

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 241

Not Pacified After So Long

Wendy just wanted to know whether Byron came here for Rosalie by beating about the bush.

Although she already had a guess, she still wanted to hear Byron explain it himself.

However, she did not expect to have accidentally crossed the line.

Seeing Byron's cold expression, Wendy panicked. She steeled her composure and apologized, "I said too much. Of course, you'd have your reason for staying here." With that, she tentatively asked, "When are you going to go back? Maybe we can go back together?"

Byron lifted his gaze and glanced at Luther.

Luther respectfully said, "Sir, the ticket has already been bought."

Perhaps it was a coincidence, but there was only one first-class ticket left when he bought it. Byron leisurely got up from the sofa. "Then pack up and get ready to go." With that, Byron slid a hand into his pocket with one hand. He stood in front of the full length window and looked downstairs from a distance.

If he headed over now, he might still be able to catch up to those two people.

What expression would the woman wear when he saw him?

Hearing this, suspicion flashed past Wendy's eyes.

She had just arrived and Byron already wanted to go back?

Rosalie clearly had no intention of leaving just now.

Had she really been overthinking and Byron had actually come here because he had work to deal with?

Thinking so, Wendy steeled herself and asked, "Are you already preparing to head back now? If you're not in a hurry, would you like to go back together? I'll be done with my business soon, so you just need to wait for me for a bit."

Byron did not seem to have heard her invitation. He said coldly, "I've already handled my work. There's no reason for me to stay here. Since you still have work, go do what you need to do and stop staying here."

He withdrew his gaze from her after he said that and did not give her another look.

Wendy stood at the entrance of the hallway, stunned. It took her a while before she responded.

Seeing Byron look like he did not want to talk to her anymore, she pinched her palm, turned around, and strode away.

She went out, only to see two cleaners having opened the door to Rosalie's room.

Wendy could not help her heart sink before she quickly walked over. "Where's the guest in this room?"

The cleaner said, "They already checked out."

Checked out? These words sounded like thunder in Wendy's ears.

Byron also said he wanted to leave just now. She also thought that Byron's departure was a little too sudden. It turned out... it was because Rosalie was going back! She tried getting the answer from Byron's mouth just now only to hear it from the cleaner. Coming to North City for business all of a sudden, staying in this kind of hotel, coincidentally staying next door to Rosalie, and then immediately getting Luther to buy flight tickets after Rosalie left... It was because he was following Rosalie! Wendy felt everything in front of her go black. The shock in her heart did not subside for a long time. Although she had had this speculation for a long time, she still could not accept it even after personally proving it! Wendy finally returned to her senses after some time. She immediately fished out her phone and looked at the flight schedules returning to Coast City

Based on the time Rosalie and Byron left the hotel, they likely bought the earliest flight ticket.

It was just that the seats for the earliest flight were already all booked when she opened the web page. The fury on Wendy's face intensified. She gritted her teeth and shoved her phone back.

The door to Byron's room slowly opened, and the man walked out with deliberate steps.

Wendy opened her mouth, wanting to say something. At the other end, Byron looked up and glanced over, but it was like he had not seen her. He quickly withdrew his gaze apathetically. Wendy said nothing until the point both his and Luther's figures entered the elevator.
