother you to look after my boss for a while." Tony said to Molly as the heavy rain would not stop for a while. "Sure, we'll be here waiting for you." Molly has just taken over Tony's position and is holding onto Sean's wheelchair. Tony then turned around and dashed to the car. It was pouring outside, and the wind was howling. Molly could not help but shudder and felt a little chilly.

Sean could not stop laughing. "Do you feel better now?" he inquired.

Sean certainly noticed what the triplets did.

"I'm feeling a lot better now," Molly said, smiling at Sean. "I apologize for bothering you and accompanying us here on purpose." Molly was referring to Sean being invited to the concert by the children.

However, Sean stated, "It's excellent. My body and mind feel revitalized after listening to this concert. I had no idea how dull and boring my life had been in the past. My life has been greatly enhanced and relaxed due to my time with the triplets."

Molly could not stop laughing when she heard Sean compliment her triplets. "My triplets sure know how to give others headaches."

Molly, as a mother, was frequently envious of the triplets when they harassed Sean.

Molly's words were immediately corrected by the triplets.

"That's not correct, Mommy. We are obviously caring and sensible!" The triplets stated. They tried to emphasize that they were not a bother to them.

After all, the triplets worked hard to match Sean and Molly. It hurts their feelings because they are not recognized for their efforts.

"Yes, yes, yes. You three have the kindest hearts and are all apples in my eyes!" Molly stated.

Molly realized that the triplets had brought her to this concert on purpose. She knelt down and kissed the triplets' cheeks.

They were talking and laughing as usual, not noticing someone not far away staring at them. That person was photographing them with a camera.

Tony returned soon after. He took a few umbrellas and handed them to Molly, and the two of them walked away while holding the umbrellas. On the other hand, the person who took the photos secretly examined the product in his hand. He smiled, then sent the photos to someone and made a phone call.

"Ms. May, I managed to take a few photographs. What are your thoughts on them?"

Diana's voice could be heard on the phone. She must have seen the photos because her voice was pleasant.

"Excellent work. Continue to follow her. I'll send you the payment for the photos. The price is unimportant as long as you can get what I want." Diana told the paparazzo she had contacted. They then hung up the phone with satisfaction. The paparazzo became energized when he saw the payment notification on his phone. He looked in the direction of Molly, and the others had gone and quickly followed. Molly did not notice anything wrong when she was about to get in the car. Only Sean looked back as he was about to get into the car.

"What are you looking at?" Molly inquired. She came over to assist him with his wheelchair and looked in the same direction Sean had just looked, but she saw nothing.

"There's nothing to it; let's get in the car," said Sean after averting his gaze from Molly.

Chapter 278

That was a kind of vigilance that had been practiced for a long time. Tony felt as though a reminder came from Sean's recent glance. Tony discreetly increased the car's speed once it reached the main road.

Molly was distracted by Claudia in her arms and did not notice anything. Alex and Ben, who were by her side, sensed something was wrong. They did not play as usual but instead cast a subtle glance at Sean. They were perplexed in their hearts, but they made no sound.

Sean gave Tony, who was in front of him, a look, which Tony quickly recognized. He drove onto a different road.

After that, Sean kept looking in the rearview mirror until he noticed the car following them closely and slowly. He finally made up his mind.

Sean lowered his head and quickly pressed his fingers on the phone screen as the light on the screen illuminated...

The car soon drove smoothly into Terahis Grove. Molly and the others exited the vehicle.

“Bring your umbrella; it’s still raining out there,” Sean told Molly.

The rain was not as heavy on Terahis Grove’s side as it was outside the concert hall. Molly remembered having a fever the next day after getting drenched the last time, so she did not dare to be careless.

“All right, I’ll return it to you tomorrow,” Molly stated. She got the triplets out of the car and took the umbrellas home.

As they watched them enter the house, Sean and Tony were the only ones left in the car. They did not say anything, as if they were waiting for something.

After a while, Tony’s phone rang, and he said a few words before turning to report to Sean. “Boss, we caught him.”

Sean narrowed his eyes, darkened his face, and said to Tony, “Bring him here.”

‘He had a lot of guts. I’d like to see who in Northfolk dared to follow me.’ Sean pondered.

All of the lights in the villa were turned on. Sean sat in the center of the living room, his face glum and his aura enraged. He turned to face the person being dragged in by the two black suited bodyguards.

The paparazzo was the one who secretly photographed Sean and Molly outside the concert venue.

The paparazzo was brought in blindfolded, and the bodyguards did not treat him politely. When they arrived, the bodyguards threw the person in front of Sean with great force.

The paparazzo’s hands were not restrained. He hurriedly got up after being thrown to the ground and removed the blindfold. He was about to curse when he noticed Sean sitting on the couch. His voice had reached his throat, but he could not make a sound. He took a few anxious steps back, and his jellied legs fell to the ground.

“Who are you, and why are you following me?” Sean inquired. His voice is cold and has a lot of momentum, which scares the reporter.

“My boss has a question for you. Are you deal?” Tony could not help but yell when he noticed the paparazzo remained silent.

The paparazzo had never been in a situation like this before. The two bodyguards were standing next to Sean and Tony, which shocked the paparazzo.

"I'm only a paparazzo. I wasn't following you. I'm simply doing what I'm paid to do. It isn't my fault. I wasn't following you. Ms. May had asked me to photograph that woman. I was trailing her. I'm completely clueless. I don't know anything..." The paparazzo was terrified.

Naturally, the paparazzo recognized the man in front of him. He was one of the people he photographed tonight. His heart was pounding in his chest like a drum.

'I was duped, and this was not someone I should have provoked!'

"If you don't believe me, take a look. My camera is here."<

Chapter 279

The paparazzo trembled and handed over his precious camera. Tony grabbed the camera and handed it to Sean, but his gaze was fixed on the paparazzo on the ground Sean took the camera to inspect it. Sean's own figure was also inside, as the paparazzo stated. Sean's expression darkened suddenly. Tony was well aware that his boss despises being photographed the most. Tony asked the paparazzo on the ground, "What are those photos for?" "I'm not sure. I'm only doing it for the money. I'm completely clueless." The paparazzo shook his head. He provides no helpful information. "Do you know who you were following? You've probably heard of the Andersons of the Northfolk. If you want to live longer and avoid suffering, I recommend that you hurry up and tell the truth." Tony stated. He looked at the wicked man on the ground as if he were looking at a corpse. His eyes were dark and frightening. He appeared to be signaling the bodyguards with his gaze.

"Sir, please forgive me! I'm completely clueless. I had no idea you were the Andersons' young master. I won't dare to photograph you if I know, even if you give me courage. Sir, please. Please accept my apologies." The paparazzo was so terrified that he knelt on the ground.

The paparazzo had never met Sean, but he had heard of him. The head of the Andersons was unscrupulous and powerful. It is not an exaggeration to say that the Andersons had a significant influence throughout the country in Northfolk

At this point, the paparazzo believed Diana had duped him.

"Please forgive me and give me another chance, sir. If you need anything, I can assist you in obtaining it from Ms. May. I will notify you as soon as I have any information!" The paparazzo trembled with fear and refused to look up at Sean again.

Sean remained silent. For a while, the air was deafeningly quiet. The paparazzo only heard his heartbeat and the sound of him sweating profusely. Sean was the only one who spoke up after a while.

"Allow him to go investigate. Send someone to trail him." Sean gave Tony the order.

"Understood," Tony replied to Sean. "You two take him away and follow him," Tony said to the two bodyguards in the living room.

The two bodyguards dragged the paparazzo away because he could not stand up with his jellied legs.

Sean's rage remained even after the paparazzo had left.

'It would be fine if this person came for me tonight, but his target was Molly.' Sean pondered. The anger in his heart seemed to be burning even hotter.

"I'm sure Diana May is doing it, Boss. She is planning something. She must be doing something with the photographs she has taken. Ms. May's mother, on the other hand, was recently discovered to be ill, and Ms. May was identified as Dr. Joye. If the words spread out, the entire world will undoubtedly chastise Ms. May. This could be disastrous for her."

Following that, Tony added, "Diana May was not a pleasant person to deal with. She can persuade the May family's two elders to deny their daughter in front of the May family. It is clear that she has a talent for enchanting others." "I never intended to criticize Diana May in front of my boss. Diana is simply too cunning, and people must be cautious around her.'

'It would have been fine if Boss hadn't dated Ms. May in the future. But if he was going to be with Ms. May, Diana's presence would be a ticking time bomb. It may suddenly explode at some point when everyone is off guard.'

Chapter 280

Sean's eyes were cold after a while of silence as he quietly opened his mouth and asked, "So, you're saying: Diana is going to harm Ms. May's reputation?"

Sean could tell Molly was in a desperate situation of ruin and disrepute because of the apparent malicious targeting Sean's face became uglier. Tony realized his boss was furlous. "This is just my guess," he said. Tony could not be sure, but if the paparazzo said it was true, it had to be.

Sean's eyes became colder as if they had been transformed by a thin layer of ice. His pupils were clear and transparent, but he had a deep gaze. A unique kind of beauty. "Whether it's speculation or not, I don't want this to happen at all," he said. Tony nodded, clearly understanding. "Don't be worried, boss. I'll have someone keep an eye on it. If there is anything, I will stop it ahead of time."

Sean felt better because he trusted Tony to handle the situation personally. Perhaps Sean had not been seen in Northfolk in a while, so someone dared to bother him. "Tsk, these people are playing with fire.'

Molly had no idea about any of this. "It's getting late, hurry up and take a shower, then go to bed," she urged when she arrived home.

"Yes, Mommy," the triplets said obediently.

Alex observed his mother entering the bathroom to shower before proceeding upstairs. He stood on the second-floor balcony, looking out the window thoughtfully. He eventually noticed one of Sean's cars next door. He clearly saw a person in the car's back seat. The bodyguard appears to have pressed him against the seat and escorted him away.

Alex's gaze was drawn to the car, and he was correct. On the way back, he felt something was wrong, but he could not pinpoint it. 'If I can figure it out, then Daddy should definitely notice it,' he reasoned.' So, if something really happened, Daddy would definitely act accordingly based on his character.'

Alex was alerted and considered staring from the balcony. Only his family was going out tonight. He would not let whoever was targeting one of them succeed.

Alex turned on his computer as soon as he noticed the strange man being escorted away. He turned on the surveillance at the front door and screenshotted the man in the back seat from the video. He then uploaded the image to the website he had created and began searching

'If that man was being escorted away, he's not Daddy's friend or someone he knew,' Alex stood there patiently, his face solemn.

After a while, a small window appeared on the website, and the content displayed was all about the man. Alex opened the browser and discovered that the man was a paparazzo.

Ben entered the room and noticed Alex staring nervously at the screen. Ben was intrigued and leaned over to Alex, asking, "What's the matter, Alex?" Alex did not keep anything from Ben and told him everything. Alex even showed Ben the information he had discovered.

Ben frowned as he stared at the computer and said, "It's no surprise that I didn't feel well when we returned. Is this paparazzo following us? What exactly does he want?"

Ben suddenly remembered having the same thought as Alex in the car on the way back. He had forgotten about it when he got home because nothing had happened on the way. Ben remembered it when Alex mentioned it.

"I'm not certain. However, Mommy's identity was revealed today, and this man is also likely to pursue Mommy. We must remain vigilant." Alex informed Ben. 'This paparazzo may also be after Mommy due to her identity being revealed. He wanted to seize the opportunity to garner attention, so he secretly followed her to take some photos.'
