

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 25 –

Chapter 25 Why Is It You!

call off the engagement, did it have something to do with Rosalie? Did he...already know about Rosalie's return? More so, had they already met? Wendy felt increasingly uneasy when she thought about it. Looking at Rosalie in front of her, her expression clouded over. Compared to her, Rosalie's expression was much calmer, as if she was meeting Wendy for the first time.

Expression distant, she parted her lips and asked straightforwardly, "President Fuller, do you want to proceed to discuss our contract?" Hearing her voice, Wendy shoved her thoughts away and looked at her for a few seconds. Her expression was slightly cold, and her gaze was somewhat amused. "Of course, Dr. Graham had been working hard with us for so long for this contract. Naturally, I won't let his efforts be wasted."

Then, she called the waiter and ordered four more cups of coffee. Between their coffee breaks, Wendy's gaze roamed Rosalie slightly gloomily.

Rosalie had changed a lot in the past six years, although she was unwilling to admit it. She was different from how she used to be, timid. Now, her just sitting there made it seem like she was showing off, her beauty and imposing manner almost overwhelmed her.

As for her!

Six years had passed, and she had not changed the slightest. She now had lesser hope for the person she was so close to having. Realizing this, Wendy's hands that were under the table clenched tightly into fists as she filled with jealousy. "I would really like to cooperate with your research institute, but I don't think the price we discussed before is very appropriate. Since the person in charge, Dr. Jacobs just so happens to be here, I hope we can discuss the price again." Wendy put on a professional smile, but her eyes were filled with coldness. Hearing this, Yves was about to answer when Rosalie interrupted him and asked back coldly, "President Fuller means to say...?" "I hope to increase the original price by two points." Wendy answered coldly.

Chapter 26 She Can't Wait Any Longer "Increase by two points?"

Yves was stunned. "President Fuller, did we not already settle this before? Why do you wish to increase the price suddenly now that we're about to sign the partnership?" Seeing his surprised appearance, Wendy crossed her legs comfortably and said in a leisurely voice, "Indeed, we had agreed prior, but the prices in the medicinal materials market have overall gone up this year. If we signed the contract with you with the originally agreed-upon price, we will lose too much. I hope Dr. Graham understands."

This was said in a sanctimonious manner.

Yves's expression froze slightly. He wanted to say something, but Rosalie stopped him. "I think Miss Fuller had a sudden urge to raise the prices because she saw me. I know the prices in the medicinal materials market like the back of my hand. If you want to raise prices, we can discuss it but it's unreasonable to raise it by two points at this time." Rosalie wanted to be professional but the other obviously wanted to make things difficult. She had no need to tolerate it either.

Hearing this, Wendy frowned unhappily and said coldly, "No matter the reason, we are now at this price. If you find it inappropriate, our family will be just fine without your business."

"In that case, today would have been for nothing. Even if we cooperated with a flip-flopping company like Fuller Industries, we would not feel at ease," replied Rosalie coldly. With that, Rosalie stood up and said to Yves, "Let's go." Yves nodded and the two left the coffee shop. "Do you have some history with Wendy Fuller?" Yves could not help asking after they left. He could feel Wendy's hostility toward Rosalie clearly when they were discussing their partnership just now.

Rosalie did not want to recall what happened back in those years and simply replied, "I suppose so."

Seeing that she did not want to talk about it anymore, Yves ceased his questioning. Instead, he talked about the matter with the medicinal material supplier. "We will have to look for a new supplier again if we aren't going to sign with Fuller Industries." Rosalie nodded. "And we'll do that, Coast City is huge. Besides Fuller, there are always other suppliers who are willing to sign with us."

"Alright." Yves smiled and nodded.

He was more unwilling to see Rosalie targeted than to look for another medicinal material supplier again.
