

The Three Little Guardian Angels Chapter 2004

Chapter 2004 Freyja pressed her lips tightly and did not say anything.

In fact, it had nothing to do with the things that transpired today.

Colton squatted in front of her and pressed his cheek on her stomach. As he listened to the movement inside, he chuckled. "Can a one-month-old embryo move around?"

Freyja was stunned. This was the first time she saw this side of Colton. He was very careful, and she lowered her head to look at him. Then, she said gently, "It's only been a month or so. Our baby can't move yet."

Colton raised his head to look at her. "Have you felt nauseous recently?"

Freyja shook her head. "Not anymore after taking the medicine"

He caressed her stomach gently and said, "Let's go get a marriage certificate too, Freyja."

Freyja was stunned. She thought her ears had failed her as she asked, "What did you say!?"

He looked at her fixedly and said, emphasizing every word that spilled out of his lips, "I said, let's go get a marriage certificate"

Freyja did not expect it to come so soon, and she was not mentally prepared for it

Looking at her dumbfounded face", Colton rose to his feet and sat beside her He carried her to his leg and said, "Don't tell me that you only want to get the marriage certificate after our kids have grown up. After all, I am responsible for this."

After a long while, she opened her mouth and asked, "Is it only because of responsibility?"

Colton looked at her with confusion written all over his face,

Freyja took a deep breath and said, "Your attitude toward me changed because of the baby, right? If I hadn't been pregnant, would you have —"

"Freyja Pruitt," he called her by her full name displeasingly. "What are you talking about? Even without the baby, I'd still marry you.

"Don't always think of me in a bad way. I admit that I was not considerate enough in the past and always made you misunderstand. If there is something you aren't satisfied with, I'll change. Is that not enough?"

Freyja looked at him in a daze, and she did not know why but she had the urge to cry.

She turned her around as she did not want Colton to see the tear in her eyes. "Actually, you don't have to do this..."

Colton took a deep breath and asked patiently, "What happened tonight?"

He had a feeling that she wanted to push him away. Biting her lips tightly, Freyja felt as if there was a thorn in her heart, and it hurt her badly with the slightest touch. "I think we shouldn't get the license now."

Colton frowned, and his face sank. "What do you mean?" When she refused to meet his gaze, he forcibly turned her face toward him. However, when he saw the tear in her eyes, he was stunned, and his anger abated.

He wiped the tear off the corner of her eyes and said, "Don't cry."

She was caught between tears and laughter as she said, "Stop that." Colton was tickled pink by her. "If I don't do this, people will say I bully you when they see you crying."

She couldn't stop her tears from falling out of her eyes. "You are bullying me-Umm!"

He planted a kiss on her lips, and at that moment, her heart leaped into a gallop. She wanted to claim him for herself, but she was afraid she would rely too much on him. Colton pried her teeth open and deepened the kiss. After a long while, she stopped crying, and he left her lips. He looked at her swollen red lips and asked, "Do you still want to cry now?"

She freed herself from his arms and lay back on the bed. Colton followed suit and hugged her from the back. He buried his head in her neck and said, his voice low and thick with emotion, "I've never seen you cry so much before."

Freyja turned around and rolled into his arms, but she did not say anything. As Colton hugged her and kissed her forehead, he looked toward the dark night through the window and fell deep in thought.

In the next few days, they signed Deedee up for psychological counseling therapy. At first, Deedee refused to cooperate, and she only would cooperate with the therapist in the presence of Freyja.

After the session was over, Freyja stayed in the room to keep Deedee company.

The therapists stopped in front of the study room and knocked on the door. After he received the permission, he entered the room. "Mr. Goldmann."

Chapter 2005 Colton put the document down and tapped on the desk. "How is she?"

The therapist replied. "According to my observations and tests in the past few days, she is indeed very sensitive. Perhaps it's due to her upbringing that she's introverted and has low self-esteem. She always feels lonely, so she likes to stick to the people she wants to be close to." Colton frowned and fell deep in thought. After a long while, he asked, "Can I ask you a question?"

"Sure," replied the therapist.

"Would a 4-year-old kid harm the one who loves her? Like causing her to have a miscarriage?"

Even if Deedee had misunderstood them after overhearing their conversation that night, even if she was upset with them, why would she push Freyja's stomach?

He began to grow wary of Deedee after witnessing what she did that day.

He did not show it out that time because he did not want to put Freyja in a difficult position. After all, Freyja was the one who raised Deedee since she was born, and that was also the reason Deedee was so attached to Freyja.

She subconsciously saw Freyja as a mother figure to her. However, if a 4-year-old girl wanted to harm Freyja, he would send her away no matter what.

The therapist pondered for a while and said, "Actually, I've come across a similar case as well.

"It was a 5-year-old child. He pushed his mother down the stairs so that the unborn baby in his mother's womb wouldn't share or take away his parents' love from him."

Colton narrowed his eyes. "Then, is her case similar to that 5-year-old kid?"

"Yes," replied the therapist. "But the difference is that the 5-year-old boy had all the love from his parents ever since he was born, so he subconsciously didn't want anyone to take his parents away from him. Some kids are fragile. They are afraid their parents won't love them anymore after having a second kid. If the parents fail to remedy the situation in time, tragedy will happen.

"Mr. Goldmann, I think this is what is happening to Ms. Deedee now. She's been raised by Ms. Pruitt since she was born, so she's very attached to her. However, in her subconscious, she knows that Ms. Pruitt isn't her mother, no matter how close she's to her. The more she yearns for love, the more she's afraid of losing it.

"Besides, kids don't know how to differentiate right from wrong since they're still young. If left unchecked, it indeed will cause serious consequences."

Colton leaned against the chair and asked, "Then what should I do?"

If he sent Deedee away now, the latter might resent Freyja. Besides, he was certain that wouldn't agree to it either

The therapist said, "You can get some kids to make friends with her to divert her attention. If necessary, you can also talk to her so that she can slowly let go of her fears and shed away her defenses."

Colton fell silent.

When the therapist left the study room, he bumped into Freyja in the corridor. He nodded at her and then continued to walk away.

Freyja stopped in front of the study. When she saw that Colton was massaging his temples with a stern look on his face, she pressed her lips tightly.

Colton had not been to the company the past few days and had signed Deedee up for psychological counseling therapy. Even though he did not like what Deedee had done, he did not punish her or anything.

Freyja knew that it was because of her that Colton did not punish or insist on sending Deedee away.

The Three Little Guardian Angels Chapter 2005

Chapter 2005 Colton put the document down and tapped on the desk. "How is she?"

The therapist replied. "According to my observations and tests in the past few days, she is indeed very sensitive. Perhaps it's due to her upbringing that she's introverted and has low self-esteem. She always feels lonely, so she likes to stick to the people she wants to be close to." Colton frowned and fell deep in thought. After a long while, he asked, "Can I ask you a question?"

"Sure," replied the therapist.

"Would a 4-year-old kid harm the one who loves her? Like causing her to have a miscarriage?"

Even if Deedee had misunderstood them after overhearing their conversation that night, even if she was upset with them, why would she push Freyja's stomach?

He began to grow wary of Deedee after witnessing what she did that day.

He did not show it out that time because he did not want to put Freyja in a difficult position. After all, Freyja was the one who raised Deedee since she was born, and that was also the reason Deedee was so attached to Freyja.

She subconsciously saw Freyja as a mother figure to her. However, if a 4-year-old girl wanted to harm Freyja, he would send her away no matter what.

The therapist pondered for a while and said, "Actually, I've come across a similar case as well.

"It was a 5-year-old child. He pushed his mother down the stairs so that the unborn baby in his mother's womb wouldn't share or take away his parents' love from him."

Colton narrowed his eyes. "Then, is her case similar to that 5-year-old kid?"

"Yes," replied the therapist. "But the difference is that the 5-year-old boy had all the love from his parents ever since he was born, so he subconsciously didn't want anyone to take his parents away from him. Some kids are fragile. They are afraid their parents won't love them anymore after having a second kid. If the parents fail to remedy the situation in time, tragedy will happen.

"Mr. Goldmann, I think this is what is happening to Ms. Deedee now. She's been raised by Ms. Pruitt since she was born, so she's very attached to her. However, in her subconscious, she knows that Ms. Pruitt isn't her mother, no matter how close she's to her. The more she yearns for love, the more she's afraid of losing it.

"Besides, kids don't know how to differentiate right from wrong since they're still young. If left unchecked, it indeed will cause serious consequences."

Colton leaned against the chair and asked, "Then what should I do?"

If he sent Deedee away now, the latter might resent Freyja. Besides, he was certain that wouldn't agree to it either

The therapist said, "You can get some kids to make friends with her to divert her attention. If necessary, you can also talk to her so that she can slowly let go of her fears and shed away her defenses."

Colton fell silent.

When the therapist left the study room, he bumped into Freyja in the corridor. He nodded at her and then continued to walk away.

Freyja stopped in front of the study. When she saw that Colton was massaging his temples with a stern look on his face, she pressed her lips tightly.

Colton had not been to the company the past few days and had signed Deedee up for psychological counseling therapy. Even though he did not like what Deedee had done, he did not punish her or anything.

Freyja knew that it was because of her that Colton did not punish or insist on sending Deedee away.

The Three Little Guardian Angels Chapter 2006

Chapter 2006 If it were before, why would Colton have any concerns?

Deep down, Freyja's heart was filled with mixed feelings at this moment, and she could not tell them apart. On the one hand, it was Deedee who was very dependent and only wanted to stay with her. On the other hand, it was her child's father and the man she loved.

"Why are you standing at the door?" A voice pulled her back to reality

She exchanged gazes with Colton, hesitated for a bit, and then walked into the study.

"What did the therapist tell you?"

"He didn't say much." Colton put the documents away. Upon recalling something, he added, "I'll find some kids to come over to accompany her tomorrow. Although they're slightly older than she is, they should be able to mix well"

Freyja was astounded and seemed to have realized something

While she was in Yaramoor, apart from FTV.1, Deedee would only stay with the nanny. When it came to friends, she had only played with the nanny's granddaughter, but they did not keep in touch all day, every day. She used to think that Deedee did not like to mix with other children of the same age, but that was not true.

Deedee was an introvert and not good at being sociable, and she felt inferior. And because she had no friends to play with, she would only stick with the people who were close to her.

If she had friends to play with, maybe she would become more outgoing, cheerful, and confident.

The next day, Daisy's name made it onto Google Trends' hottest topic again. The title was "Kissing in the Car". The paparazzi revealed that the man's identity was Zephir Gosling, the eldest descendant of the Goslings, who had just returned from studying abroad. To make it worse, the fact that he had invested in the new project was exposed too.

As the public knew, the role of “Nancy Hanks” in Shannon Fallon’s latest project was set to be played by Daisie, and Zephir had just invested $30,000,000 into that project, so it was obvious that he had done so for Daisie.

Originally, the netizens thought that Zephir was the significant other that Daisie had announced to the public. However, they soon realized that Zephir was still abroad when Daisie made the announcement and had only returned to Zlokova recently. Thus, everyone who saw the news was furious now.

There were speculations that Daisie was cheating on her partner. There were also speculations that Daisie did not have a so-called fiance/husband, and the engagement was only a marketing stunt used to hype her career. And, of course, the reason Daisie did not disclose the other party’s identity was to wait for him to return to Zlokova.

James walked to Daisie’s studio with the newspaper and opened the door. “Did you just cheat on your fiance?”

Daisie was drinking water and was choked by his abrupt appearance. “Have you lost your mind? Who told you that I cheated!?”

He placed the newspaper in front of her. “This kiss in the car is trending now!”

Daisie snatched the newspaper. This photo looked even worse than that from the last news article.

Zephir had been helping her with the seatbelt in the car the other day, but because he had gotten a little too close, in addition to the angle where the photo was taken and misalignment, it really looked like they were kissing.

James crossed his arms, walked to the couch, and sat down. “What’s the use of your fiance being so good-looking? You still cheated on him at the end of the day.”

“Stop bullsh*tting here!” Daisie’s expression looked stern, and it did not sound like she was joking at all. “We’re just friends, and he was only fastening my seatbelt at the time out of courtesy. It’s not a kiss! Those paparazzi are just making crap up!”

James spread his hands. “Your friend fastened your seatbelt for you and got so close to you? Who would choose to believe in you if you were to respond to the photo with this explanation?”

“That’s because...”

Daisie stopped abruptly, not because she wanted to hide anything but because James’ words had caused her to fall deep into contemplation. ‘I was extremely startled when Zephir approached me all of a sudden, saying that he was helping me with the seatbelt. I’ve always felt that something was wrong, but I couldn’t pinpoint exactly what it was.

Her phone rang at this moment, and it was Colton calling.

She answered the call. "Colton." Colton's tone did not sound very friendly. "Has that b*stard, Zephir, returned to Zlokova?"

The Three Little Guardian Angels Chapter 2007

Chapter 2007 Daisy lowered her gaze. "Zephir has indeed returned to Zlokova." 'It's been such a long time, and Colton still dislikes Zephir to the bones. At first, he didn't like Nollace either, but it was only superficial. However, he really dislikes Zephir from the bottom of his heart.'

"Since you're now Nollace's wife, don't contact him that often. I've suppressed the news for you already."

Colton ended the call, rubbed the bridge of his nose, and summoned Leonardo into his office.

Leonardo walked into the office. "Mr. Goldmann, are you looking for me?"

He gave the order, "Send some men to keep an eye on Zephir Gosling, who recently returned to Zlokova. Don't give him the opportunity to take advantage of Daisy's relationship with Nollace."

'Compared to Nollace, I don't like Zephir even more After all, Nollace will at least sincerely think about the consequences of his actions and how they will affect Daisy's well being. But Zephir is different. Lisa was expelled from school back then because of his doing He even made it so that all the schools in Bassburgh refused to take Lisa in after the incident.

'At that time, Daisy didn't intend to get Lisa expelled from school but only cut ties with her. She wanted nothing to do with her anymore. However, the expulsion back then was obviously the cause of the series of incidents that followed.

It's because Zephir did this without them knowing that made Lisa mistakenly think that Daisy was the one who forced her into walking the plank. That's why she hated Daisy and even continued to go after Daisy when they were in Yaramoor.

'If she didn't get expelled from school, Lisa wouldn't have gotten to where she was at the end. To put it bluntly, Zephir caused Daisy to be framed and hurt by Lisa,

"This b*stard actually has the nerve to appear in front of Daisy again. In any case, since I already regard Nollace as my brother-in-law, I won't present him with any chance to get close to Daisy.

'I hope this scandal has nothing to do with Zephir.'

At the Seaview Villa...

Freyja looked out at the courtyard. She did not expect Colton to actually arrange for other children to come to the villa to accompany Deedee-the nanny's kid and some of his employees' children were all there. The oldest among the group was ten years old, and the youngest was also six years old.

The nanny walked to Freyja's side. "Young lady, there's no need to worry. You can see how much fun Deedee is having with the other kids. Deedee will be surrounded by more children when she goes to kindergarten and will not feel lonely anymore."

Speaking of kindergarten, Freyja pondered.

'Now that the nanny brought it up, Deedee should've started attending kindergarten at this age'

Suddenly, a cry came from the yard.

Freyja ran over with the nanny and the child's parents, only to see a 6-year-old girl covering her mouth and crying loudly. Her mother rushed forward to check her out and found out that her mouth was bleeding, "Beth, what happened to you?"

The nanny also asked the other children. "What just happened here?"

One of the older boys explained, "She was playing with Deedee and might have gotten flicked in her mouth with a rubber band."

Everyone's gaze was fixed on Deedee, who was standing behind the crowd.

Deedee still had a broken rubber band in her hand.

"Deedee..." Freyja wanted to ask her something, but Deedee turned around instantly and ran into the villa without saying a word. Freyja pursed her lips tightly. Whether it was Deedee's fault or not, she could only apologize to the child first

The originally harmonious atmosphere ended with the incident. Freyja walked upstairs, came to Deedee's room, and knocked on the door. "Deedee, I'm coming in."

Before waiting for Deedee to respond, Freyja pushed the door open and went in. Seeing that Deedee was squatting on the carpet beside the bed and not making a single sound, Freyja walked up to her calmly, squatted down in front of her, and asked gently, "Deedee, don't you like playing with the other boys and girls?" Deedee did not speak at all. Freyja stroked her hair. "Can you tell me why?"

The Three Little Guardian Angels Chapter 2008

Chapter 2008 If Deedee really flicked the girl on purpose with a rubber band, there must be a reason behind that.

Unexpectedly, Deedee blurted out, "I don't like her."

Freyja was stunned and frowned. "You flicked her with a rubber band only because you don't like her?"

Deedee refuted loudly, "She's the one who pushed me first!"

"Deedee!" Freyja yelled at her abruptly as the atmosphere got tense in the room.

When she subconsciously returned to her senses, Deedee had already run out of the room.

Freyja went downstairs after her. "Deedee, don't run

"

Her stomach cramped all of a sudden, causing her to stop at the entryway. The nanny immediately stepped forward to support her. "Young lady!"

Freyja gnashed her teeth, and beads of cold sweat rolled down her forehead and cheeks. "Go after Deedee..."

Colton received a call and hurried back to the villa,

After listening to what had happened from the nanny, he walked into the bedroom with a sullen expression,

Freyja was leaning against the head of the bed with a pillow behind her waist, and she looked as if she felt a lot more relieved after a short rest.

Colton stopped by the bedside. "I'll call the doctor to come and take a look at you."

He took out his cell phone, but Freyja stopped him. "I'm fine now. The most urgent task you should attend to now is locating Deedee..."

His expression dimmed in an instant, and she could not tell whether he was upset or straight up exasperated. "Deep down, neither you nor the baby is as important as Deedee, right?"

Freyja was dumbfounded, "That's not what I'm thinking."

"Then shut up and get a good rest. I've already sent a few bodyguards out to look for her." His voice sounded eerily calm and unconcerned.

Freyja could see that he was angry and was worried that he would take his anger on Deedee, so she suggested, "Just leave Deedee's matter to me. I'll resolve it by myself."

Colton looked at her with a faint hint of coldness beaming from his eyes. "You didn't agree to get officially married to me the other night because of Deedee, right?"

Freyja paused for a few seconds, lowered her gaze, and did not answer his question.

He took a deep breath and asserted indifferently, "I told you, I don't mind raising her, but if she doesn't stay put and insists on making a fuss all the time, I won't keep her here. I know you'll definitely compromise for her, but I don't hope that we'll get to the day when you have to choose between her and me."

After Colton said that, he turned around, walked to the door, and stopped. "You should rest first. I'll get someone out there to find Deedee."

Freyja lowered her gaze. 'Colton has already made the biggest concession to the matter, while I... I guess it's time for me to make a decision.'

Deedee had run out to the lively streets, High-rise buildings surrounded her, and people came and went, but she was unfamiliar with the city and did not know where to go, so she could only sit at a bus stop on the side of a road. Seeing that Freyja did not chase after her, she felt distressed. Feeling frightened and helpless, she regretted running out of the house and could only cry silently.

That was until a silhouette blocked the light in front of her eyes. She lifted her head, and her pupils constricted as she trembled from head to toe.

At the Seaview Villa, in the study...

Colton interlocked his fingers, rested his chin on the back of his hands, and stared at the computer screen. He inquired the nanny about today's matter, and the nanny told him that Deedee had flicked a girl's inouth with a rubber band.

After checking the courtyard surveillance video that was recorded earlier today, Colton found out that it was the girl who wanted to grab the doll in Deedee's hand. Deedee refused to let it go, so she pushed Deedee, and that was why Deedee flicked the girl's mouth with a rubber band.

The girl started crying immediately, but Deedee just stood still and did not try to defend herself.

The phone rang, and Colton answered it. The other party reported that they had not found Deedee.

He closed his eyes and rubbed the bridge of his nose. "Continue searching for her. She's not familiar with the city and shouldn't have gone too far." Meanwhile, in a motel...

Sandy took off her hat, pushed Deedee into the room, and locked the door. Deedee stood there, and her body trembled vigorously.

The Three Little Guardian Angels Chapter 2009

Chapter 2009

Sandy pulled the chair over, sat down, and sneered, "What's wrong? Has that aunt of yours started to despise you and kicked you out?"

She finally found out where Freyja was living and thought about how to find them without letting Colton find out about her plan. She did not expect to run into Deedee, who had run away from the villa.

Deedee shook her head timidly.

Sandy stood up, walked in front of her, and pinched her chin. "Deedee, if you listened to me back then, why would I hit you willingly? And if it weren't for Nollace Knowles, why would your parents leave you behind?"

"And that aunt of yours. Before we came here, I already told you that she'd ignore you as long as she got married to that man, but you just wouldn't believe in what I said."

Deedee burst into tears and sobbed softly. "A Aunty Freyja didn't say that she doesn't want to keep me anymore... It's just that Aunty Freyja now has a baby."

Sandy was astonished, then squinted her eyes immediately. "Is what you said true?"

"That b*tch actually got pregnant?"

She suddenly remembered Freyja's nauseated reaction the other day, and everything made sense to her now.

'It turns out that she's gotten pregnant even before getting married. She has paved her path into the Goldmanns with the child's help. This b*tch is indeed more capable than I am.'

She leaned over and stroked the top of Deedee's head with a meaningful smirk on her face." Then why not let me help you? After all, you should hope that Aunt Freyja will stay by your side forever, shouldn't you?"

All afternoon, the people that Colton sent out could not find Deedee.

Freyja was waiting anxiously. Although Colton had already sent someone out to look for her, she could not guarantee that Colton would really care about Deedee enough to put in his best effort.

'After all, he does have concerns and fears about what Deedee did.

'Deedee isn't related to him, but he's willing to take her in and even said that he'll raise her until she reaches adulthood. That might be the final concession that he'll make for Deedee.'

Freyja also knew that if she asked too much for Deedee, Colton would get even more disgusted by Deedee's existence,

After thinking about it, she went straight into the study. "Colton, can we talk?" Colton was flipping through some documents casually. He raised his head, stared at her, and asked, "What do you wish to talk about?"

"I know you're angry with Deedee. I'm also responsible for the incident that Deedee caused. I was the one who neglected my responsibility in educating her before this, but you have my word that if we manage to get Deedee back, I'll make it clear to her that I'll be raising her together with my father.

"Then I'll send her back to the Pruitt residence for a few years and then bring her back to my side and raise her for a few more years. When Deedee reaches adulthood and has her own thoughts about leaving us or staying with us, that's when we'll let her decide."

She could not have thought of a better way. The only way out of this matter was that she and her father would take turns raising Deedee for a few years. Deedee lacked care and love throughout her whole life, but she knew that her father would definitely treat Deedee well.

Colton was a little afraid about her well-being now that she was pregnant. Thus, if Freyja were to keep making Colton's life difficult, she was afraid that Colton would one day forbid Deedee from seeing her in this life.

She did owe it to Deedee, so she did not want things to go to that point. As such, that was the only way that she could come up with.

Colton looked at her and frowned slightly. "Do you think I'm so selfish that I won't take Deedee's safety into consideration?"

Freyja paused for a bit. "That's not what I mean!" "Freyja, I hope you'll have faith in me." He stood up and walked around the corner of the desk and toward her. "And now isn't the time to think about this matter. I promise you that I'll find out Deedee's whereabouts.

"I've also looked into the surveillance footage. The girl was indeed the one who pushed Deedee first, which was why Deedee fought back. Even though what she did is wrong, we can't just claim that this incident is all her fault. It's only natural for me not to get down to the details and put all the blame on her."