

Madam Winters's Fight For Her Children Chapter 1116

Knock! Knock!

Someone knocked on the room door several times.

The room was still silent.

George sat in front of the desk without turning the lights on. He silently stared at the colorful streetlights and crowded street outside the French windows.

The people outside his room did not seem to be giving up. They knocked on the door once again.

Only then did George slowly look back and glance at the door.

He had given strict instructions, so his assistant would definitely not dare to knock on the door without an emergency. Since there was another knock, he guessed that something must have happened. He massaged his forehead before he pushed away his dejection and stood up. He straightened his back and raised his chin slightly. He still maintained his image as the mature and calm CEO of Winters Corporation. He did not have too much time to indulge himself in a sad relationship.

Countless people were still supporting and waiting on him.

He had to be so strong that he was impeccable and invincible.

"What should we do? There's still no sound in the room, and it also looks dark from the peephole. George isn't sleeping, is he?" Harold crouched in the doorway to look inside. He kept changing positions like a gecko picking the door.

Melody and Ninian stood behind him, and they looked worried.

Alden stood at the side. He wrapped his arms around his chest as he leaned against the wall. "Knock again. He'll come out," he said indifferently. "Al, are you sure?" Harold asked. "Let me try again."

He moved backward slightly. Just as he raised his hand to knock again, the doorknob inside the room suddenly moved. While he was caught off guard, George pulled the door open.

—

IL

Harold raised his arm while he stared into George's calm eyes.

Harold was speechless.

He felt flustered for some reason.

After George glanced around, he looked at Harold coldly. "What are you doing here?"

"I... We..." Harold felt flustered. He turned around to seek help from his siblings. Okay! Before he turned back, he did not know. But once he turned back, he was shocked!

The three brats had already disappeared. He could not even see their shadows.

Harold was speechless.

He wanted to cry, and he went weak in the knees. "Georgie, I..."

"Get out of here," George said coldly. "I'm not in the mood of handling any of your business."

"No, George, I..."

George did not plan to listen to him. He was about to close the door when a small figure stepped out and immediately squeezed in through the door's gap. When George looked at the hairy and soft head, he was slightly stunned. "Grapie?"

"Georgie, hey! It's me!" Ninian was carrying food containers in both hands. She raised her head and smiled brightly at George. "I want to see you, Georgie! I've cooked for you. Do you want to try my dishes?"

"I..."

Before George could reject, Ninian had already sneaked into the suite. She walked around, turned on the lights, and said, "Georgie, were you sleeping just now? Why is it so dark in here? Are you hungry? Come and try the food that I just tried to cook." George looked helpless when he saw her walking inside and putting the containers on the dining table. "Just leave it there. I'll eat it later."

"No way. I have to observe your response on the spot so that I can improve next time!" Ninian said. "Hurry over. I'll eat with you. I'm hungry too. My belly is deflated at this point."

Madam Winters's Fight For Her Children Chapter 1117

As she spoke, she rubbed her belly and looked like a pitiful kitten.

George could no longer turn her down. He walked toward her before he turned back and looked at Harold. "Do you want to join us?"

Harold firmly shook his head. "No, thanks, Georgie! I wish you a happy mealtime with Grapie!" After he spoke, he cast an unspoken glance at Ninian, speedily closed the door, and left.

George looked at Harold's back and shook his head. "So immature."

"Georgie, I've made your favorite pork chop, fish filets, and garlic prawns! Come and taste them!" As Ninian spoke, she lifted the lids of the containers, and the aroma instantly filled the room.

She took a breath in an intoxicated manner, and her crinkled eyes brightened. "It smells so good! It must be very delicious!"

"Did you cook my favorite food or your favorite food?" George raised his eyebrows, and joy flashed in his eyes.

"They are our favorites ! Haha! Because we're siblings !" Ninian stuffed a fork into George's hand and gave him a plate before she happily added the food to his plate.

After the meal, the loneliness and sadness that were initially left in the room had been cleared completely, leaving warm kinship there.

Both of them were very full. Ninian elegantly lay in the chair while she rubbed her round belly and said, "Oh, gosh, my belly is going to burst. Why am I so good at cooking? It would really be a waste if I don't become a chef."

George was cleaning up the mess on the dining table. When he heard what she said, he could not help but chuckle. "So ambitious." "Haha! That's my little ambition." Ninian stuck her tongue out mischievously and said, "My biggest wish is that our family can be safe, as well as happy, and that we'll support each other and never leave each other."

George did not speak. Under the yellow dim light, his cold and ruthless side profile was stained with gentleness. Ninian looked at him and seriously said, "So, Georgie, you must believe that no matter what happens, your family will always be by your side, support you, and protect you."

George froze for a while.

He raised his head and looked at his sister who was both tender and firm.

He subconsciously recalled his other siblings, and they also had a similar gaze.

George could not help but snap out of his daze. It turned out that his youngest sister had already grown up without realizing it. She became responsible, she knew how to be firm, and she could become his support and someone whom he could rely on.

George's eyes subconsciously became teary.

He looked down slightly and continued cleaning the mess on the table, but he could not help stopping smiling no matter what.

"I know," he gently said, "Me too."

After Ninian came out from the private room, she received VIP treatment like a queen.

Harold quickly took away the trash bag from her, Melody raised her arm for Ninian to hold, while Alden lowered his status and personally opened the door for her.

After the eldest brothers and sister helped her sit down on the couch, they stared at her with bright gazes.

Surrounded by expectant eyes, Ninian nodded in a reserved manner.

In the next second, surprised cheers were heard. "You're really my Grapie! You're awesome!" Harold could not wait to lift her and throw her into the air.

Alden and Melody also smiled, which was rare.

"Grapie, you're a good girl." "This little girl has finally grown up."

Ninian was happy to be complimented. She crinkled her eyes and kept smiling brightly. "George has been comforted. Now, let's talk about Raina." Alden spoke, and a dull light crossed his eyes. "I investigated Raina's background earlier, and I found something very important." Harold, Melody, and Ninian instantly looked stern. "What is it?"

Madam Winters's Fight For Her Children Chapter 1118

"Before Raina broke up with Georgie, she went missing for half a month," Alden said, "Half a month before that, her father's business went bankrupt, and he got drunk out of sadness. He drove her younger brother and fell into the river."

"What?"

This change shocked Ninian and the others.

“I remember that Raina’s family background was pretty good. Her mother died young, but she was close with her father and her younger brother. Her father pampered the siblings very much, so Raina was also quite cheerful and warm.” Harold could not help but sigh and say, “It’s so unexpected... that this would happen to her.” Ninian also nodded, and her eyes turned slightly red.” How could she bear such a tragedy? Raina was not even twenty at that time, right?”

“Did George know about this?” Melody asked.

Since she had broken up with George at this point, what did George do?

“George didn’t know about it. Besides, he also went missing within half a month after Raina went missing,” Alden said.

“What? Why?”

Harold and Melody looked confused, while Ninian widened her eyes in disbelief.

George was always responsible and stable, and he was very close with Raina at that time. Why would he not know about it and even go missing for half a month when such a serious thing happened to Raina?

“At that time...” Alden paused for a while before he said, “Something happened in Winters Corporation, so Georgie focused on handling it. That’s why he didn’t notice anything abnormal about Raina.” “So, did Raina get hurt because of this?” Melody asked. “Yes. She blamed George for prioritizing his career over her, ignoring her, and neglecting her,” Alden said indifferently.

Ninian lowered her head and sadly said, “Georgie wasn’t able to be there for Raina, and that’s his fault, but... he has also been very sad all these years after the breakup. I think he’s hurt...”

“Can we explain the incident to Raina? I think she has misunderstood George. Perhaps once the misunderstanding is solved, she’ll forgive George?” Harold scratched his head and said in an irritated tone. “Do you think George hasn’t thought about it?” Alden glanced at him with a straight face. “According to the information I’ve found, after Georgie got dumped, he went to Raina and discovered her situation. He felt very guilty and sorry. He apologized to her and gave her promises, but she rejected him.

“She told Georgie that she pursued him only because she learned about his real identity and wanted to challenge herself. She said that Georgie did not know how to love and take care of people, so she refused to continue the relationship. Most importantly, she had fallen for the doctor who saved and treated her younger brother.

“Therefore, over the years after the breakup, Georgie has been doubting himself. He wonders if he doesn’t know love and will only hurt people. Even though he secretly looks after Raina, he doesn’t dare appear in her life and disturb her.

“He’s the CEO of Winters Corporation, but he’s become low and petty after being dumped. Don’t you think that Raina Barlow isn’t an expert pickup artist?”

Alden’s tone was filled with mockery and coldness.

His character was different from his siblings. In his eyes, other than his family and work, other things were dispensable. He could be heartless to anyone who crossed him.

Madam Winters’s Fight For Her Children Chapter 1119

When Melody looked at his cold and heartless side profile, she held his hand and shook her head. “Al, your thoughts are too extreme. It’s only because of the existence of love that there are grudges and harm. I think during the half a month that George went missing, Raina must have also gone through a period of torment. There must be a special reason that made her break up with Georgie after half a month. George isn’t the only person who got hurt in this relationship.”

Alden held himself back for a while, but he still did not say anything in the end. He just looked down indifferently.

“I think Mel is right.” Ninian nodded as well. “I really want to go and ask Raina what truly made her break up with George. Her performance in the cafe just now also proves that she actually can’t let him go.”

“Grapie!” Alden suddenly looked at her sternly. “You can’t go and ask her. I won’t allow you to interfere with this.”

“What?” Ninian was slightly surprised. She raised her head and looked at him, while her big eyes were filled with some confusion. Melody and Harold were also surprised by Alden’s agitation.

“Hey, talk nicely. Don’t yell at her!” Harold said unhappily.

Alden's expression became a little twisted. He held himself back, softened his tone, and gently said, "Grapie, listen to me, you're still very young. Don't get involved in this."

Ninian blinked and obediently said, "Okay."

"Okay, let's not talk about this today. It's really late now. Let's get some rest," Melody said. She then pushed Harold and Ninian into their rooms.

When she reached Alden's room door, she stopped walking. She looked at Alden with her bright eyes. "Al, I guess you haven't finished speaking." Alden raised his eyebrows slightly. "George went missing for half a month. Did it have something to do with Grapie?" Without waiting for his answer, Melody analyzed the situation. "I briefly calculated the time. That was when Grapie was nearly kidnapped. Georgie was busy dealing with the trash, and he was clearing all the possible threats that were hidden in Winters Corporation under Daddy's instructions. "So, they lost contact at the most critical time, which caused an irreparable misunderstanding between them, right?"

Alden looked at his sister for a while before he helplessly sighed. "I really can't hide anything from you." "I guessed it correctly." Melody exhaled and frowned slightly. "So, I guess that Georgie didn't explain the real reason why he went missing to Raina either, right? He would never bring up Grapie's injury and humiliation again.

"This is also why you covered up the reason he went missing and forbade Grapie from getting involved." Melody's tone was very firm, so Alden did not refute her. Instead, he just admitted to it silently.

He seemed to be slightly annoyed. He leaned against the wall of the hotel and bent down a little. He looked slightly haggard. He took out a cigarette from his pocket, flicked his lighter, and wanted to light the cigarette up.

However, the cigarette in his fingers was taken away. Melody stared at him seriously, while her indifferent gaze was filled with a warning. "Al, if you keep smoking, I'll call Mommy." Alden was speechless.