Chapter 794

"You have to give an explanation for this."

The woman angrily pointed at the boutique manager's nose. She was a VIP customer of the fashion boutique. Never had she expected things like this would happen to her one day. The boutique manager apologized quickly.

"It was an oversight on our part. I'm so sorry. The few pieces of outfits you tried on today will be given to you as compensation. We're so sorry for what happened."

"Do I look like I need these pieces of clothing?"

The boutique manager apologized again.

"I'm sorry. That's not what I mean."

"I want her to get down on her knees and apologize."

The woman pointed to Norah on the floor.

Norah gasped.

Knowing she had screwed up big time, she looked at Gloria with a pitiful face.

'Mom, help me.'

Gloria was embarrassed, wondering how the child she raised could do such a thing. But she also could not bear to leave Norah behind.

"My daughter is at fault and should apologize, but you can see that she is still a kid and has injured her back. Kneeling would be too difficult."

"If you were in my shoes and videoed while changing clothes, wouldn't you want an apology, at least?"

"If she can't apologize, then just strip her naked. I'll record a video of her, and then we are even. There is no other way."

The woman was vehement.

Just then, Nicole came out of the other dressing room in a glamorous dress and saw Norah lying on the floor while a woman barked furiously. She appeared unconcerned, and she had heard all their conversations.

"How come you got out of that room?"

Norah looked at Nicole in surprise.

"You should be worried about your situation."

Nicole did not bother to answer her question. Samuel and Spencer had sensed the undertone of what Norah and Nicole said.

"By the way, this dress you gave me is quite nice. I will wear it now. Please remember to pay for it in a moment."

Nicole's words were an insult to injury for Norah.

"You're going too far, Nicole." Norah glared at her.

"Please help your sister, Nicole." Gloria scowled.

"Mom, it was Norah's fault, and the lady has every right to demand reparation. We can't intervene."

With that, Nicole gave Samuel a look.

"Mom, get up. Norah is an adult and should be responsible for her actions." Samuel helped Gloria to the side.

"Why are you on the side of the outsider, Samuel?"

Norah pulled herself up with difficulty.

"You've got to settle the things yourself, Norah. Mom and I still have other things to do, so we leave now."

Nicole spun around and left.

Although Gloria could not bring herself to leave Norah behind, Samuel and Spencer forcibly carried her away.

"Mom..." Norah called out angrily as they went.

"Apologize to the lady, and it will be over. Otherwise, things will not end up well for you," the boutique manager exhorted Norah.

"Madam, I am sorry."

Norah forced her apology through her teeth. They had bought what they wanted.

Nicole and the others left the mall and got into the car. Gloria was still worried about Norah and kept murmuring in the car.

Spencer was annoyed but was also curious about what had just happened.

So changed the subject, saying, "Judging by what Norah said just now, it looks like something was going on between you

two. Right, Nicole?"

"Exactly. The way Norah looked at you wasn't quite right."

Samuel looked at Nicole with puzzlement.

"There is no outsider here now; can anyone tell us what the hell is going on?"

Gloria turned to look at Nicole.

"What do they both mean? Is it true that something is going on?"
