

My Wife is a Hacker by Summer

Chapter 852

□ □ □

Chapter 852

Nicole glanced at all that. "It is exactly what I thought. Does anyone else have it?"

"I have the same problem, too." Wayne took out the same hard plastic.

"Collect these shoes and hard plastic shrapnel and find someone to keep them," Nicole instructed.

"Those who have finished the competitions, take off your shoes and put them on others." Nicole arranged things in an orderly manner.

"The men's relay race is about to start. All contestants, on your marks." Jack and Wayne put on the shoes that did not fit well and walked to the starting position.

"On your marks."

Bang! The men's relay race had started.

The male students of Class B were wearing shoes that did not fit, but they still overcame difficulties and smoked other contestants, successfully winning first place.

Once again, Norah's class had still failed to finish first. Up next was Nicole's game. She would not give Norah a chance to sabotage her performance.

The contestants from Class A stretched.

They picked up the shot and put it out forcefully; she achieved a fairly medium distance.

When her classmates saw the results, they all applauded.

Norah was delighted, as she thought there was finally something she could be proud of.

She looked at Nicole triumphantly. It was Nicole's turn.

Norah was keeping an eye on her as she thought she could finally see how Nicole would embarrass herself.

Nicole picked up the shot, and everything was set. She glanced sideways at Norah before putting the shot out gently, and the shot flew beyond the farthest line.

Even the referee was stunned for a moment before making the announcement.

"Nicole just broke the record at 21 meters. She won first place." Everyone, irrespective of classes, went apes.

They all looked surprised.

"Nicole is incredible. I heard that she made a record distance during the training. I didn't expect her to do this today."

"Absolutely. That's farther than the national champion could achieve, right?" The students who watched the competition were all talking about it.

Norah's face turned pale, and her arrogant attitude was no more. Her class teacher's expression had completely collapsed.

"Norah, what have you all practiced all this while? Is this what you all have got? The other classes have won all first places. You're a real disappointment to me." The class teacher said angrily and then left the scene.

Norah had worked hard to train her classmates, but she still could not beat Nicole.

She stomped her feet in anger and frustration.

"Nicole, why did you come to the Royal Creek Institute to mess up my life?"

In the following competitions, Nicole showed her strength and won first place in all the games.

It stunned her classmates and teachers. She now became famous throughout the school, and Ms.

Emerson felt very proud of her.

It was not just Norah who saw Nicole's success and fame.

Snow and Raine were also watching the eleventh-grade competition.

They all were pissed at seeing Nicole's success.

"What has she done that she could take first place in all the competitions? Something must be amiss." Raine would rather believe that Nicole had cheated.

"Snow, it is your turn now." Some classmates called out to her again.

"Here I come." Snow hurried over.

Because of the lack of intense training, Snow became physically exhausted halfway through the competition. She finished last.

Raine was slightly better than Snow but did not make it into the top three.

□ □ □