

My Wife is a Hacker by Summer

Chapter 856

□ □ □

Chapter 856

"We need more precious data for our bidding documents." Harvey said.

"You're right; I also think the same. Steve, take note of what Harvey said, and have Sean revise it when he returns."

"Okay."

Harvey made a few more changes, and after each revision, he confirmed it with Nicole before finalizing it.

In fact, they were all minor details.

After sitting in the conference room of Riddle Corporation for nearly two hours, Harvey could not stay still. He looked at Nicole, who was still studying the materials.

'Nicole, why don't we stop here for today? It's getting late." Nicole looked outside; the city lights were already on.

"Okay, let's go then."

"Steve, we're leaving. Do you want to come along?"

Nicole asked.

Steve had long since seen Harvey's affection for Nicole. He waved his hand.

"I still have some work to do. You guys leave first."

"Okay, then we will go first."

"See you later, Mr. Riddle," Harvey said to Steve.

"See you later."

In the car, Harvey broke the silence.

"I'm sorry that I dragged you over to work today when you were supposed to be resting after the game."

"But since we haven't even eaten anything, may I treat you to a casual dinner?"

Harvey finally said what he most wanted to say.

"Like you said, I'm exhausted today and want to go home early to rest. Sorry."

Nicole politely declined.

"That's okay, then I will meet you at your house tomorrow. We'll discuss the tender again. It is the school holidays these few days."

Harvey continued to create opportunities for himself.

Having just politely declined Harvey's kind offer,

Nicole was too embarrassed to turn him down and had to agree reluctantly.

"Okay, but I might have to sleep in."

"Oh, no problem. I'll be there later."

Harvey saw Nicole did not refuse him and became hopeful. The car pulled up steadily in front of her home.

"Thanks for the ride back. Bye."

Nicole waved to him and got out of the car.

"Bye-bye."

Harvey kept looking at Nicole as she went and only started the engine when she disappeared into the house. The next day, Nicole slept in before getting up. By the time she got downstairs, Harvey was already sitting in the living room chatting with Daniel.

"Hi, Nicole." Harvey greeted her.

"Harvey? How long have you been here?" Nicole looked at him with slight surprise.

"It's been a while. Did you sleep well?" Harvey looked at her with a smile.

"Pretty good. I need to eat something before I can discuss it with you."

"There's no hurry. Take your time. I'm having a great conversation with your father."

Harvey was just fine, as he just wanted to see her, and discussions were nothing more than an excuse.

"Good."

Nicole looked at Daniel, then went into the dining room and really took her sweet time.

Thinking that Harvey would drag herself to continue discussing the tender later, she really did not want to deal with it. So she took out her phone to send a message to Sean.

[Are you busy right now?]

[It's alright. What's up?]

[Harvey is waiting for you at home and wants to talk about the tender.] Nicole deliberately said that Harvey was waiting for him.

[At home? Okay, I'll be right back.]

She put down her phone and was in a good mood because someone would stand in for her in a moment.

She took her breakfast with ease, occasionally looking over to the couch, where Harvey and Daniel were talking passionately.

Sean's drive took at least twenty minutes.

Nicole finished her breakfast and came to sit on the couch. She had to put on a front until Sean returned.

"I'm sorry for keeping you waiting. Shall we continue the discussion from yesterday??"

Nicole looked over at Harvey.

"Sure." Harvey gave Nicole a fond look.

□ □ □