Chapter 31 Deliberately Targeted Her

Certificates can be bought, but not medical skills! Do I have the ability? Whether or not I have the ability, you'll know once I've examined Old Master Quirke, won't you, President Lawrence?

The atmosphere between the two was obviously not harmonious. It was even a little tense. Andrius could not help finding this strange. Looking at them, could they know one another? After all, this person beside him would not get targeted just by anyone. "Do you two know each other?" Andrea asked directly.

There was practically no hesitation in Rosalie's answer. "No, we don't! Why would I know the high-flying President Lawrence?!"

With that, she turned to look at Andrius. "Mr. Quirke, I made the trip here specially today to treat Old Master Quirke. If possible, would it be convenient for me to go up and take a look at Elder Quirke's condition?"

Rosalie tried avoiding confronting Byron. Andrius did not react at once to her change of conversation topic. Rosalie's expression was even more serious. "I'm a doctor. I just want to know about Old Master Quirke's situation today. Even if I can't cure him, I won't hurt him either. Please let me go up and have a look. If I can cure him, Old Master Quirke will have a lifeline. If I can't, I'll immediately have the self-awareness to leave and not interfere again!"

She dared not tarry. She immediately held the old man's wrist after her observation and felt his pulse carefully.

Andrius was stunned when he saw her actions.

He looked at the woman's stance, not expecting her to be a holistic doctor. Moreover, with respect to the old master's condition, she simply just felt his pulse. However, they had invited many holistic and Western doctors during this period of time to cure the old man's disease. They had seen various techniques.

Seeing Rosalie's actions at present, he was only surprised for a bit but said nothing at all.

Sitting beside the hospital bed, Rosalie was holding onto the old master's hand in one hand and his wrist in the other. Her features were downcast as she devoted herself entirely to the old master's pulse. It was just that the more she observed his pulse, the more alarmed she was. She had initially thought that the symptoms that Yves described to her were serious enough. She did not expect Old Master Quirke's actual situation to be much more critical than he had described!

When she was feeling his pulse, she had also noticed that the old master's breath was very weak. It could even be said that he was on his last breath!

After a moment, Rosalie let go of the old master's hand with a solemn expression. She got up and walked to Andrius and the others. "Dr. Jacobs, did you find anything? How is my grandpa? Do you have a diagnosis and treatment?"

This was the first time Andrius saw such a reaction from a doctor who was treating the old master. There was some hope in his gaze.

Rosalie frowned. In a questioning tone, she asked, "The old master's condition is critical. Why didn't you send him to the hospital? He's practically dying yet you're leaving him at home?"

expression, "I'm just stating facts. It isn't up to me whether or not they're futile. The fact remains in front of us, and everyone should have no illusions about it."

"You!" Andrea did not expect Rosalie to be so sharp-tongued and was so mad that she wanted to continue arguing. At one side, Andrius saw the two suddenly at gunpoint. He frowned and glanced at his sister. Andrea reluctantly closed her mouth when she met his gaze.

"Dr. Jacobs, I apologize for my sister. I don't care about the previous treatments now. I just want to know whether you're confident. If you are, please start treatment as soon as possible. Is that alright? After all, you said that my grandfather's current situation can't be delayed any longer."

Andrius turned to look at Rosalie earnestly after schooling his sister. To the side, Andrea was enigmatical. "That's right. Aren't you so capable? Can we trouble you to hurry up with treatment, then? I'm actually very curious about your ability." Rosalie pretended to not have heard her provocation. She turned back to the sickbed and said to them, "I'm going to start treatment now. Please help me remove the old master's clothes."

Chapter 34 Bumping Into His Arms Hearing this, they were a little stunned.

They had seen many famous doctors trying to treat the old master, but they never had someone request to take off the old master's clothes.

Andrius reacted first and asked cautiously, "Do you have to do this?" Rosalie glanced at him inexplicably. "I want to treat the old master, and clothes get in the way. Which one of you will be helping me? May I trouble you to hurry up." For a moment, everyone in the room, including the medical team from before, looked at each other.

What kind of treatment required them to remove the patient's clothes?

Andrius hesitated for a bit before gritting his teeth and striding over.

Seeing her brother compromise, Andrea was anxious. "What kind of treatment is this? Why..."

She had just spoken halfway when Rosalie opened the medicine box she carried with her and took out a rustic, wooden box. In it was an object that looked similar to a scroll. Unfurling it, there were hundreds of silver needles, large and small, placed neatly in it.

Andrea was shocked by what was in front of her and choked on what she had wanted to say.

Rosalie carefully took out the silver needle she needed and disinfected them with alcohol. She did not register Andrea's words at all. They just went in from one ear before being thrown to the back of her mind in a blink of an eye.

In front of her, Andrius struggled to half-pull up the old master to lean against him. He stabilized the old man's body with one hand and took off his clothes with the other. The old man was not conscious at all now, much less able to offer any cooperation.

Andrius' job was even more taxing because of this. Byron watched Rosalie who was sitting beside the hospital fixedly as she went through a series of actions. His gaze gradually deepened. Seeing Andrius struggle, he put Estie down on the floor and said to her, "Daddy is going to go help Uncle Andrius. Be good and don't run around." Estie nodded obediently. She watched longingly as her daddy shuffled through the group and stood beside the bed. Without saying anything, he began helping Uncle Andy remove Old Man Quirke's clothes.

"Thank you, Byron."

Andrius glanced at him gratefully. Byron nodded his head silently.

Rosalie also sensed that Byron had appeared by the bed and was shocked for a moment. She quickly calmed down and focused on the silver needle in her hand. Soon, the old master's clothes had been completely removed. His body, which was mainly bones wrapped in skin, was revealed to the crowd. Rosalie had anticipated this and instructed the two in a deep voice, "Hold him steady. I'm going to start putting the needles in." Andrius nodded gravely. Rosalie glanced at him. Seeing that there was no reaction from him nor did he say anything, she took a deep breath and began to cautiously pierce the needles into the old master. A yell came from the room when the first needle went in. "What are you doing? How can you just prick this acupoint?" It was Andrea who spoke.. She came from a medical family. Although she was not familiar with acupuncture, she could tell that the spot where Rosalie had inserted a needle was very dangerous. There was a possibility of ordinary people dying from this, much less an old man whose body was weak at this time.

Andrea's expression tightened. She was rattled and angry. "If you don't know anything, don't mess around! Just what are you doing now? Are you trying to kill my grandpa?!"

With that, she violently shoved Rosalie.

Rosalie had heard her query but since she was pondering the position of the second needle, she did not take her seriously. She did not, however, expect Andrea to suddenly rush over. Pushed by her, Rosalie was caught off-guard. The impact on her body made her tumble sideways unsteadily. She ended up practically bumping into Byron's arms.

Chapter 35 Apologize To Her Before Rosalie even reacted, she felt herself being supported by her waist, which barely stabilized her.

The moment she looked up, she met Byron's dark gaze.

With their gazes catching one another, Rosalie's body stiffened slightly. She then quickly looked away and sat back properly with the help of the bed.

Byron supported her subconsciously. Seeing her at that moment, she was like a beast of the depths, trying so hard to avoid him. His gaze suddenly sank. He immediately retracted the large hand that he had placed on her waist just now.

"You dare say you've studied various complex diseases? Is this the outcome of your research? Looks to me like you practically bought those certificates!"

Andrea did not seem to have noticed the strangeness between them at all as she remained on her warpath. She looked at Andrius angrily. "Brother, I think she's a complete fraud! Get rid of her quickly!"

Hearing this, Rosalie retracted her thoughts from the abnormality just now and sarcastically said, "No wonder Old Master Quirke became like this. It turns out someone has been deliberately preventing the old master from getting treatment. Since Miss Quirke insists so, fine. You can take it as though I wasn't here today." i

With that, she got up and put the silver needles back into the needle bag one by one.

She had been treating the old master with such persistence just now that no one expected that she would so decisively leave now.

Andrius was stunned for a few seconds before he came back to his senses. He hurriedly said, "Dr. Jacobs, I'm really sorry. To tell you the truth, our family is a medical family. We have some humble opinions about acupuncture. The reason why my sister is so angry is likely that she found the acupoint that you engaged a little dangerous, so she was just worried about our grandpa. Please don't bother yourself with the likes of her."

Rosalie continued packing without even looking up. "I have no need to remain here, suffering the ire of some ignorant individual. I came here in earnest to treat the old master, but since Miss Quirke is unable to bring herself to trust me, so be it!" Andrius was anxious now. He carefully positioned the old master, got up, and chased her, "Dr. Jacobs, if there's an issue, we can discuss it. My sister really does talk too much. I'll have her apologize to you in person now. Please continue to treat my grandfather." "No need. I can't possibly accept Miss Quirke's apology." Rosalie's tone was cold. Byron was standing by the sickbed, frowning slightly as he watched Rosalie's back.

He could sense that the woman was furious.

On one side, Estie also saw that the beautiful lady was unhappy. Some anxiety welled in her eyes.

Chapter 35 Apologize To Her

She had not had the time to say hello to the beautiful lady yet she was already leaving after getting pissed off...

Thinking of this, Estie, who rarely lost her temper, got angry. She walked over with her short legs. Picking up her little book, she angrily wrote a few words on it and then held it up in front of Andrea

Many of them noticed the little girl who had suddenly appeared. Their gazes were pulled to the large words in her notebook.

[Apologize!]

Estie looked at Andrea with her big eyes expectantly.

Seeing this, Andrea was, for a moment, somewhat embarrassed. Her gaze drifted for a moment as she pretended not to see Estie. She turned to her brother and said, "Brother, if it doesn't work out, we'll just look for another doctor. I really can't trust this person."

Seeing that she was still being bull-headed, Rosalie's expression became colder as she said to Andrea sarcastically, "Then, I hope you're able to find a doctor to your satisfaction before Old Master Quirke heaves his last breath."

With that, she turned to leave. Just as she took her first step, someone grabbed her wrist. Rosalie frowned slightly and turned to look unhappily. Byron's handsome but expressionless face ended up appearing before her eyes. Rosalie was filled with stunned. What... What was the meaning of this?

Byron just glanced at her. He then clutched her wrist and turned sideways to look at Andrea coldly. "Apologize." Suddenly hearing Byron say that, Andrea was instantly dumbfounded. "Byron, what are you talking about?" Byron looked at her commandingly with a full sense of oppression. "Old Man Quirke is in critical condition now. If there's someone else who can save him, that person would long have appeared when you invited famous doctors locally and abroad. But that's not the case." Taking in his imposing manner, Andrea lowered her head with inexplicable nervousness. "She..."

Byron paused, glancing vaguely at the people behind him. He continued, "Miss Jacobs is not related to the Quirke family and came specifically to treat Old Man Quirke. If you can't trust her, fine. But there is no reason to lay a hand on her. Is this what the Quirke family taught you? Apologize to her immediately!" Seeing this scene, Andrius was also a little stupefied. He could not believe his eyes. Were his eyes deceiving him? Was Byron actually speaking up for a woman who was a stranger to him?

However, it was indeed excusable. After all, his sister had been making a fuss about getting rid of Dr. Jacobs from the beginning and had even struck her all of a sudden.

Andrius did not expect her to be too hasty today either.

Seeing Byron lecture her, his expression also sank. He said to Andrea, "Andrea, Byron is right. Apologize to Dr. Jacobs immediately! No matter how anxious you are, you shouldn't have acted against Dr. Jacobs! You were too impulsive!"

Andrea gritted her teeth and looked at the people in front of her.

Byron was protecting the woman behind him and making her apologize without allowing her to say anything. Her brother had also spoken for that woman. Even Estie had held up her notebook and asked her to apologize! For a moment, she had no other choice!

After gritting her teeth for a long time, Andrea reluctantly lowered her head. "I apologize, Dr. Jacobs. I was indeed impulsive. I apologize. I shouldn't have struck you."

Her apology was very stilted.

Rosalie did not even want to bother herself with it. At the same time, she was looking at the man in front of her absent-mindedly.

What on earth was he thinking?

Chapter 36 Can't Read This Man

Why did he help her at this time? Before treating the old master, it was this man who had embarrassed her, but it was also this man who came forward to help her when she was treating the old master. This time, she was called into question and it was still him who came forward to speak for her. Rosalie realized that she truly could not read the man... “Dr. Jacobs, Andrea already knows that she’s in the wrong. I don’t expect you to forgive her so soon, but as you said, my grandfather’s situation is very urgent. Can you treat him first and we can discuss in detail afterward how to make amends if you wish?”

Andrius’ voice sounded in her ear.

Although Rosalie was still somewhat angry, hearing his words, she thought of the situation with the research institute and suppressed her dissatisfaction.

Moreover, Andrius was right. The old man was innocent. He was just a patient in urgent need of medical treatment. Thinking of this, Rosalie calmed down. She glanced at the people in the room and said coldly, “I don’t want irrelevant people disturbing the next treatment.” Andrea was about to say that she was a family member when she heard Rosalie say, “Including Miss Quirke.”

Hearing the words, Andrea’s expression turned rather unsightly. Andrius immediately agreed and asked everyone else to withdraw. Only he and Byron, along with Estie who could not bear to be away from her daddy, were left in the room. With this, Rosalie sat down beside the sickbed again.

Chapter 37 Getting Close For The First Time This time, without being disturbed by anyone, Rosalie went through the treatment process much more smoothly.

Soon, there were 10 silver needles inserted in the front of the old master’s head.

Rosalie practically did not blink during the process as she devoted herself to the old master’s treatment intently. Byron had already looked through Rosalie’s experience from these past years back when they were downstairs. It was beautifully impeccable. One could imagine how exciting her life had been in the past six years. This was still, however, the first time that he saw her like this. For the first time, he saw her concentration when she was practicing medicine and her toughness when addressing her profession. These were not things he had seen on Rosalie before. Seeing these today, Byron’s emotions were somewhat difficult to put into words. To one side, Andrius had been observing the positions of Rosalie’s needles as well as her expression when she put them in. With the dozens of silver needles positioned, he was pleasantly surprised to realize that this doctor might actually be able to save the old master!

When she inserted the first needle, Andrius thought the same as everyone present. He thought that it was absurd.

However, recalling Rosalie's expression when she put in the needle at that time, there was an inexplicable feeling that she could be trusted.

Hence, Andrius insisted on letting her remain.

At present, watching Rosalie's unhurried appearance and her skillful and sophisticated skills when inserting every needle, he affirmed that she was somewhat of a real deal!

Moreover, he noticed that Rosalie's needles were almost all in very dangerous places. If there was even the slightest mistake, not only would their previous efforts be wasted, but the old master might even lose his life!

He believed that Rosalie likely would not have the balls to risk the old master's life.

In other words, her research on acupuncture and acupoints was really rock-solid! Thinking of this, Andrius was happy while simultaneously feeling admiration for Rosalie from the bottom of his heart.

It looked like the woman was younger than him, yet she already possessed such great ability and should not be taken lightly. There was silence in the room.

Chapter 38 This Woman Was Married? Rosalie could not help but be slightly startled. After a moment, she looked at Byron with some apprehension. She did not confess about the time Estie had gone missing back then. However, she likely could not hide from this man. Thinking of this, Rosalie said hesitantly, "It's probably because... I've helped her before. I picked her up when she got lost the last time."

Andrius had not expected this. He looked at Estie, then at Rosalie. He lamented, "You two sure are destined."

Were they?

Thinking of Estie's identity, Rosalie's lower lip tugged with self-mockery before she looked up with a calm expression again. "Perhaps." Andrius did not notice the abnormality from her either as he got up and suggested, "Since my grandpa needs another hour, why don't we wait downstairs and have some drinks? You've worked hard, Dr. Jacobs."

Seeing that he changed the topic, Rosalie was inexplicably relieved and agreed noncommittally.

Answering through action, Byron immediately rounded the back of the sickbed and left. He was about to pick up Estie but noticed that the little girl had no intention of looking for him. Estie had stayed by Rosalie's side the entire time after she handed her the handkerchief. When she heard that they were going downstairs, she reached out without thinking, wanting to hold the hand of the beautiful lady.

The pretty lady had held her hand just like this the last time they met.

Just when their hands were about to touch, the ringing of a mobile phone sounded in the room. Rosalie turned around and shuffled through her bag for her mobile phone while the fingertips that were about to touch Estie's hand slipped away. Estie had finally summoned her courage to reach her hand out only to be met with emptiness. She blinked somewhat belatedly as an expression of loss appeared on her face slowly. Gaze falling, she played with her fingers.

This scene was caught by Byron's gaze. He saw their hands miss each other, and his eyes dimmed slightly. Rosalie grabbed her mobile phone and looked at the caller ID. It was a call from Mary.

She had left the two little ones with her best friend tonight because she needed to come to the Quirke household for an appointment.

Seeing her call, Rosalie thought that something had happened to them and hurriedly answered the call.

Chapter 39

Their Relationship Is Unusual Rosalie left the room. Lowering her voice carefully, she said to the two little ones on the other end, "Be good. Mommy is still treating a patient and will go back a little later. You can play with your godmother first."

The two were already used to their mommy coming home late because of work, so they agreed to what she said obediently.

Meanwhile, in the room.

The expression on Byron's face was so cold it was practically freezing over, but anger surged in his heart. Estie's empty hand and the yell of 'Mommy' that came from the phone appeared in his mind repeatedly.

No wonder she had been so cold when she saw Estie.

It turned out that this woman was already married and even had children with another man! That was why she abandoned the child all those years! He looked down at his daughter who was still standing there. The little girl could not hide the look of loss on her face. When she saw the woman head out, she still looked up and stared at the door longingly, waiting for her to come back. This scene stung his heart even more. So what if she came back? That woman still would not want her child! Byron's eyes were frighteningly dark. He strode over to Estie's side, crouched down, and picked her up.

Estie looked at her father blankly, tugging at his collar to indicate that she did not want to be held by him.

Byron pretended not to have noticed. He said to Andrius in a cold voice, "It's getting late. I'll be bringing Estie back home first. If Old Man Quirke wakes up, tell him I'll see him another day."

With that, he strode away with Estie in his arms before Andrius could even answer. Rosalie had just ended her call and was about to head back in. The moment she got to the door, she saw the man exit from inside expressionlessly. Rosalie's heart constricted. She was thinking about how to respond, but the man strode past her as if he had not seen her.

Seeing his figure leaving indifferently, Rosalie could not help feeling slightly stunned. When she came to, her heart was filled with self-mockery.

It seemed like the man did not even acknowledge the phone call just now.

Chapter 40

Never Wanted To Meet Her When Byron saw this, his expression became even more sullen. "What do you have to say to her? It's best to pretend that you don't know her and not have any contact with her when you meet her in the future." Since the woman had no intentions of acknowledging her daughter, he simply was doing what she wanted!

Estie got frightened by her daddy's tone. She was stunned for a few seconds before she reluctantly frowned and wrote in her little notebook: (why?)

without waiting for Byron to answer, she quickly added: (I like the lady very much. She's very kind and gentle to me. I want to be with her!)

The little girl's straightforward liking distressed Byron, but she had to face the truth. With a blank expression, he said, "That's because she already has her own children. She doesn't need another child." Hearing this, Estie's eyes were filled with confusion. She knew about the two brothers, but the beautiful lady still treated her very well.

Her daddy, however, seemed to hate her.

Seeing the little girl quiet down, Byron informed his assistant to start the car. They left the Quirke family's manor. On the road, he felt the corners of his clothes being tugged twice again.

Byron frowned and looked over. [Then, where did my mommy go?] Estie looked at him somewhat aggrievedly, her big eyes filled with confusion. The beautiful lady was the mother of the two brothers, so she could not get close to the beautiful lady.

What about her mommy, then?

These words stung Byron's eyes hard. He looked away, stricken. For a moment, he did not know how to answer her.

Estie was asking him where her mommy was.

He knew the answer.

However, could he divulge to her this cruel fact? That woman already had a new family. Even if her biological daughter was right before her eyes, she had no intention of getting to know her... The more Byron pondered, the uglier his expression became. After a long time, he still said nothing
