Lisa was sitting on the chair nearest to a spread out tabletop containing a map. A dozen pins of varying colors were stuck in it and a few scattered papers were on the table. Another glass was in front of her, but it was empty. Her eyes were focused on the map, and she was tapping her chin with a pen.

"Lisa?" Jeremy called out.

She looked up, and her eyes widened. She quickly started gathering the papers and the map. "Jeremy! What are you doing here? I thought you were in Ireland!"

"I was, but I got a call from Mr. Hamilton. He told me you were here, and that you were in trouble. I came as soon as I could. What's going on?"

"Mr. Hamilton shouldn't have called you. I told him I'd handle it myself."

"Handle what?" Jeremy asked, confused. "Lisa, what's going on? Why are you here?"

"I'm sorry, Jeremy, I can't tell you. I'm not supposed to tell anyone. Please, you have to leave. It's not safe for you here."

"Not safe? Lisa, I've been through so much already. I just need to know what's going on. Please, tell me. I'm your husband, I have a right to know."

"I'm trying to protect you," Lisa said, her voice starting to crack. "Please, Jeremy, just trust me. I'll explain everything when I can, but right now, you have to go."

"Lisa, you're scaring me. What's wrong? Is it your mom? Is she okay?"

"She's fine, she's fine," Lisa said, her voice trembling. "It's not about her. It's about me. I'm in danger, Jeremy. I'm trying to get out of it, but I need your help."

"Danger? What kind of danger? Lisa, you're not making any sense. Please, just tell me what's going on."

"I can't," Lisa said, her voice breaking. "I'm sorry, Jeremy, I'm so sorry. But you have to trust me. Please, just leave. I'll be in touch when I can."

Jeremy stood there, his mind racing. He didn't know what to do. He didn't know what was going on. But he knew one thing for sure: he wasn't going to leave Lisa alone in this mess.

"I'm not leaving you, Lisa," he said, his voice firm. "I'm your husband, and I'm not going anywhere. We're in this together, whether you like it or not."

Lisa looked up at him, her eyes filled with tears. "Jeremy, please. You don't understand. You're putting yourself in danger by staying here."

"I don't care," Jeremy said, his voice softening. "I'm not leaving you. We'll figure this out together. But you have to tell me what's going on. You have to trust me."

Lisa hesitated, her eyes darting around the room. She looked like she was trying to make a decision, like she was weighing the pros and cons of telling him the truth.

"Okay," she said finally, her voice barely above a whisper. "But you have to promise me something. You have to promise that you won't tell anyone what I'm about to tell you. Not a single soul."

"I promise," Jeremy said, his heart pounding. He had no idea what Lisa was about to tell him, but he knew it was going to be big.

Lisa took a deep breath, her eyes closing for a moment. When she opened them, she looked like she had made a decision. She looked like she was ready to tell the truth.

"I've been working with the government," she said, her voice barely above a whisper. "I've been working with the CIA."

Jeremy's eyes widened, his mind racing. He had never expected this. He had never expected Lisa to be working with the CIA.

"What?" he said, his voice barely above a whisper. "Lisa, what are you talking about?"

"I've been working with the CIA for the past few years," Lisa said, her voice trembling. "I've been gathering information on a group of people who are trying to overthrow the government. I've been trying to get out of it, but I've been in too deep."

"Lisa, this is crazy," Jeremy said, his voice rising. "You're telling me you've been working with the CIA? That you've been gathering information on a group of people who are trying to overthrow the government? Lisa, this is insane."

"I know it's insane," Lisa said, her voice breaking. "I know it's crazy. But it's the truth, Jeremy. I've been working with the CIA, and I've been in danger for a long time. I've been trying to get out of it, but I've been in too deep."

Jeremy stood there, his mind racing. He didn't know what to do. He didn't know what to say. He had never expected this. He had never expected Lisa to be working with the CIA.

"Lisa, I don't know what to say," he said, his voice barely above a whisper. "I don't know what to do. I've never expected this. I've never expected you to be working with the CIA."

"I know, Jeremy, I know," Lisa said, her voice trembling. "I know it's a lot to take in. I know it's crazy. But it's the truth. I've been working with the CIA, and I've been in danger for a long time. I've been trying to get out of it, but I've been in too deep."

Jeremy looked at Lisa