Chapter 1241

Duncan's expression darkened slightly. He looked at Everett with a troubled, but worried gaze.

Ninian also pushed Harold away before she moved forward..

When she saw Everett's off gaze, she felt extremely anxious. Her voice was even hoarse and unpleasant. "Wait... for me..."

Her voice made Everett become clearly stunned. Then, the darkness in his eyes instantly disappeared. He stared into her eyes, and he asked with an uncertain tone, "Ninian, what happened to your voice?"

Ninian's eyes turned red. She bit her bottom lip without speaking again.

Everett's gaze instantly became dark. The corners of his eyes also turned slightly red. He firmly said, "Speak again. I want to hear you."

Ninian opened her mouth, but she could not make a sound. Her tears just fell from her eyes.

Duncan also understood that there was something wrong. When he glanced at the Winters siblings, he saw sadness in their expressions. They could not possibly hide that sadness.

He could only look at George.

"But..." Harold wanted to speak up, but he was interrupted by Melody.

"I don't want to hear so many excuses. I just hope that we can respect my sister's opinion." The Winters brothers' expressions froze at the same time. They looked at each other, and they relented in unison after they saw the helplessness in each other's eyes.

Alden was the first to leave. Harold looked at the others before helplessly shaking his head and leaving.

George looked at Ninian's pale face, and he wanted to say something, but he did not speak in the end. He just stroked her head to comfort her before he immediately left.

Melody sighed in relief. When she raised her head, she saw Ninian's happy and grateful gaze.

"Have a nice chat." Melody sighed before she walked out.

Duncan naturally did not object. He silently walked out of the room and closed the door for them.

Ninian nodded hard.

"Silly girl." Everett tenderly looked at her, and said, "You don't have to come back to me. I'll go to you."

Ninian stared at him, startled. He said, "After I finish dealing with Rowan Craig and clearing all the possibly existing danger here, I'll go to see you. I'll bring presents to meet your parents and siblings and have them willingly hand their treasure to me."

Ninian's eyes teared up again.

She bit her bottom lip while listening to his confession as he said everything out.

"I'll make them truly rest assured and give us blessings. I don't want you to feel troubled and conflicted. You'll never be caught between me and your family. You're the one whom they and I care about. I'll handle everything well before letting you be my bride at ease.

"So, after you go to Frica with your sister, don't feel pressured. Just relax and rest. Share all your happiness with me. I'll always be with you."

Everett rarely talked so much. Usually, it was Ninian who talked, and he smiled.

Now, Ninian suddenly lost her voice, and he became more talkative. It seemed that he could never get enough of talking, no matter how much he explained.

No wonder Ninian would be worried. He also felt worried about Everett encountering Rowan again.

Evil men did not die easily. There was still no trace of Rowan's whereabouts, which proved that he hid his presence very well.

There was still an upcoming battle awaiting them. Everett also needed to get rid of his trauma completely through Rowan.

Duncan accepted Ninian's trust.

He replied with a firm and relaxed expression, and he hoped that this kind and strong girl could feel less burdened.

No wonder Everett would be so faithful to Ninian. He could also finally feel it.

Nerola drove while she said, "Ninian! Don't run!"

At this time, Ninian also leaned toward the window. When she heard it, she helplessly smiled, but her eyes were clearly filled with surprise. She waved at them before she frowned and gestured to stop the car.

"You stop first! Do you know how hard it is for my broken car to chase after you? I'm such a qualified female driver!" Nerola drove while she nagged.

"Ninian! Ninian!" A figure also showed out from the passenger seat at the side. It was Lana. She said, "Please stop your car. I'm really afraid of Nerola's driving! I almost died!"

Right after Ninian came up with the question, she heard a calm and powerful voice from the side.

"Sure."

Ninian and the others turned back. They saw that George had already gotten out of the car and walked toward them. Harold had even followed him from behind to join the fun.

Perhaps George's imposing manner and dignity were too strong, but Lana immediately got a hold of herself and stopped holding Ninian's shoulders. Nerola stood a little straighter too. She flashed a distant yet polite faint smile, appearing totally different from her previous reckless and unserious self.

"Mr. Winters!"

"Mr. Winters!"

The two of them greeted George at the same time.

George nodded to greet them, while behind him, Harold joked, "Why isn't anyone greeting me?"

Nerola was slightly startled before she smiled. "Hi, Harold."

Lana stuck out her tongue and sighed. "Because you're not as good-looking as Mr. Winters!"

"Hey!" Harold put his arms on his waist. Why do you little girls always attack me? Have you fallen for me?"

Ninian stroked her chin and started thinking about how she could assist Brooklyn.

Looking at the happy family, Nerola's lips curled up, and her eyes were full of envy.

She guessed that she could never own such warmth in her life.

As she smiled, her eyes were filled with gloom. Her heroic imposing demeanor seemed to emanate more loneliness amid the bustling and noisy background.

She shook her head and suppressed her emotions. The gloominess in her eyes was substituted with a smile. She continued looking at Lana and Harold who were quarreling, as well as George, who was whispering caring instructions to Ninian.

She did not know that a pair of eyes in the car caught all her emotions and expressions.

Alden and Melody did not get out of the car.

If too many members of the Winters family showed up, it would give off a certain level of pressure or oppression to the rest.

After all, they were Ninian's friends, so George had gotten out of the car personally. He showed them his respect and flawless manners.

Harold was pretty much familiar with Lana and Nerola, so he had also gotten out of the car.

Ninian turned around and looked at him before she followed his gaze. She was momentarily stunned, but her eyes soon crinkled.

She took out her phone and typed. [Al, who are you asking about?]

Alden turned around and glanced at her, seeing the teasing look in her eyes.

He reached out to flick her smooth and fair forehead.

Ninian immediately held her forehead. She was in so much pain that she frowned.

"You dare tease your brother. Are you that bold now?" Alden glanced at her and said softly.

Ninian frowned. She held her phone and typed to complain. [Al, you won't get married with such an attitude!]

Alden ignored her and also stopped asking her anything. He just leaned on the soft seat, closed his eyes, and rested.

Her eyes were also full of determination and passion.

The members of the Winters family were not surprised by her gaze.

George had a similar gaze when he was named a legend in the business industry. Harold also had the same when he researched more advanced robots in his own lab. Alden showed it too when he invaded enemy defenses and built his own security system.

Even Melody who was usually indifferent displayed the same gaze when she stood on the stage.

It was a gaze that did not allow any rejection.

"George, Grapie is really fond of the entertainment industry. I've secretly watched her acting. She's very talented and also very happy," Harold finally could not help but speak.

He was the first among the siblings who had discovered Ninian's love for this career, so he made an investment and joined the industry. He wanted to protect his sister.

He had been supporting her for a long time.

Harold pouted before he said, "I know that you're traumatized because she was in danger in the past, but we can't destroy Grapie's dream because of our own worries, right?"

Alden instantly knew George's thoughts.

He raised his eyebrows, and a menacing light was shown in his indifferent eyes. "George, you seem sure that I'll lose."

George was startled, but he held his fist in front of his lips and covered his awkwardness with a cough. "Ahem, why would I think that? You'll surely win."

Alden instantly rolled his eyes.

"Okay, I'm going to board now. Stay in touch with me about Grapie," Alden said.

He had returned on a temporary application, and there was still a pile of work awaiting him.

"Go ahead. Take care." George urged. "Don't forget to track Mr. Rowan Craig."

Alden snorted pridefully and said, "Do I need to do that? Isn't Everett better than me?"

When George heard this, he smiled.

This brat was holding a grudge.

"How can that be? You're the top in the world."

Alden ignored him. He waved at George and walked to the boarding gate without turning back.
