

Madam Winters's Fight For Her Children Chapter 911

Chapter 911 She gave Mabel a cold look before she hurried to follow Earl. As soon as she reached the courtyard, she caught a distinct scent. She looked around coldly, and she noticed several people hidden among the greenery. If she could notice them, then naturally, Earl could as well. He reached behind and grabbed Adina's arm, and his tone was cold as he said, "You asked Duke to come here?"

Adina pursed her lips. She knew Duke would follow her. She had depended her life on it... She whispered, "Now that I'm in your hands, what can he do? Get in the car, let's go." Her obedient act made Earl think as though she was really willing to leave everything behind and travel the world with him... But this illusion completely disappeared when he saw the blood on her neck.

He shoved her into the passenger seat and bent over to pat her down. After he was sure there were no more knives, Earl tied her hands together.

"Be good. Once we get on the airplane, I'll untie you."

Earl got into the driver's seat, and the car sped out.

Almost immediately, another car appeared behind theirs. The bodyguards have driven out as "Flank them from the left and force them onto the national highway."

Duke gave the order coldly.

The three or more cars behind moved to outflank them, occupying all the left-turn positions and forcing Earl to take the national highway.

Earl grinned nastily and stomped on the gas pedal to its fullest. As he frantically drove the car, Adina, who had her hands tied behind her, reached into her skirt.

She had five knives hidden on her person. When she went into the room and took off her jacket, two of them were exposed, and the one she used on her neck was thrown on the floor. She still had the one hidden at her lower back near the buttock, and another at the base of her thigh. Since she had put her mind to it, she would allow others to be in control of the situation. She grasped the blade handle and slowly cut the rope... Bang!

Their car was suddenly hit by the car behind.

Adina tried hard to keep her wits about her.

Slowly, fewer cars remained on the road. The four to five cars remaining were engaged in a high-speed chase. It was only a matter of time before Duke caught up with Earl. However, with Adina in Earl's hands, Duke could only remain at a distance. Adina's pupils shrank.

As the car was turning, she suddenly threw herself at Earl. She stabbed the knife in her right hand into Earl's main carotid artery, while she used her left hand to turn the steering wheel. The car crashed into the guardrail with a bang.

At the same time

Bang!

A bullet pierced through the air, shattering the car window, and hit Earl in his left chest where his heart was. His sinister black eyes widened suddenly. Then, he turned his head to see the woman sitting to his right. The knife in Adina's hand had pierced his neck, and blood was pouring out. The bullet had hit him in the chest, and blood immediately seeped into his black clothes. He fell slowly, but his eyes remained staring at Adina sorrowfully.

"Addy! Addy!"

Duke knocked loudly on the car window. Feeling cold in her hands and feet, Adina pushed the car door open and dived head-first into Duke's arms.

"Duke, I killed someone, I killed a person..."

Chapter 912 Duke personally checked Earl's corpse. He was dead.

He bent over to brush over Earl's face and closed his sullen eyes.

"Find somewhere to bury him." After Duke said this, he held Adina and got into the car behind them.

He whispered softly to her, "Addy, it's not your fault, it was my bullet that killed him. I did it

When he was Terry North, he killed almost every day. Murder was nothing to him.

Although he had killed Earl on Cairstianian soil, Earl's crimes were so reprehensible that, even “Addy, it’s alright now, everything is alright now...”

Duke held her and quietly pacified her. Adina eventually calmed down.

She watched as the bodyguards in front slowly carried Earl out of the car. His body was completely covered in blood.

The devil who caused her life such turmoil had finally breathed his last. He finally disappeared.

subordinates have remote controls. I don’t know when they might issue a command.”

“As long as Earl is dead, we don’t have to be afraid of the others.” Duke hugged her as he spoke softly, “Hush now, everything will turn out fine.”

Adina nodded and, feeling relieved, she snuggled into the man’s embrace.

Duke wished to take her back to the mansion to take a shower and have a change of clothes. With this in mind, the two of them drove back to the Winters family’s mansion.

There were a lot of people at the mansion. All of them were bodyguards Duke had posted there.

There was one person tied up in the courtyard. He was Earl’s greatest confidant in Sea City Arden Wyatt.

Arden had been forced to kneel on the ground with his hands tied behind his back. The gloom in his eyes was the same as Earl’s.

“Addy, go keep the children company. I’ll handle this.”

Adina nodded. She wrapped her clothes tightly around herself and walked into the mansion.

“Arden, you must have known long ago that I wasn’t Earl, right?” Duke looked down his nose at Arden. He raised his foot and used the end of his leather shoe to raise Arden’s chin. Each of Arden spat at him. “You might as well just kill me!”

“Your master is dead. I can kill you with a snap of my fingers right now.” Duke sneered.

Arden was stunned. “Impossible! You’re lying!” Duke raised his hand and waved behind him. The bodyguard behind him immediately handed him a photograph. He tossed the photograph at Arden’s face. “Take a good look. The bullet went through the heart. Does he look dead to you?”

Arden's eyes suddenly turned crimson.

He had gone through thick and thin together with Earl. The two of them had been through life and death alike, and were as close as brothers.

"You're twins, and you killed your own brother!" Arden condemned Duke mournfully. "The boss committed many misdeeds imaginable, but he never wanted to kill you! How could you be so cruel?! You're not human at all!"

Duke wanted to laugh. Earl had kidnapped his wife, harmed his children, and seized his home. All these did not count as wanting him dead? If it had not been for his incredible luck, Duke would have died a hundred times over already. He sneered. "If I would even kill my own brother, I can kill an ant like you too. Whether you live or die, you only get one chance.

Arden clenched his teeth in fury. "Just kill me."

"Fine." Duke pulled out a gun and leveled it at his head. "In the spirit of humanitarianism, I'll have your wife and child go down with you. No need to thank me."

"How dare you!!"

Arden exploded in that instant.

He was about to get up when the bodyguard kicked his knee, and he crumbled onto the floor. "I'll ask you again. Do you want to live?" Duke cocked the gun. Arden's eyes were red. "Despicable! How could there be such a despicable person as you!"

Duke sneered. He should have been more despicable and cruel sooner, then Addy would not have suffered so much. Duke raised his hand and fired a blank shot. He frowned impatiently. "I'll give you another ten seconds to think about it and not a second more."

Arden bit his cheek hard.

He did not fear his own death, but his wife and child... They were innocent, they did not even know that he was in this kind of business...

He closed his eyes in despair. "Say it. What do you want me to do?"

"You will make me a list of names of all of Earl's subordinates in Sea City. As long as the list is complete, your wife and child may continue to live their ordinary lives." Arden silently lowered his head.

Once this list was handed over, more than a hundred of his brothers would die.

A hundred over brothers and his wife, which was more important?

Arden gritted his teeth. "I can't remember the list that well, can I have some time?" Duke smiled. "Of course, you can, but before that, give me the remote for the biochip that Earl gave you."

At that moment, Arden finally understood what Duke was going to such lengths for. The bio-chip company was under his management. He knew better than anyone about the inner workings of the company.

He opened his mouth and said, "The bio-chip can only be truly destroyed by destroying the database. But only the boss knows where the Shura Company's databases are. Now that he's dead, the bio-chip will stay in Adina's body for the rest of her life." "Destroying all the remote controls would yield the same effect," Duke said coolly, "Where is it?"

Arden shook his hand. "It's the ring on my right hand." The remote controls could be made into all kinds of things: earrings, rings, necklaces, spectacles... anything at all. Duke took the ring off and tore it apart violently. There was indeed a transistor circuit inside. He coldly said, "In three days, you will give me all their names." With a wave of his hand, he let Arden be dragged away. In the mansion, Adina hugged Melody and coaxed her softly, "The doctor said there's nothing wrong, there's just some swelling. Tomorrow it'll be gone, so don't cry anymore, okay?" Melody tugged on Adina's clothes, and said sadly, "Mommy, I'm not scared of the pain, I was scared you would ignore me again..." "Mommy..." Harold came over. "Spend more time with us, okay? I haven't eaten with Mommy in half a month!" Adina smiled and nodded. "Alright, tonight, let's have dinner together." George's dark eyes lit up. "Mommy, are you for real?" "Of course. When have I ever lied to you?" Adina smiled and pulled Alden to her. "Al, I'm sorry. I shouldn't have told you to move out. I take it all back. Can you forgive me?" Alden looked at Adina seriously, and he asked, "Mommy, has that problem been solved yet?" Adina nodded. "Mommy's moving back in today. We'll never be separated again." The four children snuggled Adina. Mabel stood quietly, excluded from the comforting scene, and her eyes were red-rimmed. She had seen Earl take Addy away with her own eyes, but Duke had brought her back two hours later.

Then what about Earl?

Where was he? She wanted to ask him about it, but did not dare to.
