

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 264

I Thought You Were All A Family Byron frowned. No matter which way he used it, he just could not figure out how to properly utilize this thing in his hands.

Just as he was starting to feel annoyed, he noticed that a pair of eyes were looking at him softly.

He looked up, and his eyes met Rosalie's smiling ones.

When their eyes met, Rosalie immediately withdrew her gaze, and her expression became neutral again.

Seeing this, Byron frowned, but the annoyance in his heart dissipated. He turned his head to a staff member and said, "I'm not really used to using this thing. Could you please show me how to use it?"

The staff member had been watching from the sidelines for a while now. Although the man looked tall and strong, his posture was as stiff as ever when using the shovel. The staff member had wanted to tell him that he was doing it wrong, but the man gave off a somewhat distinguished vibe. When not talking, he exuded an aloof aura that made him difficult to approach. The staff member had tried speaking up several times, but their courage would dissipate before their words could leave their mouths. They ended up just watching silently from a distance.

Therefore, when they saw the man actually taking the initiative to ask them for help, they hurried over to give Byron a demonstration.

Byron observed the other's posture and realized how ridiculous he must have looked as he remembered his own posture.

After learning how to properly use a shovel, their progress became much faster.

With the five of them working together, they finished planting the first sapling. They coordinated with each other amazingly as they worked on the next one.

The three kids were also slowly letting loose, occasionally saying something to Rosalie that made her laugh lightly.

Byron watched them intently as he worked.

Seeing them being so happy and joyous together, the staff member could not help asking, "Pardon me, but are you all a family?"

Rosalie and Byron both froze at those words,

Just as Rosalie was about to explain, Byron spoke up before her, "Why do you ask that?"

Hearing the man's words, Rosalie frowned slightly, feeling a little displeased.

Not only did he not deny the staff member's question, but that response would also make others think that there was something going on between the two of them.

The staff member did not think too much about it and said, "Watching you all together makes me think that you all look like a family. Besides, all three children look alike. They all look like both of you."

As soon as the staff member said that, the displeasure in Rosalie's heart instantly transformed into caution.

Although she very much wanted to hide it, she could not deny that Lucian's and Nox's eyebrows did indeed look somewhat similar to Byron's. It was just that they were still young, so it was not that obvious. Byron himself had not noticed it yet.

She was afraid that due to this staff member's words, Byron would start taking notice of this and end up discovering the truth about the twins.

With the slight raise of an eyebrow, Byron looked down at the three kids and saw that their eyebrows were indeed somewhat similar. However, he did not give it much thought.

After all, all three of them were Rosalie's children, so there was nothing wrong with them looking like their mother. Seeing that the man did not deny it, the staff member could not help sighing as they said, ". Your family has such a good relationship."

Byron still did not refute the statement.

Rosalie pulled herself out of her worried thoughts and calmly explained to the staff member, "You've misunderstood. We're not a family. Our children just have a good relationship with each other, so we ended up forming a team at the last minute."

Hearing her denial, the staff member looked a little surprised. After being dumbfounded for a few seconds, they apologized embarrassingly, "Is that so? My apologies for assuming. It was just that seeing the great atmosphere you all have together, in addition to the children being so intimate with this young lady, it made me think that you were all a family..." Rosalie gave the staff member a tight smile. "It's alright. Anyway, the misunderstanding has been cleared."

The staff member nodded quickly. At one side, Byron looked at the top of Rosalie's head with an intent gaze.
