

My Ex-Wife and Kids Came In Like A Wrecking Ball Chapter 320

Rosalie had no idea that her illness had left such a deep impression on the boys. For a moment, she was lost for words.

Now that she thought about it, she had been the one raising the boys since they were born.

She was a superhero to them, taking care of them and making sure they were safe.

They had never seen her fall so ill before.

It was no wonder they were terrified.

Rosalie was silent for a long time before she bent down to pat their heads, she could not describe how she felt right now. "Thank you for worrying about me, sweethearts. Since you're afraid I'll catch a cold, rn just watch you from the shore. I won't join you in the water."

The boys exchanged a look and hesitated for a few seconds before nodding obediently.

Rosalie smiled, comforted by their concern, she then helped them pack their things and drove them to the aquatic center.

She figured they would come again often, so she registered as a member at the counter.

As expected of a pool in such an affluent neighborhood, the place was pleasant and spacious.

Even though it was the weekend and there were a lot of people around, it did not feel crowded. The water was crystal clear too.

The pool was divided into the adult's and children's sections. Since the boys were quite good at swimming now and the pools overseas did not discriminate between adults and kids, Rosalie let them swim in the adult pool.

Everyone's eyes were drawn to the two charming little boys jumping into the pool.

When they saw how well the boys could swim, they were astounded.

Rosalie sat next to the pool calmly. She ordered some snacks and drinks, enjoying them as she kept an eye on the boys.

She did not plan to swim, but she was at the pool, so she had changed into her swimwear. It was not very revealing, but it still showed off her great figure.

Oblivious to her own charms, she relaxed in her seat and crossed her long legs, smiling as she watched the boys in the pool.

Her attention was completely fixed on them, so she was taken by surprise when a sleazy man's voice called out to her. "Hello, beautiful. May I get to know you better?"

Rosalie was taken off-guard. When she returned to her senses, she instinctively appraised the man next to her.

He was only wearing a pair of swimming trunks. His figure was decent, but his expression could only be described as sleazy.

When he sensed her gaze on him, he even shamelessly struck a few poses. "I'm a trainer at the gym over there. If you're interested, I can give you a few tips."

Rosalie gave him a polite smile. "Thanks, but I'm not too interested."

The man looked at her long fair legs and almost drooled. He persisted, saying, "If you're not interested in that, I can also..."

Before he could complete that sentence, a childish voice interrupted him.

"Stay away from our Mommy!"

When the two boys saw a man hovering over their mother, they clambered right out of the pool and ran over to Rosalie's side. Now they were glaring at the man, even though he was so much taller than them.

The man's expression shifted when he saw the boys. "You have children?"

Rosalie instinctively moved to get up and shield the boys with her body, but they stubbornly stood in front of her.

The man looked the boys up and down before turning back to Rosalie. "Well, I don't mind. If you're interested..."

His words made her frown.