

Madam Winters's Fight For Her Children Chapter 1113

Since he wanted to meet her, she would meet him.

She was no longer the innocent and passionate Raina anymore. If she did not have the courage to face him now, how could she escape that relationship?

When George heard her speaking distantly, he became silent, and sadness crossed his eyes.

He quickly hid his emotions and replied indifferently. "I'm hungry."

He was avoiding her request to discuss work immediately.

Raina cast a surprised gaze at him as if she did not expect him to calmly say something like that.

In the past, even if someone stabbed George until he bled, he would still dress up nicely and hold the proper posture without letting others see through him.

He would not show his weakness at all.

Raina became slightly absentminded, but she did not reject George's request. After all, he was their collaborator and the boss. She would not force him to start signing the contract without even buying him a meal.

She speedily ticked a few dishes on the menu before she handed it back to the waiter and thanked him in her fluent Gansternian.

After the waiter left, she turned around and noticed George's gaze again.

His gaze was profound and unfamiliar. It seemed as if the proud and childish teen no longer existed, and all that was left was someone she did not recognize.

But what did his condition matter to her?

Three years ago, she was already not good enough for Young Master George, the future heir of Winters Corporation. It was more so now that her family had fallen now. She wandered overseas in despair and lived with a younger brother who was severely ill now.

Meanwhile, George became the person in charge of Winters Corporation. His family's properties were spread across the world. He just needed to snap his fingers to shake the business industry.

That was their difference apart from the fact that he did not love her.

When coffee was served, she stirred it gently before she picked it up and took a sip. Her movements were elegant.

George was about to add sugar for her, but he stopped. He looked at her and said, "You weren't used to the bitterness of coffee in the past, and you always wanted me to add sugar for you."

Raina was slightly startled, but she soon flashed him an indifferent smile. "People change." "But you haven't." George looked at her and firmly said, "Raina Barlow, you lied to me. It's been three years, but you don't have a so-called lover." Raina's expression instantly changed. George noticed that she was subconsciously avoiding eye contact, and her breathing seemed to grow more rapid. The light in his eyes became brighter. Just as he was about to attack, Raina raised her head again. Her gaze was so calm that it made George's heart sink. She firmly said, "So? Three years is sufficient for me to clearly know that leaving you has been my best decision." George's heart totally sank at that moment. At the same time, the Winters siblings were hiding outside and watching the show. Their expressions changed too, and they looked at each other at a loss.

Who would have thought that the warm and cheerful Raina who only liked George would say the most hurtful words in the calmest tone one day?

Even they dared not continue listening to her.

In the private room, George slowly schooled his thoughts after his mind went blank for a while. His eyes were always calm, but he could no longer remain aloof at that moment. His expression darkened, and his face was filled with some coldness. "Leaving me was the best decision?"

George suddenly stood up and walked toward Raina. "You fooled me with your so-called reason of 'moving on'."

"What's your real reason for dumping me?" He instantly grabbed Raina's arm, and his eyes were red and angry.

It was Raina's first time seeing him lose his cool. After being momentarily startled, she chuckled and said, "What did you say? I dumped you?"

She chuckled, and her gaze was extremely desolate." You're the CEO of Winters Corporation! How could I, Raina Barlow, have the courage to dump you?"

"Raina Barlow!" George increased the strength of his grip and gritted his teeth more.

He thought it was because he had been immature and clueless about loving someone, so he hurt her and made her fall for another man.

But who would have known that it was fake?

She dumped him and even made up an excuse.

She simply threw him away like trash.

"Mr. Winters, please behave yourself." Raina felt pain, and her expression became as cold as ice.

"Don't call me Mr. Winters again!" George interrupted her and angrily said in a low voice, "Raina, I don't blame you for what you did to me in the past, but you have to give me a reason! A reason for dumping me!"

Raina was so angry that she trembled. She raised her head and looked at the man in front of her. When she saw the rage in his deep eyes, she felt extremely depressed.

It had been three years, yet he still understood nothing.

Raina no longer resisted, but her expression was terrifyingly cold with numbness and sadness that she suppressed.

"There's no reason," she said emotionlessly.

George's gaze instantly froze.

She slowly curled her lips into a sneer. "I told you. I was with you because I was competitive. I had to pursue you. Since I got you, it naturally became uninteresting."

George's expression instantly darkened, and he emanated a ruthless aura.

He raised his hand and clenched Raina's jaw. He winced his teeth and said, "Raina Barlow, I really want to strangle you to death."

At the entrance, the four siblings looked at each other at loss. None of them expected to listen to such a conversation.

While Melody and Ninian were still slightly dumbfounded, Harold and Alden made a move. They held their sister's shoulders respectively and quickly pulled them away.

"Al... hmm!" Ninian made a sound by reflex, but Alden covered her mouth in time.

He pressed Ninian against the wall at the corner and gestured for her to be quiet.

Ninian immediately accepted the signal and nodded.

A few of them silently stuck their heads out and saw someone kick the door where they stood earlier.

George's cold figure left the premises with haste, and the surrounding atmosphere seemed to be much colder.

"Gosh, that was so close!" Ninian patted her chest and felt fearful.

If George knew that they were eavesdropping on him, she dared not imagine what would happen.

Luckily, Harold and Alden were vigilant.

"George is really hurt this time," Melody said sadly.

The siblings became silent.

Was it not right? Their eldest brother always stood upright, and he was arrogant, as well as indifferent. There were only a few people in his heart, and Raina was one of them.

In the past, George had always assumed that he was not mature enough, and he did not know how to love, hence he hurt Raina and caused her to fall for another person.

That was her reason for breaking up with him.

He found it hard to accept, but he still freed Raina. He had even been paying attention to her in silence and secretly taking care of her all these years.

However, he heard such hurtful words in return. How could he bear it?

Alden's expression was slightly cold and indifferent." Raina Barlow, right?" He narrowed his eyes a little, they began to look hostile.

As though Melody knew his thoughts, she instantly held his hand and shook her head.

A nervous Ninian looked at him with a serious expression too.

They could not interfere with this. It was George's personal matter, and he also did not want his siblings to know that he was hurt in a relationship.

Alden gently breathed out, closed his eyes, and said, "I got it."

He would not do anything to Raina or interfere with this.

They had to believe George that he could get up from where he fell down.

“Actually, I think Raina has her own reasons.” Ninian stuck out her tongue and spoke shyly. Although saying this made it seem like she betrayed their revolutionary kinship with George, she had this feeling for some reason. “Grapie, what are you saying? You’re still too innocent!” Harold clicked his tongue before he sighed and said, “ You’re another George.”

George was fooled, and so was she.

“I actually... agree with Grapie’s thought.” Melody’s gentle tone was filled with doubt. “We saw how well Raina treated George in the past, and it was definitely as simple as competitiveness. When she looked at George, her eyes were full of stars and love.

“If she faked all that, it only proves that she’s too cunning. If she’s so cunning, why would she reluctantly abandon a powerful man like George? She even left her hometown and worked hard abroad to survive. She worked so hard to earn money and treat her brother, but she never sought help from George at all.” Melody quietly analyzed the situation. “I think she isn’t such a wicked woman. The arrogance in her body is no less than George’s.”

Everyone became silent.

When they recalled Raina in their memories, she was indeed not that kind of scheming person.

Their mother, Adina, had also met her. She complimented Raina for being passionate and bright like a warm sunflower.

They might have a wrong judgment of her, but their mother was brilliant, so she would not have a wrong judgment. Raina’s character should be guaranteed.

So, why would she break up with George and even say things like that?

The siblings walked out of the cafe. When they passed by the private room, Ninian turned back and took a look.

In the private room, Raina sat on the carpet. She held her knees and lowered her face to her knees.

Her figure was so slim that it seemed as if she would break into pieces once touched.

Ninian looked away, and her bright eyes were filled with gloominess.

What would make two people who were in love hurt and give up on each other?

Why was it so difficult to understand love? When they went back to their hotel, George's assistant was already waiting at the entrance. George had contacted Melody before he came, so Melody had also booked a suite for him to stay with them in the same hotel.

When the assistant saw them, he immediately went forward and nervously said, "Young Master Harold, Young Master Alden, Misses! Mr. Winters—".

Alden raised his hand and gestured to interrupt him.

"You don't have to explain. We know."

The assistant was stunned for a while before he realized what had happened. He nodded. "Mr. Winters has locked himself in the suite, and no one is allowed to disturb him."

They became silent. Alden was the first to speak. "Just let him rest. Send the work that needs to be handled to my room. I'll handle it."

When the assistant heard that, he seemed to sigh in relief. "Yes, Young Master Alden!"

Alden was ready to walk inside, but the assistant hesitantly added, "Mr. Winters hasn't eaten anything since this morning."

They instantly frowned again.

Ninian raised her hand and smiled coyly while the rest looked at her in surprise. "Leave it to me, okay? I'll prepare dinner and send it to George."

When Alden heard her response, he nodded. Harold immediately said, "I can be your helper." "Me too," Melody said. "Okay!" Ninian got rid of the gloominess, and she became energetic again. "Let's help Georgie overcome this obstacle!"

"Ready, start!"

The siblings divided the tasks and started taking action at the same time.
